ONLY HUNS NOW SOUTH OF MARNE DEAD OR PRISONERS.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 20.—One American unit, since Thursday, has taken 2889 prisoners, including 91 officers, while another American unit on the northern front has captured 2261, including 32 officers. Despite stiffening resistance shown by German forces, the Franco-American troops are holding every foot gained between Soissons and Chateau Thierry.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 20.—The French and Americans today squeezed somewhat tighter the sack in which the Germans appear to be caught. At midday they had made an average gain of more than a mile along the Chateau Thierry-Soissons line, while another gain of a similar distance had been made and the Marne and east of Chateau Thierry.

The small villages between the Marne and the Aisne rivers have been destroyed by bombardments during the recent fighting. This photograph was taken of a detachment of the Forty-second Division which had recaptured the village from the Germans and was snatching a well-deserved rest under the iron shelters available.

Franco-American Troops Take More than Twenty Thousand Prisoners, Four Hundred Guns; Life in Rheims-Soissons Pocket Made Miserable for Enemy.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 20.—"No Germans remain south of the Marne except prisoners and dead." This message was sent by the Reuter correspondent at French headquarters and is timed Saturday evening.

PARIS, July 20.—"The Germans, violently attacked on their right flank and south of the Marne," says the War Office announcement tonight, "have been compelled to retreat and recross the river.

"The French hold the entire southern bank of the Marne. More than 20,000 prisoners and more than 400 guns have been captured."

LONDON, July 20.—The Germans are being compelled to yield gradually on both sides of the deep pocket of which Soissons and Rheims mark the edges. Life in this pocket is made miserable for the Germans by long-range guns and airplane bombers.

Up to mid-afternoon there was no indication of the voluntary withdrawal of the Germans from the pocket. The enemy was reported putting up a stubborn resistance everywhere. The French, however, were doing terrible execution on the Germans all along the fifty-mile circumference of the loop.

The Allied gains on the front of the Aisne-Marne offensive have been further extended along the line between Montaigne de Paris, a mile and a half southwest of Soissons, on the north to Belleau, five miles northwest of Chateau Thierry on the south.

The French have bitten off several square miles of German territory in the vicinity of the River Ourcq, about midway between Chateau Thierry and Soissons, and this afternoon were reported to be holding Mont Chezillon. The present French line in this district is thus seven miles in front of that held before the offensive began.

The situation in this section has been obscure for the last twenty-four hours and bitter fighting has been going on. The French, however, are declared to have established their line definitely and to have cleared the Germans out of the rough country thereabouts.

Latest advices from the field of the Franco-American offensive between the Marne and the Aisne report the Allied line running as follows:

From Belleau northward to the west of Monthiers and on to Sonnelans, Mont Chevillon, the Bois de Lud, Geronemil farm, Le Plessier Huleu, Parcy-Tigny, Villemontoire, Berzy-Le Sec, Courmelles, Montoigne de Paris, Parnant and Fontenoy.

"The Germans on the front south of the Marne have suffered a repulse by the French and are retreating northward across the river," Reuter's correspondent at French headquarters telegraphed this afternoon.

The Allies in their pursuit of the Germans are approaching the banks of the Marne.

Further advances by the French in the field of the German offensive both north and south of the Marne are reported this afternoon.

South of the Marne the French have taken Bois de Misy and reached Part-a-Binson on the river.

North of the Marne the French captured the town of Marfaux, southeast of Bligny, after heavy fighting, and moved forward west of Pourcy.

On the Rheims front the French forces have advanced for a distance of 1000 yards between Souain and Auberive. The French also made slight progress near Pourcy.

The French advanced on an average of one mile on a twenty-mile front between noon yesterday and 9 o'clock last night.

The French line has not been advanced much further toward Soissons, but the front is now very close to the main road opposite Villemontoire, six miles south of Soissons. Villemontoire is an important center for the transport of German troops.

HUNDRED THOUSAND SENT OVER WEEKLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20.—"Country-wide prohibition is inevitable, although Congress probably will not pass such legislation until after the war," Senator Phelan said in an interview here today.

"The sentiment of the country is opposed to the sale of stored whisky and spirits generally, and there will soon be an end of that," Senator Phelan asserted. "I feel sure if any legislation is enacted this year wine growers will be allowed full time to take off and sell their crops."

Seator Phelan told an audience at the Allied war exposition here that 100,000 American troops are being sent to France each week. "During the week submarines destroyed merchant craft off the Atlantic Coast, 140,000 troops were transported safely across the ocean," he said.

OUR LAWYER-SOLDIERS ARE DINED IN LONDON.

LONDON, July 20.—The masters of the bench of the Middle Temple, the oldest legal society in England, gave a dinner last night to American lawyers in England. Most of the 150 American guests were army and navy men, an unusual feature being Americans in uniform, privates and seamen, seated elbow to elbow with the leaders of the British bar.

The rule of no speeches was broken for the first time since the late Joseph H. Choate dined there while Ambassador in London. R. A. McCall, the treasurer, presided and proposed the health of the guests. Maj. White, judge-advocate on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Biddle, commander of the American forces in the United Kingdom, responded. FOCH'S VAST ENCIRCLEMENT SOON MAY POCKET HUN ARMY.

[Undated War Summary by the Associated Press.]

OUT of the news filtering through the clouds of battle hanging over the ensanguined field between the Marne and Soissons there have come two significant reports during the past day. The Allies are thundering at the gates of Soissons, and the Germans are retreating across the Marne between Fossoy and Oeuilly.

HUNS FAIL TO STEM TIDE.

German reserves, rushed up to the western side of the Soissons-Chateau Thierry-Rheims salient, have slowed down the progress made by the French and Americans, but have apparently been unable to do more than check it here and there along the front. The advance made by the Allies in the first hours of the great counter-stroke has not been maintained, but it is evident that hardly anywhere has the Allied thrust been stopped.

ALLIES CLOSE TO SOISSONS.

Reports from the front of battle indicate that the French and Americans have reached the edge of the plateau to the southwest of Soissons and only a scant mile and a half from the center of the city. Southward, along the line, the Allies have almost reached the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road, a thoroughfare of great strategic importance, while farther down toward the Marne they are steadily forging ahead, in spite of determined resistance.

FOE PROBABLY ORDERED BACK.

The reports of a German retreat across the Marne come as confirmation of the success of the Allied drive far to the north. German forces south of the stream must be extricated quickly if the German army is to escape from the encircling movement carried out by the French and Americans. French reports state that the Germans are being driven back south of the Marne, but it is probable that the German retirement is a hurried retreat ordered by the German high command. It appears likely that the French are merely maintaining steady pressure against the enemy and hurrying his retreat as much as possible.

GENERAL RETIREMENT LOOMS.

From the Marne toward Rheims the French and Italians have advanced their lines. Three days ago they were being forced back by the Germans, and their present movement may indicate that the foe also is retiring from this field as rapidly as possible.

The fire of battle is spreading slowly down the line toward Chateau Thierry. There have been reports that the Germans in this region have been removing their heavy guns, preparatory to retiring should the Allied drive toward Soissons go on.

Military experts say that if the Allied wedge south of Soissons goes much farther it will force a German retirement at least as far as the Vesle River.

DEATH OF BROTHER, QUENTIN, CONFIRMED BY GERMAN AVIATORS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—No official announcement that Lieut. Roosevelt has been killed has been received at the War Department. The only announcement from Gen. Pershing was the listing of the lieutenant in today's casualty list, as missing.

OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) July 20.—Maj. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., has been slightly wounded and taken to a hospital in Paris, according to a cable message received tonight by his father, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, from his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

The telegram was sent from Paris, where Mrs. Roosevelt is in a Red Cross hospital. It read: "Ted wounded. Not seriously. Here with me. Not any danger. No cause for anxiety."

Maj. Roosevelt was cited for gallantry after having been gassed about three weeks ago.

The news of Maj. Roosevelt having been wounded followed immediately the report from Paris that German aviators had dropped a note behind the Allied lines confirming fears of the death of Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt in an aerial engagement.

Capt. Archie Roosevelt is recovering from wounds.

Kermit, a fourth son, who served as a captain in the British army in Mesopotamia, was recently appointed a captain in the United States Army and is now reported on his way to France. He was decorated by the British with the military cross for gallantry.

MILITARY SITUATION.

BY J. B. W. GARDNER,
War Expert of New York Times.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—The week was ushered in by a renewal of the series of German offensives in France. The front under attack at this time was about fifty miles, extending from Chateau Thierry on the Marne to Massiges, just west of the Argonne Forest. It was practically certain that another offensive would be started soon and there was much speculation as to where it would fall.

The drive began on Monday, the preliminary tactics being exactly the same as those employed in the previous efforts. There was a short but terrific bombardment with mustard gas shells, the territory back of the French lines receiving the most attention in order to lay down a blanket of this heavy gas and so prevent the reserves from coming into action. Then there was the barrage of smaller guns immediately preceding the infantry advance. When the infantry did go forward it had with it the tanks, and the new assortment of war instruments invented by the Germans for use in the first offensive.

HALF MILLION MEN.

The front of attack was about fifty miles long and about a half million men, or ten thousand to the mile, were used in the attack, two men in the front line for every man in the reserve. The attack was of uniform intensity over the entire line except north of Rheims, where but little effort was exerted.

In the Champagne sector, in fact, for the entire distance from Rheims to Massigny, the Germans were unable to make the slightest headway. From the very outset they were defeated on this section of the fighting front. The fighting here then gradually died away as far west as Prunay, which is southeast of Rheims. Before Prunay the Germans delivered their heaviest blows on this section of the line.

Their object then was merely Rheims. The more ambitious plan had apparently collapsed, Master of Air.

BRITAIN'S NEW AIRPLANE FLIES ABOVE GUN RANGE.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright.]

LONDON, July 20.—The Chronicle says it is stated the Royal Air Force will soon have swarms of a new type of machine at the battle front which is likely to add greatly to the difficulties of the Germans. This machine is a brilliant example of the constructor's art, capable of carrying with the pilot and observer a great weight of bombs, machine guns and other equipment to over 20,000 feet and in an extraordinarily short time.

Soaring above the average range of guns and German airmen, it can cross the fighting lines and drop bombs and return home swiftly for a new load. So fast is it even at great altitudes that long distances can be accomplished in the shortest period, and bombing raids which with the older type of machine would perhaps need whole days of preparation will now be carried out within a couple of hours.

Moreover, what is of the utmost importance, their engines are completely reliable and the risk that they might fail when hundreds of miles over the enemy lines no longer exists. It says much for the supreme value that so far not one of this type has been brought down in spite of the Huns' utmost efforts. When the weather will not permit high flying, these machines will fly low, and so great is their speed that all but the fastest of the modern scouts will be left behind.

Americans in France Insure Foch Enough Men to Gain and Hold Initiative, Says March.

Official Summary.

HUNS' OFFENSIVE POWER PAST HIGH-WATER MARK.

Our Drive Between Aisne and Marne May Start Great Allied Onslaught, Chief of Staff Declares.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The high-water mark of the German offensive in France has been reached. The initiative is passing to the Allied and American armies. Gen. March, Chief of Staff, told this to members of the Senate Military Committee. Later he announced that American troop shipments had now exceeded 1,200,000 men, insuring the man power to hold the initiative on the western front.

The direct objective of Gen. Foch's counter-stroke, Gen. March told newspaper men in his weekly conference, is the railway that feeds the German forces in the Chateau Thierry region. Already it has been attained, for the French and American forces are either astride the line at certain points or have it under direct gunfire at short range, rendering it unusable.

Even as Gen. March spoke, unofficial reports flashed over the cables indicated the German withdrawal from the sector south of the Marne had begun under the threat of Gen. Mangin's attacking army in the enemy's rear. The withdrawal was foreseen by Gen. March when French and American shells began raining on the railway.

The American Chief of Staff told with evident satisfaction of the fact that six American divisions are battling with the French and for the first time revealed their identity. They either are on the advancing lines between Soissons and Chateau Thierry or on those that are pressing the enemy along the Marne front where there is reason to believe the Germans may suffer serious losses in men and material before they reach safety. Still another division of Americans is with Gen. Gouraud, the French leader who commands east of Rheims, where the enemy assault hit against a stone-wall defense.

NEGRO TROOPS IN LINE.

Two regiments of American negro troops also are known to be engaged. One is east of Rheims, where the Americans held the right flank of the whole front of attack when the German assault began, just as the Americans at Chateau Thierry held firm on the left flank. The other is with the attacking forces on the Soissons-Chateau Thierry line.

Gen. March's explanation of the disposition of the American forces indicates that at least 196,000 American fighting troops are in the battle and probably the total force is nearer 300,000 than 200,000. Each division has a fighting strength of 27,000 men and each of the two detached negro regiments a strength of 3600. The full strength of each division with auxiliary units is 45,000 men.

GERMANS STOPPED.

Allied military opinion, Gen. March said, is unanimous that the German offensive movement has been completely stopped.

The War Department has no advices that the city of Soissons has fallen, but it is known to be under a heavy fire from American artillery and its fall seems imminent.

The latest German drive was intended as a "nut-cracker operation" against the city of Rheims, Gen. March said. This drive had been definitely stopped when Gen. Foch struck on the right flank of the German effort, after the enemy had advanced four to five miles on a twenty-three-mile front.

PRISONERS TAKEN.

Official advices confirm the press report that a French corps in which American divisions were operating had captured 17,000 prisoners and guns and material "in very helpful amounts."

Gen. March advised members of the Senate Military Committee at their weekly conference that the Franco-American offensive will continue as long as it is possible to force the Germans back.

Gen. March also told the Senators that the Germans had been preparing for an offensive against the British to the north of the western battle front, to be simultaneous with their last offensive against the Franco-American front.

For some reason, Gen. March stated, the drive against the British was postponed and that is the probable explanation given for the British policy of not attacking the Germans while the French and Americans are engaged in their offensive.

MARCH'S STATEMENT.

Gen. March said: "Since I last talked with you the field of interest has shifted from the Italian and Balkan fronts to our own sector in France. Last Monday, the 15th, the Germans began an attack which covered a sixty-mile front, one-half of which covered the very hilly ground between Chateau Thierry and Rheims; the other half the plain of the Champagne between Rheims and the forest of Argonne.

"In the Champagne district the position which was held largely by American troops, with the assistance of one American division and a regiment of United States colored troops, was penetrated only a short distance at a few points. The Champagne district is under the command of Gen. Gouraud of the French army. Gouraud is one of the most striking personalities in France among the army. He is a man about 50 years of age, as he seemed to me, erect and soldierly. He has been in action all over the world and has on his sleeve five wound stripes. He has lost one arm and a man of less determination and force could never have survived. The French call him 'Tres Soldat'—'Every inch a soldier.' He is a man of such determination and force that in any German drive against his troops his men will be inspired by his presence to die where they are.

GERMAN ADVANCE.

"Along the Marne between Chateau Thierry and Rheims, the Germans made an advance of from four to five miles on a twenty-three-mile front. The terrain at that point is very difficult, wooded hills rising up to a height of from 400 to 500 feet perhaps. This general movement has been brought to a standstill. The object of the entire German attack was not a great strategic object like an advance on Paris or an advance on the English ports. It plainly had for its objective simply the applying of the nut-cracker process on the city of Rheims. If it were possible for them to come in there and squeeze Rheims they could force a surrender in time. Rheims, however, as has been shown, is very well organized for defense. Without going into details, it is organized for house-to-house defense, and that has been the reason why the Germans have not been able to get in.

"As soon as the German advance along the line of the Marne east of Chateau Thierry had been brought to a standstill, Foch struck hard along the western side of the salient. The series of lines you see on the map represents the German advances which produced that salient, day by day, and at the start of this fight which began last Monday, our line was along here (indicating a line running southward from the Aisne to the Marne.)

"The record presents the line I pointed out to you in the larger detailed map, showing former German advances day by day, and our troops held that line when the counter-offensive began. The front over which we advanced was twenty-two miles and the maximum penetration so far reached officially has been to a depth of ten miles, and at the other points indicated to the penetration of seven miles, to which we have gone forward seven miles on a twenty-two-mile front.

"This is the official statement of how far we have gone. The last indication we had in the official reports was that fighting was still in progress and the official reports also indicate the capture of guns and prisoners in very helpful amounts.

"In this advance, and opposing the advance of the Germans, there are seven American divisions and one regiment of colored troops.

"The press has carried during the past few days statements about the number of troops we have continued to send over. It was an estimate made by some person who arrived at his conclusion by assuming that we were sending troops over at the same rate we did last month, and, like many guesses, it is wrong.

1,200,000 OVERSEAS.

"The statement issued in the papers was that we had sent over about 90,000 men last week and that the number was now a little short of 1,200,000. The fact of the matter is that we have passed the 200,000 mark on the second million. We have over 1,200,000 embarked. If you will wait for these things I will tell you the facts; they are always better than when you guess.

"One question asked me has been: 'Will you be good enough to tell us where the Illinois National Guard, which trained at Fort Logan H. Root, is situated in France?' The division is commanded by Gen. George Bell, Jr., and is in the English training sector. A unit from that division took part in the fighting which was reported last week where the Australians made an advance accompanied by American troops, so that the training has progressed to a point where they can actually take part in the fighting.

"Another question is: 'Where is the Seventy-seventh Division, and are they operating as a division?' The Seventy-seventh is in the line near Luneville, and is operating as a division, complete under its own commander.

OVERLOOKED NEW JERSEY.

"In the stenographic account of what I told you about the organization of the three corps, I stated that the Seventy-eighth Division was composed of drafted men from Delaware and New York omitting the State of New Jersey, which furnished a large proportion of that contingent. Almost half the men in that division came from New Jersey."

In answer to questions, Gen. March said:

"Our reports do not indicate that Soissons has fallen. It is under artillery fire. Our troops have come up to the point where they are so close to it that the town must be heavily bombarded, but it is evident the Germans have thrown into the defense of that line a large number of reserves which did not accompany them during the original attack along the Marne, and fighting is going on very heavily at that point.

"The American divisions which are on the front of the large offensive are the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Divisions. The colored regiment belongs to the Ninety-third Division. The other division now in line is the Forty-second. In the immediate path of the German attack and our counter offensive are the seven divisions I have indicated. These divisions are not operating as a corps, but are used wherever it is necessary for us to use them.

"We have nothing to indicate how costly our casualty lists are. No reports on casualties have come in, and we do not know yet what it will cost us.

"I can give no information as to the number of prisoners, because the only reports we have refer to prisoners, which were captured by French corps in which American divisions were operating and no dissociation was made in the reports; but, as far as I can judge, they followed quite closely the newspaper accounts.

"Taking the salient as it stands, one of the prime reasons for making this advance is the position of the railroads. Soissons is connected with Chateau Thierry by railroad and it is assumed that the Germans get part of their supplies at Chateau Thierry from that railroad, and, of course, that has an important bearing on how long these troops can stay there. If the Germans have to withdraw they have practically one line through which they can get out, so Foch is hammering on this side, the western, which is very much better than massing a great number of troops on the nose of the salient and hammering there, which would only drive them back in the direction of the railroads."

In response to a question as to the total number of American troops engaged, Gen. March replied:

"If the whole divisions were there the number of combatant troops would be 27,000 in each division, and in my talks to you you can estimate them at 27,000 per division, unless I tell you otherwise. Including service of supply troops and combatant troops, a division comes to 45,000 men."

GERMANS SEND REPORT OF OUR MEN CAPTURED

LIST OF 125 NAMES IN ENEMY PRISON CAMPS ANNOUNCED BY WAR OFFICE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Names of 125 Americans reported in prison camps by the Prussian War Ministry, were announced today by the War Department. Most of them were captured in the fighting at Seicheprey last April and some have been reported previously from camps other than those in which they are now located.

The list, compiled by the Prussian War Ministry, was received from the American Legation at Berne, Switzerland, having been forwarded by the Spanish Embassy at Berlin. Some of the addresses are incomplete and others apparently erroneous. The list follows, the rank of the prisoners being privates except when designated:

"Lots of Good News."

HAIG'S METEREN VICTORS CHEER REPORTS OF FOCH.

British "Tidbit" Helps Show Turning of Tide in Favor of Allies.

BY PHILIP GIBBS.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

WAR CORRESPONDENTS HEADQUARTERS, July 20.—"There is a lot of good news flying about this morning," said a young officer I met on the road who had just heard of the capture of enemy ground at Meteren and only vaguely then of the magnificent French success between the Marne and the Aisne. I was able to tell him the big number of prisoners and guns and he said "It makes one feel good."

Everywhere the victory of the French was cheered and the success at Meteren, though it is a small thing compared with the immense triumph of Foch and his troops, is a tidbit which adds to the sense of the turning of the tide in our favor. Meteren is only a bit of a town and now has been shot to a heap of ruins, but is full of historical interests for us. It was to Meteren that the German cavalry retreated in October, 1914, when they were chased off Mont Descats after the death of Prince Max of Hesse in the old monastery up there and out of Meteren they were driven back by our glorious old Third Division to the line they held for years on Wytschaete ridge.

METEREN WELL KNOWN.

All our soldiers who fought in Flanders knew Meteren well, passing through it on the way to Bailleul or billeting there in its barns and red brick cottages and drinking thin beer in its old estaminet of "Le Veritable Coucou." From a military point of view today's advance there is useful, as it gave us some good observation of enemy's ground. The Germans did not seem to expect the attack there, as their line was held by a small garrison living wretchedly in the cellars below the ruins which they had organized as dugouts and machine gun emplacements. Our heavy guns pounded above them continually, making the place hellish for them to get in or out and they were not happy.

The attack yesterday morning was made towards Meteren and south of it by British troops including the Scots, while further south the Australians went out hunting in their usual way and with the English lads made the raid. Smoke screens spreading out widely in the wind baffled the enemy as to their object and the garrison of the enemy posts were quickly surrounded by Scotchmen and others.

CAPTURED OR SLAIN.

Sixty of them surrendered and the remainder fought with their machine guns and were annihilated. In addition these sixty men brought back to our lines the Australians made a haul of seventy after crawling out into the tall grass working quite close to the enemy outposts then jumping them under cover of a barrage. Both those minor operations were quick and successful but led to heavy artillery retaliation here and there later in the morning.

One cannot help feeling kind of pitiful admiration for the German troops who are ordered forward to make assaults and when once they are launched fight with staunch courage for they are disillusioned men and no longer believe in any easy and complete victory and they go as men doomed by an iron discipline and by a fate which is not of their making to fulfill orders of their high command.

Information from reliable prisoners goes to show that many of them are utterly disheartened by the events of recent months and are low spirited because of their great losses in and behind the lines. They have no doubt about the superiority of our aircraft because they see too often the effect of our night and daylight bombing and never feel safe.

AIR BOMBS EFFECTIVE.

One man tells of our bombing of Osgnies which has killed army horses and men. In Carvin not long ago, forty German soldiers were killed or wounded and one bomb made a direct hit on a company of Bavarians lined up on parade. Our long-range shelling also does much destruction and wears the men's nerves to rags and tatters. Some of the prisoners say their faith in the submarine campaign has been destroyed by the abundance of food they found in their advance after March 21, and by the enormous amount of ammunition the British seem to have. The present feeling is one of fear that the war will not finish this year, but may go on for a long time with a decreasing chance of success.

In a lecture last January some of them were told there was nothing to fear from the Americans until July, but after that date they would have to be reckoned with seriously, though the difficulties of transportation would always hinder them. Even now they do not have any idea of the numbers of American fighting men already in France, but judging from the prisoners there is a sense of dark foreboding throughout the German army and this will not be lifted by any news that comes to them of the Crown Prince's costly failure. But they will go on fighting. On our side let there be no illusion as to that. They will go on fighting doggedly and desperately because they see no way out of that.

WAR OFFICE STATEMENTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, July 20.—French and American troops are continuing their advance between the Aisne and the Marne, according to an official statement issued by the War Office today.

South of the Marne, the French have thrown back the enemy between Fossoy and Neuilly and have retaken ground toward the Marne.

The Allied advance has reached the line of Vierzy, beyond the wood of Mauley, east of Villers-Helon and Neuilly St. Front. The statement follows:

"Yesterday and last night French and American troops continued their advance over the greater part of the front between the Aisne and the Marne.

"Vierzy has been reached and the troops have gone beyond Mouloy Wood, east of Villers-Helon, and conquered Neuilly St. Front and Licy-Clignon.

"South of the Marne our troops have driven back the Germans between Fossoy and Neuilly and have gained ground toward the Marne."

The text of the statement issued by the War Office tonight reads as follows:

"We have not had long to wait for the result of our victorious counter-offensive. The Germans, violently attacked on their right flank and south of the Marne, have been compelled to retreat and recross the river.

"We hold the whole south bank of the Marne.

"Between the Aisne and the Marne Franco-American troops continue to progress, and have driven back the enemy, who is resisting stubbornly.

"We have reached Ploissy and Parcy-Tigny and have passed beyond St. Remy-Blanzy and Rozet-St. Albin.

"Further south we hold the general line of the Priez plateau, northeast of Courchamps.

"The number of prisoners we have taken since July 18 exceeds 20,000. Over 400 guns have been captured.

"Our aviators, redoubling their activities in the day and night of the 19th, multiplied their raids and engaged in the severest battles against enemy forces. Franco-British bombing squadrons, taking the Marne crossings as their principal objectives, have ceaselessly hampered, and at certain points completely stopped the enemy supply service, thus playing an important role in the conflict which was able to provoke the retreat of the German troops.

"Attacking with machine guns and bombs concentrations of troops which the enemy was preparing for counter-attacks, and the enemy columns of convoys, our aviators inflicted heavy losses.

"Between the Marne and Rheims violent combats continue. Franco-British troops attacking vigorously, encountered large forces. Notwithstanding the enemy's desperate resistance we gained ground in Courton Wood, the Ardre Valley and in the direction of St. Euphraise.

"On the Marne and also at Oulchy-le-Chateau, Fere-en-Tardenois, Fismes and Baroches and over the whole rear of the battlefield twenty-four tons of projectiles were dropped during the day and twenty-eight tons at night on enemy assemblages of troops and communications.

"A violent conflagration broke at Vouzieres, and several fires were started at Fere-en-Tardenois and the station at Fismes. South of this region explosions were observed at the station at Laon. Simultaneously our infantry airplanes indicated an advance of our troops and tanks between the Aisne and the Marne and reported the arrival of enemy reserves, and by machine gunning the latter directly participated in the battle.

"Numerous combats were engaged in by our crews in combination with the British airmen and achieved good results.

"Twenty-six German airplanes were brought down or disabled and four captive balloons were set afire. Everywhere the German aviation service was able to appreciate the dash and superiority of the Allied airmen."

AMERICAN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Continued progress by the Americans between the Aisne and the Marne was reported today by Gen. Pershing in his communique for Friday.

BRITISH.

LONDON, July 20.—British troops last night advanced their line on a mile front south of the town of Hebuterne, the War Office announced today.

As the result of yesterday's operations on the Flanders front the British line was advanced along a breadth of 4000 yards in the Meteren sector. Meteren and a group of buildings southwest of the village, known as Le Waton, are now held by the British troops. The prisoners taken aggregate 436.

A successful raid was carried out by the British near Beaumont-Hamel.

The British statement follows:

"As a result of our operations yesterday our line in the Meteren sector has been advanced on a front of about 4000 yards and both the village of Meteren and the group of buildings to the southwest of it, known as Le Waton, are now held by our troops. The enemy offered considerable resistance on the extreme left of our attack, but at other points our objectives were gained rapidly and without great difficulty. The number of prisoners reported is 436.

"English troops carried out a successful raid during the night near Beaumont-Hamel and captured a few prisoners and machine guns.

"Further north, English troops pushed our line forward on a front of about a mile south of Hebuterne, after sharp fighting.

"Hostile artillery has been active in the neighborhood of St. Venant and Ypres."

ITALIAN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, July 20.—Italian troops have wrested from the Austrians Monte Stabel and completely reoccupied Cornodi-Cabento, in the Adamello region of the mountain front.

GERMAN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, July 20.—While admitting costly gains by the British and also the French, the latter in the Aisne-Marne battle, German headquarters today declares that the enemy thrusts southwest of Soissons, in the center of the line and northwest of Chateau Thierry were repulsed.

The German War Office adds that the German troops were withdrawn from the south bank of the Marne River "without being noticed by the enemy." The statement reads:

"The activity of the British increased in isolated sectors toward Meteren. They obtained a footing in Meteren, but otherwise their repulse left prisoners in our hands.

"Between the Aisne and the Marne the battle continued. Again the enemy started an attack with a view to a breach on the whole front. Tanks penetrated early in the morning into parts of our foremost lines. After a desperate struggle the first enemy thrust had been defeated towards noon on the heights southwest of Soissons, west of Hartennes-St. Neuilly and northwest of Chateau Thierry.

"Between the Aisne and the Ourcq an attack broke down under our counter thrusts, and to the south of the Ourcq mostly by our fire. North of Hartennes we threw back the enemy beyond the original line; our troops report the heaviest enemy losses. A large number of tanks were demolished before our front.

"South of the Marne there was moderate firing activity during the day. Southeast of Mareuil enemy partial attacks were repulsed.

"During the night our troops south of the Marne were withdrawn to the north bank of the river without being noticed by the enemy.

"Northwest of Souain French advances were sanguinarily repulsed.

"Yesterday, again, thirty enemy airplanes and seven captive balloons were shot down."

ODDS HEAVY AGAINST CHAMPAGNE DEFENSE.

FRENCH SUCCESS POSSIBLE THROUGH MARTYRDOM AND KEEN LEADERSHIP.

By G. H. Perris.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 18.—Gen. Gouraud's splendidly successful defense of the Champagne front and with it we say of the sectors of Argonne, Verdun and Lorraine, which would have been seriously affected had he failed, shows what can be accomplished by a keen mind, well served, even against heavy odds. With, as we now know, fifteen of the best German divisions engaged in first line and ten more in support the odds against the army of Champagne were heavy, but in the first place its staff had completely secured it against surprise.

The old system of field works had been steadily enlarged and improved with various kinds of Boche traps so that the best-armed army could not come through it without suffering terrible loss. To do this a commander of humdrum quality would have risked total failure to try to hold them.

An army abandoned to humdrum would not have understood why they should be left in charge of a few desperate machine gunners. I do not say that every man in this army understood exactly how much the strategy and tactical character of the war has changed since the chasseurs first climbed Mt. Nameless and saw the first clouds of poison gas on the flanks of Cornilia.

Gouraud is the sort of man who carries his army with him from staff to present ranker. The result on Monday morning was that part of the German artillery work was wasted and the first force of attack, on which in new method everything depends, was broken before the main defensive position was reached. After that there need only be spirit of obstinate self-sacrificing tenacity to which Gen. Gouraud had summoned the French and American soldiers of his army in the order issued ten days before attack.

"It might come at any moment," he said. "You will fight on ground that you have transformed by hard work into redoubtable fortresses, into invincible fortresses, if passages are well guarded."

The swords and great example of the past four days which has shattered as formidable an assault as the war has witnessed, should satisfy forever the once prevalent scorn, still occasionally voiced, for mere defenses. It is the barest justice to the armies on the Marne and between the Marne and Rheims to say that in those sectors to such accomplishment as was possible the conditions being radically different, they have done so remarkably well.

Frenchmen have long spoken of the martyrdom of Rheims. It would be a truer sentiment to think of the martyrdom of the French army and the people. Gouraud's treat of the Mononvilliers hills is an earnest that in this case also the military merits and the common sense of the matter will prevail.

EVENTY-TWO ENGINEMEN PERISH AS CRUISER SINKS

avy Officials Believe the San Diego was Destroyed by a Mine; Crew Leaves Ship Cheering.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The loss of life in the sinking off Fire Island, N. Y., yesterday of the United States armored cruiser San Diego and the cause of the ship's destruction still were undetermined tonight at the Navy Department. Announcement was made that men from the ship had been landed. Unofficial reports said there 1256 men aboard, and if they are correct the loss of life would not seventy-two. The names of three of those missing were announced

They are:

THOMAS E. DAVIS, engineman, O.

HER O. THOMAS, machinist's mate, Charleston, W. Va.

MES F. ROCHET, engineman, Lake, Cal.

Admiral Palmer, acting Secretary of the Navy, tonight made detailed account of the de and rescue, but it added to previous reports from H. B. Christy and other survivors as to the cause of the sinking.

American Red Cross workers were on hand when the men arrived and distributed 1200 blankets, comfort kits, sweaters, sox, pajamas and watch caps. Army embarkation officers assisted in every way in transferring the men from the steamer."

ENGINE CREWS PERISH?

Most of those who perished are believed to have been members of the engine-room crew, who were killed outright or who were so seriously injured in the explosion which wrecked the cruiser that they were unable to save themselves before the ship went down. It has been established also that several of the crew struggling in the water were struck by the smokestacks of the cruiser when they fell. These men were stunned and drowned before help could reach them.

Others lost their lives when they were caught under the life raft, which was being launched just as the warship turned on its side before going down. The men handling the raft lost control of it and it slid over the side on top of men in the water.

The survivors from the San Diego were kept all day on the army docks at Hoboken to be checked by the officers of the ship. An official list of survivors given out tonight contains 1149 names. It will be impossible to determine exactly the loss of life until this list is sent to Washington and compared with the Navy Department lists.

TORPEDO CAUSE?

Belief that the cruiser was sunk by a torpedo is expressed in a dispatch today from the chief of staff of cruiser forces to the Navy Department.

The dispatch follows:

"The captain of the San Diego reports that he is inclined to the belief that the ship was sunk by torpedo. There are no conclusive facts, however, on which to base a definite opinion at present, in view of the following circumstances:

"1—No torpedo wave was seen.

"2—No convincing evidence that periscope was seen.

"3—No submarine appeared, in spite of the fact that three unarmed rescue ships were in the vicinity for about two hours.

"4—Ship was struck on port side abaft beam, which discourages mine theory.

"5 — Weather was fine; smooth sea."

The captain's report showed that the explosion could not have been internal because there was nothing in the ship at that place to explode. The department also has evidence that the ship could not have struck an American mine. Apparently the only possible explanation of the disaster aside from that of a submarine attack is that she encountered a mine dropped by U-boats before they left the American coast.

MINE, SAYS DANIELS.

NORFOLK (Va.) July 20.—Secretary Daniels said here today that he believed a mine, and not a torpedo, was responsible for the sinking of the cruiser San Diego. He added that the sinking of the vessel, aside from the loss of life, is of no significance from a military standpoint.

"The presence of German submarines on this side of the Atlantic," said Mr. Daniels, "is more or less of a menace, of course, but they will not avail in stopping our transports going overseas with soldiers, and more soldiers, as fast as we can send them. Notwithstanding the great precautions we have taken to protect our transports, supply ships and men, I still consider it marvelous that we have succeeded in getting more than 1,000,000 troops over the seas without the loss of a life or a ship.

"It is true we have lost about 200 men during return voyages of transports, and that is deeply regrettable, but we have still been marvelously fortunate. Every time a transport fleet and its convoys leave our shores, knowing that it must run the gauntlet of the U-boat menace in the war zone, I am fearful for its safety."

MEN JOKE AT PLIGHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—Nothing was seen of a submarine by the crew of the cruiser San Diego. Fifteen shots were fired from the cruiser during the twenty-two minutes she remained above the water, the gunners firing at suspicious swirls which might have concealed a submarine.

For three hours the men kept afloat in the water by holding onto three boats and to pieces of wreckage. When the first rescuing steamer arrived many were nearing exhaustion.

Capt. James F. Brewer, master of the steamship Bussum, the second ship to reach the scene, said his watch officer reported, some distance ahead, what appeared to be a chain of floating buoys, spread out like the supports to a monster fishing net. Capt. Brewer at once altered the course of his ship and steered almost in the midst of the floating men who greeted his arrival with cheers.

ALL PICKED UP.

The Malden had arrived only a few minutes previously and the F. P. Jones came a few minutes later. In less than a half hour all those in the water were picked up. The men were taken ashore at the army docks, where they were met by Red Cross representatives with food and clothing. Most of the survivors were clad only in their underclothing, having discarded their outer garments while in the water.

Stories of the disaster told by residents near Fire Island indicated the characteristic heroism of officers and crew.

Though in peril of death, the men exchanged badinage while keeping vigilant watch for rescuers.

CHEER CAPTAIN.

"Where's the captain?" queried a husky-voiced seaman.

"There he is—see his old bald head! God bless it! Three cheers for the skipper," the other "Jackies" chorused in response.

Their commander, Capt. Christy, was shoving about in a barrel amid the wreckage shouting orders so as to preserve the accustomed "aboard ship" discipline among his men.

"Just before rescuing the men, my vessel passed a school of perhaps twenty sharks, which were feeding on the body of a small whale," Capt. Brewer said. "I was afraid they were also after the men, but I was told none had been seen by them.

WITHOUT CLOTHES.

"It was a great sight on board my ship after I started again for New York with 708 passengers. Some of the boys had shed all their clothes, and those who had more than enough to cover them divided up with those who had none. One of the officers was wearing two shirts, one where it should be and the other as makeshift trousers. Fortunately, I had plenty of food on board and the boys turned to and helped the steward get a meal.

"As we were coming in we passed a government vessel which signaled 'Who are you?'

"One of the sailors yelled: 'Tell 'em it's a Sunday-school picnic.'"

CALIFORNIAN RESCUED.

SAN DIEGO'S SINKING UP TO INQUIRY COURT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—The reason why the Navy Department is unable at present to give the number of men and officers aboard the San Diego was explained here tonight by an aide of Rear-Admiral Albert Gleaves.

Before leaving Portmouth, N. H., officers of the cruiser made duplicate lists of all aboard. One list was retained and was lost with the vessel. The other was mailed from Portsmouth to the Bureau of Navigation at Washington. It is believed the second list is still in the mails.

A member of Admiral Gleaves's staff stated tonight that no official announcement as to whether the San Diego met her fate by torpedo, mine or some other cause would be made until a court of inquiry, which held a preliminary hearing here today, completed its investigation, and the proceedings were reviewed by the Secretary of the navy.

CONFUSION RESULTS FROM TIME CHANGE.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

JUAREZ, July 18.—An effort is being made by the Juarez Chamber of Commerce to have the local time changed to correspond with the El Paso time. As the time used here is the former mountain time, much confusion has resulted from the change of time which El Paso made to conform to the daylight-saving plan.

As the railroads here use the old Mexican time, which is twenty-four minutes faster than mountain time, the confusion is all the greater since the new El Paso time was adopted.

MILITARY SITUATION.

Rheims is already in a pocket, has been, in fact, since the advance to the Marne. By deepening the pocket it was hoped to force the evacuation of the city.

But the French lines north of Prunay held fast. Their position was not even dented. So, like the attacks further east, this effort also died.

ENCIRCLING RHEIMS.

West of Rheims, the Germans met with more success. In the first attack the French lines between Rheims and the Marne were badly dented, at some points the German penetration reaching a depth of over two miles. There was, however, none of the confusion which attended the other German offensives. There was not the slightest indication of panic or of a break in the continuity of the line. What was gained was gained slowly, the French forces retiring in excellent order and fighting steadily, with their lines intact and apparently unshaken. But the Germans did succeed in the opening days of the attack in pushing their lines from two to three miles further east and south of the original positions, thus drawing closer together the side of the southern approaches to Rheims.

THE AMERICAN WAY.

On the Marne front, between Chateau Thierry and Verneuil, the Germans after terrific fighting succeeded in effecting a crossing first between Chateau Thierry and Dormans. On the western side of this front, however, the American forces counter-attacked immediately in the face of the German offensive and drove the Germans back across the river from Chateau Thierry to Jaulgonne, capturing about 1500 prisoners in the operation. This is the first time since the trench systems have been established that there has been a counter-attack under such circumstances. On the French side of the front no counter effort was made, the French employing the tactics that they have almost invariably followed, of falling back slowly and exacting the highest possible price for each foot of advance.

FOOTHOLD ON RIVER.

The Germans were thus able to get a secure foothold on the south bank of the river and advanced their lines as far south as a small ravine on the lip of which are found the towns of St. Agnan and Lachapelle. Here the lines held and the advance to the south came to and end, not to be resumed. In the meantime the Germans were attempting to relieve the situation on the south bank by extending their gains on the north bank to the southeast. This they were entirely unable to do.

They therefore reversed the process, driving eastward from their positions south of the Marne with the object of uncovering the lines on the north bank and accomplishing indirectly what they could not accomplish directly. In this movement they advanced their lines on the south bank so far east that they controlled the Marne from Jaulgonne as far east as Oeuilly.

NOTHING TO SHOW.

The fighting up to this point had been more costly to Germany than that in any of the preceding offensives. The situation up to Wednesday therefore was that Germany had sustained a distinct setback. She had used in the attack, as near as can be estimated from European reports, about 500,000 men, had sustained heavy losses and with nothing to show for it. Judging from the strength used in previous offensives there was still available for this effort another 500,000.

Previous to the success of the Italian defense, Gen. Foch's freedom of action may have been hampered some by the uncertainty as to what would happen in Italy should the Austrians attack. He was compelled to keep intact a certain part at least of his reserves in order to rush assistance south should it become necessary. But the load had been lifted from his mind by the stiffness of the Italian attack and he was free to devote his entire attention and his entire strength to the situation in France. Thus freed he had laid well his plans for a counter offensive in the Marne salient.

FOCH'S OFFENSIVE.

This offensive broke early on Thursday morning, while the fighting along the Marne itself and between the Marne and Rheims was at its height. The front of Foch's action was between Belleau woods and Fontenoy, north of the Aisne. The American forces holding the line from Belleau Wood to Dammard were, apparently, the first to move forward.

The attack was made without any artillery preparation, only barrage fire being put down as the infantry went over the top; tanks, however, were used freely in the attack.

The Germans were taken completely by surprise. They seemed to have no idea that an attack was pending. Accordingly the Americans met with little resistance in this effort and advanced several miles before the Germans were able to check them.

The French in the meantime, with at least one American division, debouched from the forest of Retz as well as from the woods north of the Aisne, where they had attacked and struck a powerful blow against the German lines between Corcy, at the center of the Retz forest, and Fontenoy.

As in the attack further south there was no artillery preparation. The infantry went over behind a barrage, with an accompaniment of tanks, caught the Germans utterly unawares and went completely through their lines. In Thursday's advance alone they penetrated to within a mile of Soissons and took the heights dominating the city from both the west and the southwest. The main highway from Soissons to Chateau Thierry was reached and crossed, the French taking positions along the Orise ravine.

At this writing (Friday) the fighting is still in progress and the Allies are still advancing. But the initial success seems to hold out much greater results than those which have yet been achieved.

Must mean water under control.

If the flow is too great or too small, if it takes too much time and five times the labor it should, if a large part of the water is lost or doesn't get to the right spot, if the cost is much greater than it should be and the returns in production too little—

Then the water is controlling you, and you are not controlling anything.

M'ADOO ORDERS FAST NORTHERN TRAIN BACK

NORTH COAST LIMITED RESUMES JULY 28; PORTLAND AFTER NEW TRADE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 20.—William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States and Director-General of Railroads, and his official party arrived yesterday and made a comprehensive survey of terminals and conditions here.

Mr. McAdoo, following a conference of railroad heads of the northwestern district and with Regional Director Aishton, authorized an order by which the "North Coast Limited" train of the Northern Pacific would be operated beginning July 28 between Portland and Chicago.

H. L. Corbett, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Portland conferred with Mr. McAdoo on offshore traffic out of this port and after the conference it was unofficially announced that Portland would try to secure the operation of steamers to Asiatic ports and that the railroads would move traffic consigned to this port.

"The national railroad situation is better now than could have been foreseen when the government took over the railroads," said Mr. McAdoo today. "The comparative reports are most gratifying."

TO TRAIN FOR OFFICERS.

Twenty-five Enlisted Men at Camp Lewis will be Ordered to Kentucky Post.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CAMP LEWIS (Wash.) July 20.—Orders will be published tomorrow morning announcing the appointment of twenty-five enlisted men here to the central officers' training camp at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., where they will take the four months' course to fit them for commissions as artillery officers. Nearly all of the men were from the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade. Three were from the Forty-fourth Infantry of the Regular Army. The names follow:

Medical Department—Private (first-class) Fred R. Boyns and Private (first-class) Benjamin Franklin Brown.

Russian Situation.

JAPAN'S CONSENT TO ACT IN SIBERIA IS EXPECTED.

Military Intervention by Allied Army to Support Czecho-Slovak Force is Believed Planned.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The reply of Japan to the communication of the United States proposing military action in Siberia is expected daily in Washington. The Japanese Cabinet, the foreign advisory council, the elder statesmen and the Mikado have considered it, and the views of Japan's military and naval experts have been obtained.

The American communication marks a modification of President Wilson's views as expressed to Japan three months ago in response to the invitation from Japan to discuss the Russian situation, the United States at the time being opposed to military intervention, not so much in principle, but believing it would be unwise at that moment.

The new communication, it is understood, is based on the new developments occasioned by the remarkable exploits of the Czecho-Slovak forces in European and Asiatic Russia, the dangers confronting these in Western Siberia and European Russia, and the necessity of sending into Siberia and possibly to European Russia an expedition to relieve them.

REFUSE STATEMENT.

Neither the State Department nor the Japanese Embassy would authorize any statement today upon the subject of the exchanges taking place between Tokio and Washington. At the department it was learned that the conversations have not been concluded.

It also is known that the Japanese government has not yet replied to the American proposal, but the belief in best informed circles is that the reply will be favorable, possibly with some modifications, to President Wilson's proposition.

It is pointed out today that there is no recognized Siberian government and as the United States and the Allies have no diplomatic relations with the Bolshevik government there is no authority to which this country and the Allies might look to co-operate with in the assistance all are eager to give Russia. In this situation the appearance of the Czecho-Slovaks, who have been betrayed by the Bolsheviki, and who are not only loyal Allies, but anxious to renew fighting against the Central Powers, came at an opportune time to present an occasion for action in Siberia.

DETAILS NOT PUBLIC.

The details of the proposed action in Siberia are not known. It is only known that the Allied Powers have been appealed to in the interest of the Czecho-Slovaks, exposed to destruction by combined Bolshevik-German attack, and the number of Czecho-Slovaks is in excess of 100,000. Fifty-thousand of them are organized into military bodies, equipped and partly armed. The remaining 50,000 are enrolled, but because of the lack of arms and equipment have not been able to organize, but are awaiting the means from the Allies.

Any action, according to the best available information to be taken in Siberia, will be international with representatives from the British and French public forces as well as Japanese, and it is regarded as certain also that some American troops will participate. Recent reinforcements arriving at Vladivostok from British East India and Chinese ports are believed to have been destined for Siberian operations.

The major forces, however, necessarily, would be furnished by Japan. The probable number cannot be ascertained, but it is regarded as essential that there be a strong army, especially if the mission of relief for the Czecho-Slovaks is to benefit those in the far interior as well as those in Eastern Siberia.

LARGE GARRISONS.

Japan, it is said, has very large garrisons in Southern Manchuria and in Korea and would be prepared at any instant to start two columns in motion, one following the Amur branch of the trans-Siberian railroad, which is partly controlled by Bolshevik forces, the other following the Chinese Eastern Railway, through Northern Manchuria, the two columns converging upon a point near Chita.

Thence the line would be advanced rapidly to Irkutsk, beyond Lake Baikal, on to the Ural Mountains and to European Russia. By pushing into European Russia, going northwestward, contact might be established with the Anglo-British-American forces along the route of the Kola-Petrograd Railway, and this penetration would also serve to deprive the Bolsheviki of the use of the Archangel-Vologda Railroad. It would also have the effect of depriving both the Bolsheviki and the Germans of supplies from Siberia, and would hasten the complete destruction of the former while interfering with the plans of the latter for exploiting Russia.

It is believed that Japanese officers would command the expedition inasmuch as the majority of troops might be furnished by Japan. However, the number of Czecho-Slovak troops available for service, at least 100,000, would give the Allies a very substantial force, together with the British, French, American and Japanese contingents. It is probable that details of organization and command of the expedition are factors which are delaying Japan's reply to the American communication.

MESSAGE FROM FRANCIS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—A message dated July 11 reached the State Department today from Ambassador Francis at Vologda. He reported chiefly on local conditions without touching upon rumors that the Bolsheviki government seeks to have the Allied representatives move from Vologda to Moscow or mentioning his Fourth of July address, the subject of attacks in the German press.

SEMENOFF HITS HARD.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 20.—Gen. Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevik leader in Eastern Siberia, says a Tien Tsin dispatch dated Thursday, has inflicted a sharp blow with heavy losses in men, stores and ammunition. The correspondent does not specify his opponents nor the date and place of the action.

Cholera has broken out in Moscow, according to a Russian wireless message received today. Within the past twenty-four hours, the message says, there have been registered in Moscow 224 known cholera cases, seventy-eight suspected cholera cases, and twenty-six cases of stomach disease.

DIPLOMAT MISSING.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE AND A. P.]

TOKIO, July 16.—The whereabouts of G. O. Wallenburg, recently Swedish Minister to Japan, who left for home by way of Siberia two months ago with a party of fellow Swedes, is not known. Advices received from Seden say that he has not arrived there.

Minister Wallenburg and fourteen other Swedes were compelled to leave Japan because of unneutral conduct.

STRIKES IN UKRAINE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, July 19.—Strikes involving all the Ukrainian railways have been started, according to a telegram, from Kiev to the Rheinische Westfaelische Zeitung of Essen. The men have demanded increases in wages and the restoration of the employees' committee.

BOLSHEVIKI ANNOUNCE EX-CZAR'S EXECUTION.

FORMER RULER SHOT FOLLOWING EXPOSURE OF PLOT, IS MESSAGE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 20.—Former Emperor Nicholas of Russia has been shot, a Russian wireless statement today announces.

The former Emperor's correspondence, including letters from the Monk Rasputin, who was killed shortly before the revolution, written to the then Emperor and his family, will be published in the near future, the wireless message declares.

The former Empress and the young Alexis Romanoff, the former heir apparent, have been sent to a place of security.

The central executive body of the Bolshevik government announces that it has at its disposal important material documents concerning the former Emperor's affairs, including his own diaries.

The message announces that a counter revolutionary conspiracy was discovered, with the object of wresting the ex-Emperor from the authority of the Soviet council. In view of this fact, the president of the Ural regional council decided to execute the former ruler and the decision was carried out on July 16.

Documents concerning the conspiracy were forwarded to Moscow. It had been decided, the message explains, to bring the ex-Emperor before a tribunal "to be held for crimes against the people." Later occurrences, however, led to delay in adopting this course.

There have been rumors since June 24 that former Emperor Nicholas of Russia had been assassinated.

There seemingly is no question that today's dispatch is authentic. It comes in the form of a Russian wireless dispatch and, as the wireless plants of Russia are under the control of the Bolsheviki, it appears that it is an official version of the death of the former Emperor.

SURVIVORS OF BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK, LAND

GAS COMPANY CLERKS MUST WORK OR FIGHT.

CROWDER'S RULES INCLUDE ELECTRICAL COMPANIES' EMPLOYEES, TOO.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, July 20.—Clerks in manufacturing plants, power plants and general offices of gas and electric companies maintaining sales stores for the sale of supplies, sales clerks and others therein are included in the work-or-fight amendment to the selective draft.

This is the reply of Provost-Marshal-General Crowder to the question raised by John A. Britton, vice-president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, today, received by telegraph directed to Gov. Stephens. The inquiry was made through the Advisory Committee of the State Council of Defense.

Clerks in gas and electric companies as an entirety, however, are not included, rules the Provost-Marshal.

WILL TRAIN NEGROES FOR MERCHANT MARINE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20.—In response to many requests by members of that race, a merchant marine training ship for negroes is to be established by the United States Shipping Board, according to an announcement here today by J. H. Farren, an official of the board.

At present there are no negroes on training vessels in this service.

O'LEARY, SINN FEIN MAN'S KIN, IS FREE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—A jury in the Federal court here today reported its inability to agree on a verdict in the trial of John J. O'Leary for alleged obstruction of justice, and was discharged.

O'Leary was accused of aiding the escape of his brother, Jeremiah A. O'Leary, Sinn Fein leader, who was about to be tried for publishing alleged seditious magazine articles.

O'Leary will remain under $10,000 bond until Monday, when counsel will confer on the question of another trial.

LAW POINTS DELAY TAKING OVER WIRES.

ENEMY IS IN A HUGE TRAP.

creased after daylight, but the Allied guns were much more effective, as reports from the aviators and observation balloons on the enemy positions came in.

There were numerous bombing raids by the airmen this morning.

The northern half of the Soissons-Chateau Thierry line is now far beyond Vierzy, to the east, and there have been bitter struggles in this territory.

The Allies' big guns command the bridges southeast of Soissons.

Among the prisoners were a colonel and two majors, all in one group.

ALL GAINS HELD.

Despite stiffening resistance now being shown by the German forces the Franco-American troops are holding their line between Soissons and Chateau Thierry. The battle raged all night.

The Germans this morning increased their artillery fire to a degree greater than any attained since Thursday.

The battle zone along the front of the Allied counter-attack between the Aisne and the Marne was being extended further south towards Chateau Thierry, according to information early this morning.

CONTINUE POUNDING.

The Franco-American forces were continuing the steady pounding of the northern part of the line near Soissons, although the movement lacked the dashing advance which characterized the first days of the attack.

Attempts of the Germans to rally their forces have resulted in such a strengthening of the opposition as to indicate that the battle is approaching the point when the armies will soon be locked in a giant struggle.

Both on the northern end of the line and further south the reinforced Germans are making a desperate effort to hold their positions.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY BETWEEN THE AISNE AND THE MARNE, Friday, July 19 (night.)—American troops participating in the Franco-American advance late today of about a mile and a quarter on the Soissons-Chateau Thierry front went forward against strong machine-gun fire over ground covered with German dead.

From a hill about six kilometers southwest of Soissons the correspondent Friday saw the Americans going into action. The advance was well organized from one end of the line to the other.

Under a barrage from 75's and 155's American infantry and machine gunners advanced and reached their objectives, according to schedule, despite the fire of German machine guns. The bombardment of the big German guns was feeble.

AMERICAN START.

The Americans started just west of the Paris-Soissons road near the shell-shattered village of Missy-aux-Bois, advancing nearly a kilometer before the Germans began to reply to the American barrage. Missy-aux-Bois lies in a valley and the Americans were advancing upgrade toward the east. A few tanks were here and there preceding the infantrymen. As the Americans progressed the enemy barrage fire increased.

The entire region was well within the German lines until after the Franco-American offensive on Thursday. One quickly dug trench had been filled with German bodies.

They were machine gunners who had been caught by the terrific fire of the Allied artillery. In many places the German dead were in piles, while a trench on the crest of a hill contained more than 100 bodies.

AIRMEN HELP.

After intense barrage fire from Soissons to Chateau Thierry the Allied advance this evening opened exactly at 5:30 o'clock. As far as the eye could reach could be seen observation balloons, while the sky was specked with Allied airplanes darting in various directions, many returning from over the German lines to make a quick report on observations and the result of the fire of the big guns.

From the hillside the smoke and dust thrown up by the Allied shells could be seen away beyond the advancing Americans.

Behind the advancing troops came American trucks loaded with chocolate, tobacco and various foodstuffs. These went back and forth steadily. Other trucks went from place to place providing foodstuffs and water for the Americans who are to follow their advancing comrades.

Twenty-five minutes after the Franco-American advance began, the rattle of German machine guns could be heard in the distance, but it did not affect the Americans, who only appeared more eager to progress.

The officers had to caution them not to proceed beyond the barrage in accordance with the schedule. The German machine-gun fire continued but a short time, and as the Americans could be seen steadily pressing forward eastward the rattle dwindled and finally stopped.

Missy-aux-Bois was deserted by the French peasants before the Germans came, the village having been torn from end to end by shell fire. Not one wall or any stone buildings are standing.

The only living things in the village, which is now within the Allied lines, were three pigeons which roosted on the ruins of the village church during the roar of the battle. They flew around in circles in bewilderment, returned to their roosting place and then flew around again.

North and south of Missy-aux-Bois are two other deserted villages, in one of which every building is in ruins. The fields of this section are covered with grain ready for the harvest. Many rusty tools and implements are standing just where they were left when the alarm came.

When darkness settled over the battlefield the Americans still maintained their advance. The guns in the rear were pounding away, guarding them through the night.

Tightening.

CHECKERBOARD OF WAR ON GERMANS IN A BAG.

American Troops Moving on Too Fast to be Trailed.

BY HARRY CARR.

IF THESE Yankee boys of ours will stay still long enough for us to locate them on a map, perhaps we can find out what this thing is all about.

Personally I find it very useful occasionally to step back and take a look at the whole panorama.

Doing so, it becomes clear why the same German army that tore through the Allies on March 21, as if they were made of wet tissue paper, is now being licked to a dark brown finish.

The German general is proceeding upon a very sweeping and logical plan which has never changed in its intention. This plan is to tear the British and French armies apart; then attack each in turn.

To accomplish this, it is necessary for the Germans to force back the entire Allied line until it touches the system of railroad communication which joins one end of the Allied line to the other.

The plan adopted for forcing back this line is the plan of the woodsman. The Germans cut a deep nick in the line. Then near to this nick they cut in another deep nick. A blow with the ax then knocks out the projecting piece of wood between the nicks. This explains the tactical plan of the German advance.

In April and May they cut a big nick in the Allied line at Montdidier. They intended to cut another nick in the line between Rheims and Soissons. Having done so, they figured that they would be able to knock out the piece between Montidier and Soissons. They were especially anxious to do this because the sliver between the Soissons nick and the Montidier nick contained certain forests, plateaus and other strategic points of great importance to Germany's military advance upon Paris and equally important to the French defense.

A DARING SCHEME.

The German advance to Chateau Thierry was a piece of sheer military audacity. The logical place for Germany to have cut the next nick was at Rheims. To go in where they did was to march into a trap; to march in between two strong gate posts—Soissons and Rheims.

By choosing such an unexpected place for the advance, the Germans thought they could go whirling down the valley to the Marne; use that river as a pivot for a swing to the westward; then rush on along the river, perhaps to Paris, the right wing of the German advance meanwhile sweeping back upon Soissons, taking the city and the high lands beyond.

As this wing movement went through Soissons it was figured that the troops hurrying westward along the Marne would sweep northward a little; the two expeditions would come together, enveloping the great strategic areas of the forest of Compiegney. Thus Paris would be at the mercy of the Germans; the two ends of the Allied army would be torn asunder.

It was a daring conception. The idea was to go tearing through this district with a whoop and sweep away everything before the Allies, braced for an attack upon Rheims, could readjust themselves to the situation.

It was a great scheme, only it didn't work.

The rush carried them to the Marne, but stopped as it turned westward. It is not now exactly clear why the rush paused and then came to a dead stop.

Once having even hesitated, the success of this super raid was no longer a possibility.

Nevertheless the Germans were down to the Marne. If they could have immediately pounded another nick down eastward of Rheims as they tried to do last week, their big raid would still have been a success and a big achievement.

WHY THE DELAY?

For some reason not very clear there seems to have been a delay in beginning this second nick the object of which was to eliminate Rheims and widen the narrow pocket into a long safe curve with the great Allied supply station at Chalons on the German side of the curve.

When this second nick was undertaken last week, it was too late.

The method of cutting the nick was to turn the German attack eastward against the Dormans-Rheims line, other contingents of the German army meanwhile attacking east of Rheims.

Before it was well started, Gen. Foch began his whirlwind counter-advance against the Soissons-Chateau Thierry line.

In other words as the Germans began pressing against the east side of the nick, Gen. Foch began pressing at their backs against the west side of the nick. As they sought to widen the pocket, one side, Foch shoved it back upon them from the other side.

In the beginning this attack by Foch was purely defensive to save Rheims and Chalons. It has now developed into a battle of such violence that the Germans seem to have abandoned the attempt against Rheims and Chalons and are devoting their whole effort to defend themselves from the danger of having the hole cave in on them.

ON THREE FRONTS.

The Germans have a very difficult tactical problem. They are actually fighting battles on three sides of this pocket at the same time.

Their chief difficulty seems to be one of transportation.

Two or three railroads of indirect route stagger under the job of transporting the men and supplies down into the pocket.

Within the last few days Foch has put at least two and probably all of these railroads out of business.

It seems no longer to be a question of German retreat. It doesn't seem clear how the Germans can retreat without very severe losses. They would doubtless be glad enough to get out of this deep nick if they could.

What they tried was the favorite military plan of Napoleon. He won nearly all of his battles by concentrating a terrific preponderance of men back of a weak place on the enemy line. Then he tore through, turning to the right or left or both and whipping the separated wings of the army.

But war in present conditions seems to prohibit movements of sufficient rapidity to accomplish the Napoleonic coup.

BAGGED.

Without being too cocksure of our position in the premises, it seems as though the Crown Prince had gotten himself into a very dangerous hole.

If Soissons is taken, the predicament of the German commander becomes more severe. It will be like being down in a big bag with somebody drawing up the strings.

It is, however, easy to exaggerate the extent of our victory. In our flush of pride over the truly magnificent fighting of the American boys, there is a special temptation for us to do so.

We can conservatively feel sure of these points, however.

The advance of Gen. Foch was primarily a defensive move intended to relieve Rheims from the danger of envelopment with the attendant perils to Chalons and the railroads. The defense seems to be developing automatically into an offensive drive.

If this Foch drive can be said to have a definite objective it is to cut off the retreat of the Germans by driving across the top of the salient. Should he succeed, the Germans would be trapped in this deep nick and destroyed.

In order to close the trap effectively, however, it is necessary for Foch to drive in from Soissons; and of course the further he carries the fight north from the Marne the easier it is for the Germans to hurl in great bodies of reserves. As he carries the battle toward Soissons, the Germans suffer less embarrassment in the matter of railroad transportation.

GERMAN DESPERATION.

The Germans have apparently abandoned the plan to relieve their danger by cutting in behind Rheims. The danger is too acute for such indirect methods.

At the present writing they are struggling with all their might to jam in enough reserves to stem the Franco-American tide southeast of Soisons.

Their effort further south is apparently only to accomplish a withdrawal of the soldiers down at the point of the pocket to supply which they have but the most insufficient communications.

I think it would be safe to say that the Germans are now fighting to get themselves out of the trap and for no other purpose.

Further north, on the British front, a spirited battle is being fought to keep Prince Rupprecht so well occupied that he cannot come to the rescue of the hard-pressed Crown Prince of Germany.

Calculating the moral effect of a military movement is a flat, stale and unprofitable field of conjecture. At the same time, without going from actualities to pipe dreams, I don't see how the wonderful stand of the raw American troops can fail to have a most disheartening effect upon the German people. If those "Yanks" are samples of the millions yet to come, the future doesn't look very rosy for Germany.

Supervisor Woodley.

LOS ANGELES, July 20 [To the Editor of The Times:] I have read your recent articles about supervisorial candidates and something of their public record, and I ask you to present something of the excellent record that Supervisor Woodley has made, a continuous record of efficiency and economy, cutting of expense and elimination of waste unequaled.

During the first two years of his county service his work of reorganization in the public works division resulted in a reduction of cost and expense in the mechanical department of 25 per cent. with more and better work done. Sixty-seven thousand dollars were saved on salaries and better salaries paid those remaining in the service.

When Mr. Woodley took charge of the finance division there was an overdraft in the general fund of $1,169,888.71; today there is money in the treasury to wipe out the entire overdraft and leave a surplus of over $300,000, as shown by the treasurer's books. When Mr. Woodley took charge of the finance division there were thirty general county and special district funds overdrawn or in the red to the amount of $2,570,533.10. Today, the treasurer's books show a net balance on hand in these funds of $1,769,532.45.

On account of the work done in this division the tax rate for county purposes will be reduced this year 6 per cent. or 7 per cent., and all this notwithstanding the great advance of the cost of everything. In addition, Mr. Woodley knows the county business thoroughly. He has things well in hand, and particularly at this time should be retained to continue the work he is doing.

SOLDIERS COMFORTED BY SALVATION ARMY.

HOME COOKING, INCLUDING PIES, TAKEN BY LASSIES INTO TRENCHES.

By M. F. Murphy.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, July 20.—While Salvation Army work at the front has not been so loudly heralded as that of some other organizations, yet it is none the less greatly appreciated by the men. The work is always practical and according to the first principle of Salvationists, who are trying to meet the actual needs of the men, and the workers reach places untouched by other relief agencies.

One feature of the work near the front is the effort to give the men home cooking. Our national foods, pies and the humble doughnut, are prepared in huts near the front, giving the men a feeling of being near home. The Salvationists have thirty-three huts and 110 workers only, but hope to have fifty huts, with 500 workers by winter.

The women workers are almost constantly in the second line trenches and often go to the first lines when aid is urgently needed, although that is prohibited. The special work of the lassies is to serve chocolate and coffee to the men of the ammunition trains carrying ammunition to the guns. They work all night in the danger zone, giving refreshments that would otherwise be impossible to obtain. Pay is accepted when the men are able to pay, but is never demanded. Men who are trusted almost invariably pay later.

BRITISH CASUALTIES FOR WEEK ARE 16,981.

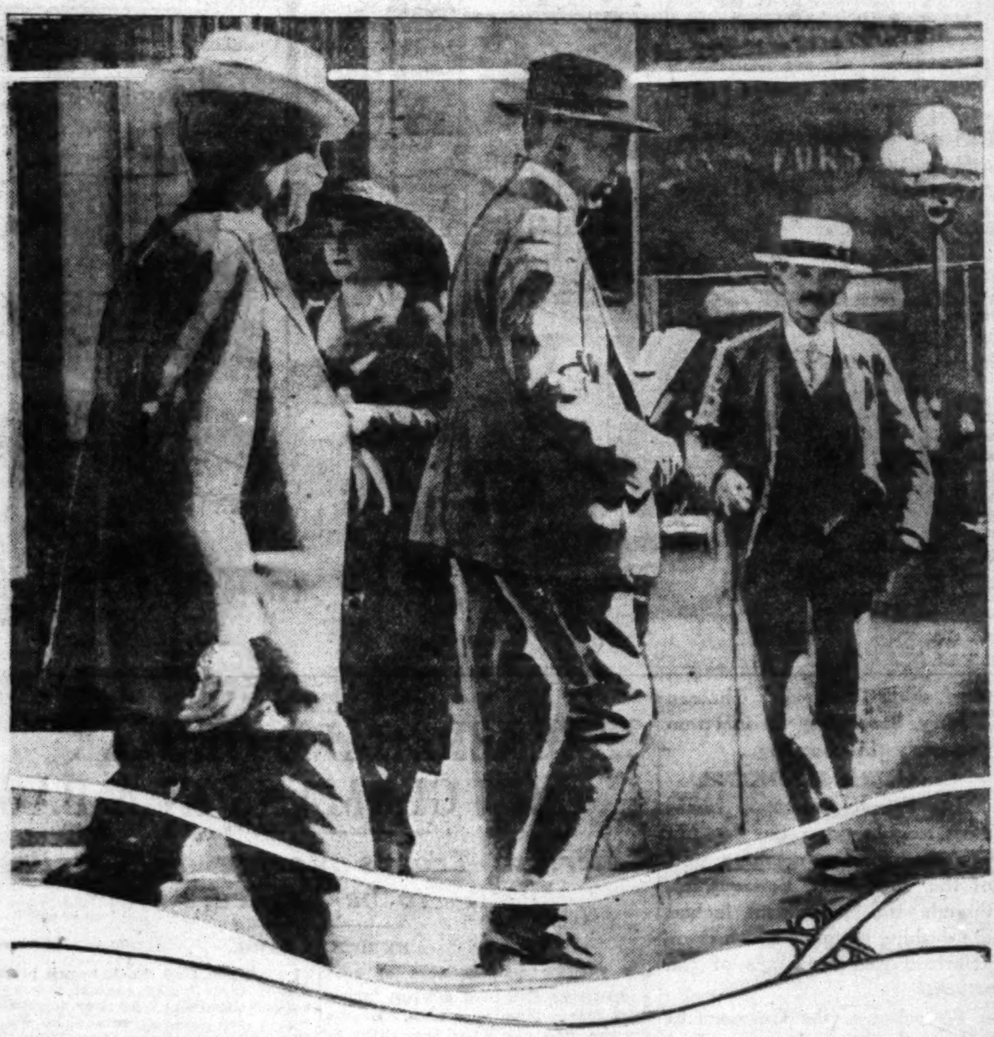
Federal Authorities Ask Warrant for Rich "Enemy."



Miguel F. Latz (rear;) Attorney Herbert Goudge (center;) Arnold Faerber.

LATZ SURRENDERS; IS RELEASED ON BIG BON

Sureties for Aged Capitalist Accused Violating the President's Proclamation are Sextupled.

LESS than five hours after Superior Judge McCormick had issued a bench warrant yesterday for the arrest of Miguel F. Latz, Mexican capitalist arrested by the police on a Federal charge Thursday, and had ordered his bail of $3000 forfeited, Latz surrendered himself to the Sheriff and then again released on $20,000 bonds.

The bonds were furnished by Arnold Faerber, of No. 1200 West Adams street, a brother of Latz, and F. A. Hartmann, owner of the Hoegee Building. In company with his attorney, Herbert J. Goudge, Latz, his brother and bondsmen, went to the home of Superior Judge Avery, where the surety on the bonds was approved.

The bonds were put up to insure the man's appearance in Judge McCormick's court tomorrow morning, when the final action on the writ of habeas corpus, issued by Judge Jackson early Friday morning, is expected to take place. The $3000 bail originally put up by Latz was ordered forfeited when Latz failed to appear yesterday morning. Attorney Goudge maintains, however, that his client was not required to so appear.

FEDERAL WARRANT SOUGHT.

C. L. Keep, in charge of the local office of the Department of Justice, said yesterday:

"We have applied for a Federal warrant for Latz's arrest on a charge of violating the President's proclamation by keeping firearms in his—an enemy alien's—possession. We hope to have a hearing on the question Monday. The Federal authorities are very much interested in the case."

Latz's surrender to Deputy Sheriff Anderson was preceded by an energetic search for him by the police and the Sheriff's deputy after the bench warrant was placed in their hands.

The officers made trips to the West Adams-street residence, to a downtown hotel, the homes of several persons, and finally succeeded in getting in touch with Attorney Goudge, who stated he could produce Latz, and would surrender him as soon as arrangement for bonds could be completed.

When the papers were drawn up, the party, in two automobiles, went to the Sheriff's office, there picked up Deputy Anderson, and with him proceeded to the home of Judge Avery. From there the men went to the County Jail where the bonds were put up.

FROM MR. GOUDGE.

"The only issue we have been making is that the police have no right to arrest a man, lock him up in jail and refuse to say what he is charged with other than to say he is wanted on a Federal charge," Attorney Goudge declared.

"When the Federal authorities finally take a hand in the matter, then we know what the charge is and can meet it."

Mr. Latz, Attorney Goudge said, is a bona-fide Mexican citizen, who lived in Mexico for nearly fifty years, and served as a high official. He has been living in Los Angeles six years, is well known for his charitable donations and his high character, he added.

"Mr. Latz has bought Liberty Bonds of every issue, and in other ways contributed to the support of the war. He served, as a volunteer, five years in the Union army. The only charge against him so far is that of having in his possession a gun, which he tells me was in pieces and unworkable.

That several issues of international relations and the scope of the Presidential proclama raised in the man's defens he finally be detained by the authorities, was indicat Goudge.

Goudge admitted Latz ha payments to Villa during the can turmoil, but declared years before the present was made under threat of the same manner in which wealthy men were made tribute.

CASE CONTINUE

Because of the complicat of the case, Judge McCorm tinued the hearing yesterd ney Goudge made a two- for the release of Latz on that he was being illegally by the police department, or complaint having been against him.

In connection with the developed that Judge Ja out of bed at midnight and went to the City Jail was released on $3000 bail Agent Dennison of the ment of Justice was Judge McCormick reque Federal authorities be in at tomorrow's hearing apprise themselves of the the case with respect to eral action that may be plated.

LATZ'S HEALTH

"I want your Honor stand," declared Attorney "that I am trying to co- the proper authorities ter. I know where Mr. L I can place my hands hour. He is old and sick excitement probably fatal consequences."

"It seems to me," the court replied, "that way to co-operate with ties would be to have fendant here this morning

W. C. Doran, deputy torney, declared that the tainly have power in time make arrests and hold without a complaint.

"I have the highest Judge Jackson," Doran feel that if he was facts as I am in this not have permitted the this defendant on bail strange situation for a lease a man in a case actor at midnight.

"Notwithstanding the habeas corpus proceed lar cases, it can be like these and it is the court to proceed with caution.

"In view of the nature I would suggest that be increased to $20,000 stand the Federal auth vestigating the case taking action."

In the matter of against the defendant tives in court of Butler said that no would be issued.

AUSTRIANS RUN TO COVER AS ITALIANS RAIN BOMBS.

Powerful Enemy Forces Refuse to Fight in Self-defense in Pola Raid.

BY WARD PRICE.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

NAVAL HEADQUARTERS, VENICE, July 17 (delayed.)—The latest trans-Adriatic air flight made by Italians was launched this morning against Pola. The numerous machines that took part in it, belonging to both the army and the navy, were of all kinds—land planes, seaplanes, bombing machines, fighting scouts and airships. The arsenal and seaplane station of Pola were battered with ten tons of bombs. The Austrians made no attempt to strike a blow in self-defense. Not one of their machines went up. It would indeed have stood small chance against the Italian fighters that formed the strong escort.

Instead of going up, in fact, the Austrian seaplanes, when their station on the shores of Pola harbor was bombarded by the first wave of the attacking planes, all left their sheds and ran across the water for shelter to the island opposite.

UNMOLESTED.

Even more striking was the fact that although the escorting Italian torpedo boats were crossing to and fro in view of the Austrian coast for nearly three hours of daylight, none of the powerful Austrian naval forces which lie in Pola harbor came out to have a shot at them. The whole Austrian armament, except their anti-aircraft batteries, remained entirely passive while the Italians rained bombs about their ears. If the Austrians continue to suffer aggression so meekly the war cry of the Italian sailor "into the jaws of the wolf" will lose its meaning.

The attack began at 2:30 with a raid by an Italian airship. The airplane squadron came over at 5:30. The organization of the simultaneous arrival of machines of so many different types was a delicate matter. The air fleet was divided into three squadrons. One, consisting of seaplanes, bombed the Austrian seaplane base on the gulf shore.

CIRCLE ARSENAL.

Another, made up of Capronis and other weight-carrying machines, swept around from the south of the island arsenal of San Olivi, while the new fast bomb-carrying sea airplanes under Maj. Gabriel d'Annunzio made a bigger circle to the north and arrived over their objective, the town of Pola.

A fierce anti-aircraft fire met the raiders, but not one of the machines was hit. Meanwhile, bomb after bomb exploded on the crowded target of the submarine and destroyed dockyard of San Olivi.

Detailed forethought had gone to provide quick rescue for any airplane that met disaster. The torpedo boats made up a chain across the Adriatic and along this cruised also to and fro several seaplanes ready to come down alongside a wrecked machine and pick up its airmen.

When the raid was over the Italian airplanes went streaming home in coveys of white specks up in the sky. Our torpedo boats followed, swinging to and fro in evolutions on the way and it was not until the hot sirocco of noon was past that they came in a foaming line ahead up to their moorings.

Officers of the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth and One Hundred and Sixtieth (California) Infantry regiments expressed themselves as well pleased with about 1000 draft recruits which arrived here today from Camp Lewis and were assigned to those regiments. Today's contingent is the last expected here for some time.

The men were of the June quotas of Northwestern States. One carried a small American flag strapped to his pack and another had a violin case slung over his shoulder. All had barrack bags of the new olive drab material. One or two had flowers stuck in their hat bands.

Today was the first liberty period for many of the recruits who arrived here recently and they left camp by hundreds to spend the week-end in San Diego and other near-by towns. Meanwhile others were kept busy on the rifle range, where there will be firing going on all day tomorrow.

Recruits assigned to the artillery regiments were busy today and yesterday firing the heavy field pieces for the first time. Blank ammunition was used, but the guns were required to be aimed just as though an enemy was being shelled. The One Hundred and Forty-fifth (Utah) Field Artillery had a competition today for recruits only in going into action.

Each team of recruits was required to unlimber its gun, aim it in accordance with specified instructions and fire one round. More than 100 rounds were fired thus.

The last detachment of the One Hundred and Fifteenth Engineers to study pontoon bridge building returned to camp today, having completed its training yesterday. The men left their camp at Ocean Beach, near San Diego, at 6 o'clock this morning, and were in camp, nineteen miles away, in time for mess at noon.

BRITISH DESTROY THREE GERMAN AIRSHIP SHEDS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 20.—British seaplanes launched from navy vessels near the coast of Germany have dropped bombs on Teuton airship sheds at Tondern, in Schleswig, destroying two sheds and possibly a third building, the British Admiralty announced tonight.

Four machines of the British aerial squadron did not return, three landing in Danish territory. All the British warships returned to their base without any casualties.

In the first flight, which was made in the early morning, all the double shed, which was completely destroyed, the conflagration rising a thousand feet.

In the second flight all the machines but one reached their objectives. Bombs were dropped on two sheds, one having a large hole blown in it. It was impossible to observe whether the destructions of the second shed was complete. The attacks were made from a height of 700 to 1000 feet.

NORSE TO EQUIP AMBULANCE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

GREAT FALLS (Mont.) July 20.—After voting $10,000 with which to purchase and equip an ambulance and give it to the United States, the supreme lodge, Sons of Norway, has adjourned its convention here. The money will not only buy the vehicle and equip it, but will provide for salary of the driver and attending nurse, both of whom will be of Norwegian parentage.

BEGIN FIGHTING GERMANS NOW IS APPEAL TO CLASS ONE MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Provost-Marshal-General Crowder today issued an appeal to all men of class 1 calling upon them to begin now their preparation as soldiers and not wait until they actually have been called into camp.

"Regard yourselves as a selected fraternity of active patriots," says Gen. Crowder. "Encourage those who are weak. Inspire the indifferent. Inform the ignorant. Search out the slackers.

"Have you ever thought that our enemy is attacking us, not only in Europe, but at home? Have you realized that his especial trickery consists in seeking to make men disloyal here in our own country? Have you tried to discover and suppress the enemy's work here in the peaceful regions of our homes?

"It will take some time to make good soldiers out of you. The sooner you start, the sooner you will arrive."

Tar Desecrator of Service Flag.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

STAUNTON (Ill.) July 20.—William Kaulen, 30 years old, a miner, was tarred by a mob of more than 300 here today, after his wife had complained to the "vigilance committee" that Kaulen had desecrated a service flag hung in honor of her son by a former marriage.

REST AT THE CHATEAU LAKE LOUISE

Amid Swiss scenes in the Canadian Pacific Rockies—windows framing million dollar pictures of peaks and glaciers

"In the Lake, ever changing, is Beauty herself, as nearly visible to mortal eyes as she may ever be. The water, beyond the flowers, is green, always a different green. Then a little wind awakes in the distance and ruffles the surface, yard by yard, covering it with a myriad of tiny wrinkles, till the lake is milky emerald while the rest still sleeps. And at length the whole is astir and the sun catches it and Lake Louise is a web of laughter, the opal distillation of all the buds of all the Spring."

"SWAT SHARKS," SLOGAN OF DAY.

New Appeal for Signers to Anti-Usury Petitions is Issued.

When the Master of men was asked by the Pharisaical lawyer "which is the greatest commandment in the law?" he replied that the first is to "Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and continuing, He declared: "The second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

If you would not like to be taken advantage of by the usurer, the loan shark, show your interest in humanity by signing the anti-usury petition today. Today you may not need the protection of this law, but there are thousands upon thousands that do and many of them are mothers and wives of our soldiers and sailors who are fighting that our existence may be safe and secure.

If you have not signed the petition do so today. If you have signed, sit down and telephone at least ten of your friends. Carry a petition in your pocket and ask every acquaintance to sign.

If the Anti-Usury League can have the co-operation of every loyal citizen, success can be attained.

The league is looking for 3000 red-blooded Americans who will contribute $1 each to defray actual expenses in securing signatures. Send contribution to J. P. Steel, 324 Merchants' Trust Building, or in care of The Times.

Demonstrate your practical Christianity by signing the petition and giving just $1.

Glad to Try Anything.

"Three years ago my system was in a terribly run-down condition and I was broken out all over my body. I began to be worried about my condition and I was glad to try anything which would relieve me. Peruna was recommended to me as a fine blood remedy and tonic, and I soon found that it was worthy of praise. A few bottles changed my condition materially and in a short time I was all over my trouble. I owe my restoration to health and strength to Peruna. I am glad to indorse it."

BULLOCK'S DAY GREAT SUCCESS.

Throngs Fill the Red Cross Shops' Market.

"Jail" Holds Many Prominent Society People.

Big Amount will be Netted for War Work.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

"Let joy be unconfined!" This seemed to be the spirit which animated the entire programme, yesterday, Bullock's day at the Red Cross Shop, at Eighth and Alvarado streets. From the earliest hour—9 o'clock—when the markets opened, throughout the hours of the afternoon and evening, the thrill of genuine merriment, happiness without flaw, seemed to permeate the air.

There were features enough to keep thousands entertained, and thousands were there to be amused. The booths containing merchandise were thronged with buyers who either "paddled" for their favorite article, purchased it "blind," like a pig in a poke, paying the amount asked and selecting a package by reason of its shape, or drawing by some other jolly means.

To pass the length of the long line of gay booths was to sue at the shrine of the Goddess "Chance," and to win was to secure something of real worth.

THE POPULAR PIE.

The pie booths were extremely popular, as also were the cake emporiums. Jams, jellies, preserves—all of the best home-made varieties—came in for a full share of favor, many a lucky handbag, starting homeward stuffed to overflowing with the goodies won.

The "jail" was the center of much revelry, as one after another popular guest was arrested, and thrust within its merry confines. W. H. Holt was found guilty of writing the greatest boost for Bullock's ever printed, and had to promise faithfully not to write another line until early Monday morning; Herbert Bigelow was accused of having impersonated a waitress at a recent Red Cross affair and was allowed out on parole long enough to prove himself a true Hooverite by drinking his iced tea with only one lump.

DANCING IN STREET.

The theater, built for the occasion, was crowded to capacity from the hour of its first performance until closing time at night, and the scintillance of prime favorites from the vaudeville circuit and from the many theaters and film companies in and around Los Angeles would have done credit to a carnival in Gotham. The tea room was filled at all times and the cabaret was extremely popular throughout.

Dancing, which began at 6 o'clock, the street being roped off for the purpose, continued during the evening without interruption, save for the auctioning off of some alluring premium, the auctioneer being a film star or some other celebrity.

Were anyone asked what he or she considered the prime feature of the day the answer would be: "All of the things which that individual saw or took part in; which means that everybody was happy in his or her own particular way.

The amount netted for the Red Cross cannot be determined for a day or two, when all accounts are cast up. That it will meet, if not exceed, all expectations there is no doubt.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for a few cents. Try it!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

DANIEL INNES DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

FORMER COUNCILMAN AND PIONEER REALTY MAN PASSES AT HIS HOME HERE.

Daniel Innes, for a third of a century a resident of Los Angeles, and widely known through Southern California, died last night, after an illness of more than a year. He was in his eighty-third year. The funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the chapel of Booth & Fitch, No. 1201 South Hope street, and the interment will be in Rosedale Cemetery.

Mr. Innes was a native of Lierg, Scotland, but came to America when a lad of 14 years, locating in Buffalo. In 1865 he went to Chicago and established a dry goods business, and in 1869 he established a large dry goods store at Elgin, Ill. In 1871 he went to Lawrence, Kan., and with his brother, George Innes, established the dry goods house of George Innes & Co., widely known in the eastern part of that State.

Coming to Los Angeles in 1885, Mr. Innes at once became interested in real estate development, and was instrumental in the opening and development of various tracts on Angeleno Heights. He served as member of the City Council of Los Angeles in 1891. For several years he has lived a retired life, and for the last two years his home had been at the Alvarado Terrace Hotel.

Besides the widow, he leaves three children, Mrs. Willard J. Doran, wife of the vice-president of the Citizens' National Bank; Walter P. Innes, president of the Innes Dry Goods Company of Wichita, Kan., and William A. Innes of the Innes Shoe Company of this city.

He will be greeted by a chamber committee headed by President Mueller and will be tendered a luncheon at the Jonathan Club Wednesday noon.

BELGIANS CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE DAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Belgians will celebrate their eighty-seventh independence day tomorrow. Word came to the legation here today that the Belgian civil population, forbidden open manifestations of patriotism, will celebrate in their hearts, while the army will observe the day by killing as many Boches as possible. Brussels was fined $10,000,000 by the Germans the last time a public celebration was held.

Recognition will be given the holiday in many Allied countries. Cuba's Congress has voted to make July 21 its own national fete day, in honor of the Belgians.

RECRUITING LIVELY IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20.—The American successes in France have stimulated recruiting greatly in this city, army officials report.

An average of seventy-five a day in the last few days was recorded by the army, while the marines enlistments were four times as numerous as before the drive.

Ex-Swiss Consul.

STREIFF DENIES REPORT OF UNNEUTRAL ACTIVITY.

G. A. STREIFF of No. 518 North Hill street, formerly Swiss Consul at Auckland, New Zealand, says that he has suffered considerable embarrassment and inconvenience through the recent publication of statements regarding purported political activities on his part that would have been unbecoming for a member of the consular force of a neutral country.

Mr. Streiff yesterday made a statement which, in substance, is as follows:

For four years he was Swiss Consul at Auckland, although he and members of his family had lived in that country for twelve years. In 1916 he obtained leave of absence for eighteen months, and came to the United States for a visit. He first located in San Francisco, and then came to Los Angeles, and was so pleased with this locality that he purchased a small ranch and decided to make Los Angeles his home, and sent in his resignation as Swiss Consul inside of twelve months after receiving his leave of absence.

He then took out his first papers as an American citizen, being in full accord with the ideals and purposes of this country. In this position, says Mr. Streiff, he felt at liberty to give expression of his feeling of deep sympathy for Italy and its cause in the present war, and his purpose of making inquiries here—the incident on which the article published was based—was simply to offer his services as an attache of any American contingent that might be going to Italy, as he believed he could be of use in inspiriting the Italian troops.

Mr. Streiff states that he had previously lived many years in Italy, and having been born on the border line between that country and Switzerland, is fully conversant with the Italian mode of life and thought and has full command of the Italian language. He states that he had been a captain in the Swiss army, and that this rank and his former position as a member of the consular staff he felt would have been of advantage in giving him opportunity to help inspirit the Italian troops at a time when they appeared to be in need of rallying influences.

Mr. Streiff says that his sympathies are entirely with this country and with Italy in the present war, and he only regrets that he cannot take active service as an officer in one of these armies.

"READY-CUT" SCHOOLS.

With shipbuilding activities drawing hundreds of new residents to Long Beach, the school trustees of the beach city have been kept on the jump providing for the increased enrollment. As a solution to the housing problem, the Long Beach school board has just placed a large order for ready-cut school buildings with the Pacific Portable Construction Company of this city, and the buildings will be erected ready for occupancy several weeks before the beginning of school in September. The Long Beach board has purchased a number of these houses from time to time for several years past, it is said.

Trust Me! Try Dodson's Liver Tone! Calomel Harms Liver and Bowels

Read my guarantee! Liven your liver and bowels and get straightened up without taking sickening calomel. Don't lose a day's work!

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

A Home Is a House With Love and Furniture and a Lamp in It

A Little Different View of the Emergency Sale of Furniture

Back of the trenches stand the soldiers; back of the soldiers are the supplies; back of the supplies are the ships, and back of the ships are the men—and the women—who make the supplies and who make the ships.

This is the vast machinery of war—fighters and workers and workers and fighters

But there is more to the story—

Back of the workers stands the HOME.

That is where the war is won—in the great American HOME.

Ships have to build on the shores of deep waterways. Munitions to be shipped abroad also should be made at tidewater.

Philadelphia offered the greatest shipbuilding and munition-making field in America—and to Philadelphia came the shipbuilders and the munition-workers—thousands and tens of thousands. To build ships and cannon and engines, to make shells and aircraft and bombs and mines.

They came to work, and to work they must live, and to live they must have their HOMES.

A HOME is a house with love and furniture and a lamp in it.

Up and down the Delaware and the Schuylkill and the Lehigh they have been building houses for workers all through the Winter and Spring. Now a large number of the houses are ready to be turned into homes. The men who came on ahead began sending for their wives — their homemakers.

The wives began looking around for furniture to put into the new houses.

So we said: We will not wait until August, the usual date for our great Furniture Sale, but we will hold it now, so that these new citizens of Philadelphia may have their good, new furniture at once, and all the advantages of our Furniture Sale savings as well.

We had on hand and available in special purchases $2,000,000 worth of furniture — mostly for homes. There were 16,000 pieces on the floors.

We reduced all of it—put on new price tags showing 10 to 50 per cent reductions—average reduction of 33 per cent.

We made a full-powered August Sale of furniture out of it, and that means the greatest Furniture Sale in the world.

The selling, of course, is large, for not only the shipbuilders and their wives are making new homes, but thousands of old residents are refurnishing. They realize that now is the time when prices are low and woods are sound and workmanship fine. We don't know when we can get a stock so fine again—with so many furniture manufacturers turning over to war work.

But for this once at least we can supply the homes of the war-workers as well as our old customers.

Back of the trenches the soldiers; back of the soldiers the ships, back of the ships the workers, back of the workers the HOME—

IDEAS

There is no such thing as a monopoly of IDEAS. Good IDEAS come from many sources.

Some of the very best IDEAS appear in the advertisements of stores and manufacturers.

It seems a shame that IDEAS which have universal appeal must often be lost to the people of the world outside the immediate community where they find expression.

As a sample of IDEAS which we think are worthy of preservation in the hearts and minds of all the people there is reproduced in our advertising today a heart-gripping appeal made by John Wanamaker's store in Philadelphia.

It is a bit unusual to copy in its entirety some other store's advertising, but in this case it carries so stirring an appeal that we think the people of Southern California will be glad to get the point of view so well presented.

These Wanamaker ideas we heartily indorse, and are carrying them out in the territory we serve.

Introducing

PANEL CURTAINS in OUR GREAT ANNUAL SALE

Just because they're so very new that many persons do not know about them — and so very charming that everybody will be glad to know about them—we've put sharp reductions on Panel Curtains for this week of the Sale.

These curtains are of filmy Voile, Scrim or Marquisette, embellished with filet squares, embroidery, insertions, edgings, etc., in clever panel effect—the very latest idea in window decoration!

Most of these curtains can barely be detected, at a little distance, from real lace. In many cases, a single curtain is sufficient for a window. Numbers of persons are choosing Panel Curtains to use as Bed Spreads—and very lovely ones they are!

Many, many styles at nine special prices—regular $4.00 to $11.50 single curtains, now: $2.90 to $8.25.

SOUTHLAND TO HAVE GOOD TRAIN SERVICE.

RAILROADS IN FINE SHAPE, SAYS HOLDEN—MAY UNITE TERMINALS HERE.

Adequate train service to handle all tourist and other traffic to Southern California will be provided during the coming season, according to Hale Holden, regional director of railroads under Director-General McAdoo, who left Pasadena yesterday morning for Salt Lake City and Ogden. Mr. Holden had just completed a hurried survey of transportation matters in this section.

"The outlook for the coming fall and winter is much brighter than last year," he said. "Not only has the equipment of the railroads been added to, but the efficiency of the railroads as a whole has been greatly increased by the elimination of waste. They are in a position to handle more business than before and with less congestion than before. Basing my prediction on present indications, I can say positively that Southern California need have no fear in regard to railroad facilities for handling tourist travel next fall and winter. Of course, when a nation is at war, there is no telling what developments will be. So far as we can see now there will be plenty of passenger trains to handle all traffic, without sacrificing the comfort or convenience of those traveling."

Mr. Holden said three different plans, any one of which will mean the closing of the Salt Lake and Santa Fe depots in Los Angeles and the using of the Southern Pacific Arcade depot by all three roads, are under consideration.

"It will be possibly two weeks or more before we know definitely whether it will be feasible to have the three roads use the one Los Angeles station," said he. "If it is found feasible recommendations will be sent to Washington, and official approval of the plan will be forthcoming. Another important change now under consideration is the use of the Salt Lake and Southern Pacific roads between Los Angeles and Colton, a distance of sixty-five miles, as one double track line. The roadbeds parallel each other. During busy seasons there is a congestion of freight on the single track lines, whereas there would be no such congestion if the two were operated as one double-track line."

PUT ON PROBATION FOR PASSING BOGUS CHECK.

C. E. Rockford was granted two years' probation and given into the custody of his mother by Judge McCormick yesterday, following a plea of guilty to having tendered a fictitious check for $20 on February 11 to C. D. Kline and A. E. Ellington, which was signed "M. D. Nolan."

The court was lenient with the prisoner because of his serious illness, he having been an inmate of the County Hospital since his arrest.

POMONA MAN STRICKEN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, July 20.—James Thompson of Pomona, visiting at the beach, was stricken with apoplexy this morning while walking along the front. He was taken to St. Catherine's Hospital, where his condition this evening was reported as being greatly improved. His attack followed quickly after Thompson's receipt of a message stating that his son, fighting under the Allied colors in France, had been seriously wounded.

Peculiar.

TAKES WEALTHY WOMAN TO JAIL.

Alleged Guardian Brings Her Here from Arizona.

She is Wife of that State's First Congressman.

Fears "Violence," Man Asserts; Police Investigate.

Alleged to be one of the wealthiest women of Arizona, Mrs. Carmelita Campbell, 88 years old, wife of J. S. Campbell, the first Congressman from Arizona, was placed in the City Jail yesterday by Charles B. Christy. The latter told the police, before he registered at the Hayward Hotel, with his wife and daughter, that he is the guardian of the aged woman and that she is suffering from hallucinations and other mental derangements.

Among Mrs. Campbell's effects, a short note, which read as follows, was found by Policewoman Georgiana Robinson:

"To whom it may concern—This is to certify that Mrs. Carmelita Campbell owns 79,775 shares of stock in the Carmelita Mining and Milling Company and this same stock was turned over to Thomas B. Christy, her guardian, by J. A. Marr."

The note is dated July 8, 1918, and is signed by Mrs. James Hill, who, the police believe, is a sister and a secretary of J. A. Marr, president of the Carmelita Mining and Milling Company at Wenden, Ariz.

WILL PRODUCE PAPERS.

When asked who Thomas B. Christy is and where his own papers showing that is the guardian of Mrs. Campbell, are, Charles B. Christy last night told the police that he did not know Thomas B. Christy, and added that he would produce papers to show his authority over the aged woman.

After a lengthy investigation by Officers McAuley, Neighbors and Policewoman Robinson, Mrs. Campbell was adjudged by them to be worthy of better quarters than the matron's ward in the jail and she was accordingly transferred to the home of C. Pickenbach, No. 2820 Menlo avenue. Mrs. Campbell told the police of the latter family, saying she had known Mr. and Mrs. Pickenbach for many years. Mr. Pickenbach willingly took the aged woman under his care, after receiving orders from the police that no one be allowed to move her from his home.

The Carmelita Mining and Milling Company is one of the big producers of Arizona, and is located near Phoenix. J. A. Marr is president. The police last night wired him for information concerning Mrs. Campbell.

According to the police, Mrs. Campbell, in the care of her supposed guardian, Charles B. Christy, was met at the Santa Fe station by Officer McAuley, who took her to the matron's ward at Central Station and placed her in the care of Matron McPeek.

FROM PHOENIX CHIEF.

The train detail was made upon the receipt of a telegram alleged to have been sent from Phoenix, Ariz., and signed by "J. J. McGrath, acting Chief of Police." Christy, though apparently unable to show papers proving his statement that he was appointed guardian of Mrs. Campbell by the Arizona Superior Court, stated that the wire message was sent by the "acting Chief of Police" in an effort to help him care for the woman.

According to Christy's statements, Mrs. Campbell was deserted several years ago by her husband and since then has been mentally unbalanced. Though suffering from senility, Mrs. Campbell, the local police say, is in her right mind and shows no signs of insanity.

Christy was invited to appear at Central Station before Police Captain David Adams and explain why he had had the aged woman placed in jail while he himself registered at a large hotel. Christy appeared and stated that he was afraid Mrs. Campbell would become "violent."

POLICE WOULD "SUFFER."

Reporters who questioned Christy were told by him that if the newspapers published the story of Mrs. Campbell's detention in the City Jail while he himself registered at a prominent hotel, the "Los Angeles police department would be greatly damaged by the public dissemination of such knowledge, and it alone would suffer."

Although Christy arrived with Mrs. Campbell at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, he did not go with her to the police station nor did he appear there, though sent for by Capt. Adams, till nearly 6 o'clock. The alleged "guardian" admitted to the police, it is said, that he had borrowed sums of money from Mrs. Campbell, but would not tell how much. He said that he had brought her to Los Angeles because she could not stand the heat of the Arizona summer. He added that he intended placing her in a sanitarium.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Campbell is happy in the home of her friends and will be kept there by the police till further information concerning her is received by the police in answer to telegrams dispatched to Arizona last night.

BOUGHT CERTIFICATES, SAYS BANKER HARRIS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, July 20.—In further controversion of the statement emanating from San Francisco that the banks of the Santa Monica bay district had not purchased a single certificate of indebtedness in the last bi-weekly issue. Cashier R. B. Harris of the First National Bank states that his institution placed an order for a $3000 block of the last issue. He stated further that his bank had taken portions of previous issues and was arranging to subscribe for other issues in regular course.

The Clearinghouse at a recent meeting discussed the question of the purchase of these certificates but took no action further than to recommend that each bank buy individually to the extent of its ability, without disturbing local financial conditions. Banks at the beach are not making loans, nor are they working hardships upon clients by making hurried calling of loans matured or nearing maturity.

WILLING TO KILL ENEMY BROTHER

Naturalized Austrian Says He is Fighting for Liberty and that's Enough.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP KEARNY, July 20.—"I'm fighting for liberty, and if my brother hasn't got sense enough to be fighting with me, I guess I'd have to kill him."

So said a native of Austria, a soldier in the Fortieth Division, naturalized, at a special session of court here recently. He was answering a hypothetical question put by A. E. Eldregde, naturalization examiner, as to what he would do if he met his brother, an Austrian soldier, in battle.

When the Austrian and German groups of alien soldiers came before the court, searching questions, different from those put to other aliens, were asked. A typical set, with the answers, follows:

"You were born in Germany?" "Yes."

"Got any relatives in the German army?" "Three brothers."

"If you were fighting in the American army and met those brothers face to face, what would you do?" "I guess I'd have to kill them."

One man, who said he had three brothers serving in the Austrian army, hesitated long at the last question. After five minutes, Mr. Eldregde said, "I guess we'll have to eliminate this man."

The presiding judge intervened. "If he really thinks he can do his duty in battle as an American citizen, even if he meets those brothers, he can be naturalized," he said.

"I will do it," said the man. He was naturalized.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE FOR ALLIED PEOPLE.

REV. F. M. SILSBY TO SPEAK THIS EVENING IN IMMANUEL PRESBYTERIAN.

A patriotic religious service for the people of the Allied nations will be held this evening in Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Tenth and Figueroa streets. Rev. Frank M. Silsby, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Oakland, will preach on "The Single Eye of America and Her Allies."

Guests of honor will be Scotch, English, French, Italian and Belgian residents of the city. Dr. Silsby will make a stern arraignment of the pro-German, pious pacifists and the slacker bridegrooms, and will discuss what is required of a 100 per cent. American. He will quote a letter received by a California mother from her son in service in France, who said: "Don't worry, mother. We will fight like hell," and he will tell why the Americans are going over the top to victory.

Dr. Silsby is a great favorite with the soldiers at the Presidio and at Camp Fremont. He was the orator at the Fourth of July assemblage of 12,000 people in Oakland, and has been invited by the Scotch societies of the city to speak at the Scotch memorial service in honor of the heroism of the Scots who have fought four years in the present war.

SHOULD FIND HIMSELF.

Man Who Had Reputation for Recovering Lost Articles Seems to be Mislaid.

A telepathic message was sent by Detective-Lieutenant Chapman yesterday to Bert Tindle, 38 years old, of San Pedro, to find himself. Tindle, who was known ten years ago as the world's greatest finder of missing articles, is said by the police to be lost.

He is described as being six feet one inch tall, weighing 180 pounds, having dark brown eyes, black hair, swarthy complexion and of slender build.

Inasmuch as Tindle has the reputation for being able to discover any lost article, Lieut. Chapman suggested that a telepathic or wireless message be sent to the man to find himself and so aid the police.

IS HUNDRED-A-WEEK WIFE A DEPENDENT?

QUESTION ARISES IN ARREST OF TWO OVER DRAFT QUESTIONNAIRE.

A. Burton Hawley, a telephone employee, and his wife, Wanda Hawley, the latter a moving-picture actress, were taken into custody yesterday afternoon by Deputy United States Marshal O'Leary, following their indictment in the morning by the Federal grand jury on a charge of perjury in relation to Hawley's questionnaire. They were arrested at their home, No. 4426 Sunset boulevard.

It is alleged that Hawley stated on his questionnaire that he was the sole support of his wife, and that the latter made an affidavit that she was dependent upon him, whereas, it is asserted, she was at the time making $75 a week and is now in receipt of a salary of $100 a week. One of her recent engagements, it is stated, was in support of Douglas Fairbanks.

Hawley was queried about the questionnaire last May, and at that time indicated his willingness to go into the army. He was examined by a physician and rejected on physical grounds. Later on it was arranged that he should enter the limited service and he was accepted in that capacity. He had not yet been called for work, however.

The two were held in bond of $1500, which was promptly furnished by a local surety company.

DISCUSS FUMIGATION AT COVINA MEETING.

FIVE HUNDRED RANCHERS ATTEND AND SEE PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATIONS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COVINA, July 20.—A full day spent in the discussion of the fumigation of citrus trees was spent by over 500 ranchers and families at the High School building today, under the direction of the County Farm Bureau. Dr. H. J. Quayle of the citrus experiment station, Horticultural Commissioner William Wood of Los Angeles county, Prof. Woglum of the United States Department of Agriculture, Prof. Condit and Prof. Hodgson and several horticultural inspectors participated.

A practical demonstration was held in the groves, showing the strides taken in the past year in the perfection of fumigating machinery. A full account of the day's events will appear in an early issue of Farm and Tractor. It will be prepared by Prof. Hodgson of the County Farm Bureau.

CLASS ONE LIST IS ALMOST EXHAUSTED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, July 20.—With the thirteen men of class one entraining on Monday for the mobilization camp at Camp Lewis, Chairman Lanterman of the local board announces that all men of this class from this district have been exhausted with the exception of those whose calls have been deferred because of agricultural work.

With the next induction these agricultural workers will have to be taken, says Mr. Lanterman. After them will come the 1918 class. The men to leave on Monday will go under the captaincy of Francis L. Sherwood.

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, July 20.—Fire bells, church bells, whistles on cars, trains and on steamships made an inspiring chorus at 1 o'clock this afternoon when, in accordance with the proclamation of acting-Mayor Farmer, the victory of the Allied forces in France was celebrated. Practically every instrument in the harbor district capable of making a noise was used in the celebration, which lasted three minutes.

SANTA ANA MEN SAFE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, July 20.—Louis G. Willits and Ted Waters, members of the crew of the United States cruiser San Diego, are "safe in port," according to telegrams received by their parents this afternoon from Hoboken, N. J. Waters is the son of Dr. E. H. Waters of No. 2002 North Broadway, and Willits is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Willits, No. 512 South Van Ness avenue. Willits was a fireman, first class, on the sunken warship, and Waters was a radio operator.

CITY CLUB HAS ANOTHER TREE.

It's an Oak and is Planted in Griffith Park.

Annual Ceremony Follows Basket Lunch.

Commissioner Tells About Landscape Effect.

The City Club held its annual tree-planting ceremonies yesterday. After a basket lunch at the Griffith picnic grounds and speeches by Park Commissioner Ernest Braunton and John S. Myers, the twenty-three members of the party motored up the mountain drive and planted a live oak a little beyond the crest.

This is the fifth oak tree the City Club has planted on the Western avenue boundary of Griffith Park, the custom being to plant one each year, a mile apart. The Friday Morning Club is carrying out a similar plan on Los Feliz road boundary, and in a few years the two organizations will meet.

Mr. Myers yesterday paid a tribute to Dr. W. S. Clark, chairman of the Tree Planting Committee of the club, who died recently. Mr. Braunton spoke on shade trees.

"Primarily, what we should seek in street planting here is ornament," he said, "with as much or little shade as we are forced to accept in order to secure effective beauty and embellishment. In a country so naturally treeless and with almost perpetual sunshine, the lights and shadows of street trees with their softening and harmonizing effect in mellowing into the landscape the harsh, monotonous lines of architecture and broad expanse of pavement and sidewalk, is fully as gratifying as the shade they provide.

"Our most common fault in street tree planting lies in the use of too many trees and too many sorts. It is just as absurd to change the sort of tree with every successive lot frontage planted as would be the case were the color of sidewalk and street curb changed correspondingly.

"Many prospective planters ask, what is the ideal street tree? One who has made a long study of the subject is forced to observe that the phrase is meaningless as commonly used. No tree will meet all the requirements of the majority of planters. Trees, like human beings, possess individuality and are as prone to grow unlike each other as the same number of individuals in any branch or division of animate nature.

"The ideal street tree is the one which presents, individually and collectively, the best appearance, at all seasons, for all time. Initial cost and care for the first few years really are of minor importance, for the extremes are not great and often extra money spent in the earlier stages of the work returns interest a hundred-fold."

COLLECTOR CARTER AT HIS DESK TOMORROW.

Collector of Internal Revenue Carter, after a distressing illness of a month, growing out of too close attention to the income tax campaign, expects to be at his office in the Federal Building tomorrow morning. In the preparation of the present tax law, Collector Carter was consulted by many of the Washington officials, and it is probable that the experience will be repeated at the present juncture.

The necessities of the government make it certain that the income tax levy will be increased, so as to raise nearly five and a half times as much money as was secured from the collections just closed. This means that with past collections aggregating $18,000,000 in the local internal revenue district, the sum to be contributed by the proposed new law in this district will not be less than $40,000,000.

PAINTING ON EXHIBIT.

A painting by Titian, "The Raising of Lazarus from the Dead," has been secured for a limited exhibition by Barker Bros., at their store on Broadway. The owner of the painting, W. Crawford Anderson, has arranged to be at the store during its showing, between the hours of 10 and 12 in the mornings and from 2 to 5 in the afternoons for the purpose of personally explaining the features of the art treasure.

FAMOUS HUN "TAUBE" TO BE EXHIBITED HERE.

Machines that Bombed Unprotected Cities Part of Big War Display.

Four German airplanes, one of them a monster 160 horse power battle plane used by the Germans to bomb unfortified cities, will be shown at Exposition Park during the Allied War Exposition to be held there from August 1 to 11. Trophies from the battlefields of Europe and Asia and scenes from the devastation in No Man's Land are some of the other interesting sights to be witnessed when this exhibit is staged.

The exposition is under the auspices of the United States government. Fred C. Spaulding, representative of the bureau of expositions of the Committee on Public Information, reached Los Angeles yesterday and this week will prepare the setting for what is said to be the most interesting and educational exhibit of war scenes direct from the battlefields that is in existence.

"This is the most unusual educational exhibit the United States government has ever sent out," said Mr. Spaulding yesterday. "This is not a carnival to entertain, but an exhibit to instruct. Mothers and fathers may bring their children, as old and young will learn things during this exhibit that could be brought to them in no other manner.

SAMPLE ARMY MESS.

"One of the many striking features is the army mess served under the direction of the Commissary Department of the United States government, where a regular army meal is served to the public. The food is identical with that which our soldiers over there receive regularly and the mess kits are used by the public in partaking of this meal.

"Among the captured German airplanes is a monster bombing plane of the Taube type. Other airplanes are an Albatross and Fokker type which will bring vividly before the people the horrors that have been brought to the women and children in the unfortified cities of France, Belgium and England.

"We are assured of the co-operation of local organizations, such as the American Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A., the Knights of Columbus, the Jewish Welfare Board, the Food Conservation Committee, the War Savings Board, the Belgian War Relief, the British Ambulance Society, the Boy Scouts of American, the Canadian Society, the Allies Aid Society, the Woman's Committee Council of National and State Defense and several other local organizations which I expect to get in touch with this week.

"It is our plan to construct an amphitheater which will hold at least 100,000 persons. We shall prepare for a great throng, as wherever we have visited the cities we have found the public eager to see this remarkable exhibit of war trophies. There are eighteen carloads of war trophies and pictures which are soon to arrive in Los Angeles."

Arrangements have been made for a monster parade which will introduce to the public the fact that the exhibit is here. Headquarters have been opened at No. 719 South Hill street formerly the headquarters of the Red Cross during the recent war fund drive, where representatives of the government will be on hand every day to give what information is necessary in connection with the exhibit.

Champ S. Vance, vice-president of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, has been chosen assistant director of the exhibit, and in the absence of Director Bernal Dyas, who is in San Francisco, Mr. Vance has arranged for the parade which is to mark the opening of the exposition. Associated with him are Motley H. Flint, treasurer, and W. E. Bush, who will arrange for the transportation of the trainload of exhibits.

Late last night Mr. Vance received a telegram from Director Dyas asking him to go to San Francisco, and Mr. Vance left last night for the northern city.

MANY WAR TROPHIES.

H. Wesley Curtis, representative of the Allied War Exposition, who also is here as advance agent for the bureau of expositions of the Committee on Public Information, in speaking of the exhibit to be held at Exposition Park, said:

"This exhibit consists of something like 3000 trophies and implements of war captured and collected on the battlefields of Belgium, France, Italy, Turkey, the Holy Land and the Far East. Among the interesting features is one of the guns formerly mounted on the famous German raider Emden. German torpedoes and German mines of every description will be on exhibition.

"Missions of the Belgian, French, British, Italian and Canadian governments, by direct appointment, have been co-operating with the American government in making this one of the most interesting and at the same time educational exhibits ever shown. There also will be the original thirty-ton tank Britannia sent by the British government. This tank is one of the fleet which performed sensational service in the drive of Gen. Bing when he took the Germans by surprise. It will be seen first in Los Angeles moving under its own power from the freight yards to Exposition grounds. The tank will be preceded by the United States Military Band.

"In addition to the trophies there will be shown 4000 photographs, posters and original paintings and unique scenes from Northern France and Belgium. The different medals awarded by the Allied governments for service on the field of battle will be shown. Everybody should see this splendid exhibit."

Germans Forced Out.

BRITISH CAPTURE STRONG POINT, PRISONERS, GUNS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, July 20.—The Germans under heavy pressure have been forced to withdraw from Rossignol Wood, between Hebuterne and Bucquoy, and this strategically important position is now in the hands of the British. This announcement was made tonight in the official statement from the War Office.

The text of the communication says:

"During the day our minor operations in the Hebuterne sector have been continued with success. Under the pressure of our troops, the enemy has been compelled to withdraw from Rossignol Wood, between Hebuterne and Bucquoy and this important local feature is now in our possession. The enemy was followed up closely by our troops and suffered a number of casualties.

"Our total capture in yesterday's operations at Meteren amounted to 453 prisoners, ten trench mortars and fifty machine guns."

Nets Five Thousand.

Film stars, stage favorites and society matrons and damsels turned out in large numbers yesterday afternoon and evening for the most brilliant entertainment and dance ever held in the ballroom of the Alexandria. The occasion was a benefit given for the sailors at the Submarine Base. The proceeds, estimated at nearly $5000, will be used for the erection of a first-class gymnasium for the sailors at the training school and the purchase of the necessary equipment.

As usual when there is a benefit staged or an entertainment given, members of the motion-picture profession were called upon, and, with the exception of the Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives, they never worked with more zeal, assuring the success of the affair even before it started.

Long before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the tables around the dance floor were crowded. Sharply on the hour, the band from the Submarine Base struck up the national air and the affair was on. Between dances the features were held, consisting of monologues by headliners from the Orpheum and Pantages circuits, vaudeville stars, spending vacations in Southern California, and commedians from the different film studios.

During the matinee part of the entertainment, the following features were given: Operatic solo, Anna Hesse-Sprotte; Apache and modern dancing, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Fowler from the Ship Cafe; music and dance numbers, Kathleen Clifford and Master Lloyd; Caucasian ballet under the direction of Ernest Belcher and others.

Under the direction of Generalissimo D. C. Livingston, there was not a dull moment from the opening to the close.

It was during the evening's performance that the real carnival spirit became evident. Before 9 o'clock it was seen that the ballroom would not be large enough to accommodate the crowds which clamored for admittance, so Assistant Manager Sibbald of the Alexandria, threw open the main dining-room and for the last three hours of the benefit two entertainments were in full swing.

M'ADOO AFOOT HEADS VICTORY CELEBRATORS

SCHWAB ALSO IN LINE, LEADING SHIP WORKERS IN BIG SEATTLE DEMONSTRATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, July 20.—Marching on foot, Director-General of Railroads McAdoo, Mrs. McAdoo and Director-General Schwab of the Emergency Fleet Corporation led a parade of 10,000 overall-clad shipyard workers through the downtown section here late today, in honor of the American victories in the Franco-American offensive.

The shipyard workers assembled for the parade on finishing the day's work and were accompanied by their own bands. Both Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo and Mr. Schwab were cheered by thousands who lined the streets.

SAN FRANCISCO CELEBRATES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20.—The Franco-American victory on the Marne was celebrated here today with a community sing in a public square at noon, and a big parade of citizens and automobiles, headed by city officials and an escort of police, this evening. French and American flags were displayed throughout the city.

The meeting in the public square was featured by patriotic addresses and the singing of French and American national airs. During the parade whistles and bells created a din that could be heard on the outskirts of the city.

HAYES SPEAKS IN PLAZA AT SAN DIEGO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, July 20.—J. O. Hayes of San Jose, candidate for Governor, addressed a great crowd tonight at the Plaza, emphasizing his slogan, "Water, and lots of it, makes California support 10,000,000 people." Advocating the cutting of the many State commissions of the present regime and running the State on a business basis rather than a political machine, as done now, he made a talk that was warmly applauded by the great crowd gathered in the Plaza and on the streets to hear him.

SOLDIERS HAVE VARIED TASTES.

Call for Potatoes and Onions at Camps Show Big Difference.

Just what value potatoes and onions have, in comparison with other foods, in the making of a soldier, has not been determined by the United States War Department; but the bids for these supplies for August, which closed yesterday, show a great diversity in the tastes of the soldiers themselves.

Camp Dix, N. J., which is largely an embarkation camp, leads all the rest in its call for both potatoes and onions. Perhaps this is because the soldiers there want to feed up on vegetables just before goin overseas, where they think canned goods will be a principal diet. Camp Dix wants 1,500,000 pounds of potatoes and 1,120,000 pounds of onions for August. The smallest call for potatoes comes from Camp McClellan, Ala., which wants only 100,000 pounds. The smallest onion eating camp is Port Preble, Me., with a demand for only 6500 pounds.

Camp Kearny and Camp Lewis are modest in their likes for both vegetables. The former wants 815,000 pounds of potatoes and 75,000 pounds of onions. Camp Lewis asks for 750,000 pounds of potatoes and 60,000 of onions.

INDORSES WOOLWINE.

E. L. Doheny Says Present is No Time for Giving Power to Extremists.

Because he believes Thomas Lee Woolwine to be the "only real Democrat" in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor of California, E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, in his first statement on the California political situation since his return from Washington and New York, gave to Harry W. Elliott, secretary of the Woolwine-for-Governor Committee, his unqualified indorsement of Mr. Woolwine's candidacy, in an interview yesterday.

Mr. Doheny told Mr. Elliott that this was no time to place any power in the hands of extremists. Partiotism was the keynote of the interview, and he spoke with true appreciation of the principles of democracy and the democratic form of government, pointing out the necessity of guarding with jealous care the equilibrum of this democracy at this pivotal period in our history.

BOY IS MISSING.

Daniel O'Brien has Disappeared with His Father's Auto, and Accident May Have Befallen Him.

The police have been asked to locate Daniel O'Brien, 15 years old, who has been missing since Thursday morning from his home at No. 1540 West Twenty-eighth street, with a Ford automobile bearing California license number 218561, belonging to the boy's father, Daniel T. O'Brien, a contractor and builder.

The boy took the machine from in front of a building at Ninth and Crocker streets on Thursday morning, while his father was working in the building. The boy gave some boy friends a day at the beach, and was due to return at 5 o'clock to take his father home, but he has not been seen since.

The father fears that Daniel may have started for the fruit orchards to pick fruit, and that an accident may have befallen him.

The boy graduated from the Pico school. He is large for his age and has a heavy auburn hair. When he left home he was dressed in a gray suit, with a gray and green plaid cap. He had no money and there was only two gallons of gasoline in the car.

PARTITION SUIT FILED.

A suit in partition was filed yesterday by the Arcadia Bandini Baker Estate Company against J. B. Proctor, R. W. Poindexter, Juan B. Bandini and thirty other defendants claiming an interest. They are asked to set out their claims and the court is asked to determine adverse claims. The De Baker estate was valued at $6,000,000 and has passed through the probate court.

CHANGES NAME.

Dal Jeffries, former world champion bag puncher, whose real name is Dal E. Hook, and who petitioned the courts to change it to Jeffries, had his petition granted by Presiding Judge Wellborn yesterday. The name of Hook became distasteful since the war because he said it is of Teutonic derivation.

AMBULANCE SOCIETY TEA.

At a tea to be given by the British Ambulance Society at their rooms in the Westminster Hotel on Tuesday afternoon the following artists will appear: Mrs. Dalton Davis, contralto; Miss Llewellyn Goughty, soprano; Mrs. Hawkins-Ambler, piano. Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. Percy Sewell and Mrs. Montague Jephcott, assisted by Miss Juliette Groxall and Miss Edna Boggeman.

SAILOR WEDS NURSE.

Charles Tucker, a sailor in the navy, now here on furlough from New York, and Helen Jacqua, a nurse at the French Hospital, were married yesterday noon by the Rev. James I. Myers at his home at the Alhambra apartments. Mr. Tucker is returning East to duty early next week.

STILL DOING BUSINESS.

Roberts's Groceryteria at No. 6119 Moneta avenue was open and ready for business yesterday morning in spite of the fact that it had been menaced by a fire which raged fiercely in the block earlier in the morning. F. J. Roberts, proprietor of the store, says that the effective efforts of Firemen Miller and Mason prevented the fire from doing much more damage than it did.

RIGHT TO PASTURAGE INVOLVED IN CONTEST.

AUTHORITY OF RANCH FOREMAN TO GIVE LEASE, QUESTION BEFORE COURT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA BARBARA, July 20.—Contest over right to pasture cattle on a portion of the San Julian Rancho in this county is involving Eduardo de la Cuesta of Lompoc and the C. H. and O. B. Fuller Company in a much-tangled lawsuit, in the Superior Court.

Eduardo claims the pasturage right under a lease from J. A. Johnsen, foreman on the ranch for the Armstrong Holdings Company. LeRoy Armstrong of Pasadena, president, in an affidavit, declares the foreman had no authority to make a lease.

Recently the foreman was detained at San Luis Obispo charged with illegally selling mules from the ranch, but this action, it is said, has been dismissed. Both interests involved in the pasturage contest have obtained injunctions restraining each other from pasturing on the ranch until the issues involved are adjudicated.

OFFICERS UNCONTESTED.

County Clerk C. A. Hunt, Tax Collector Harry Sweetser, Recorder Bradley, Administrator and Coroner A. M. Ruiz, School Superintendent M. V. Lehner, Treasurer W. B. Metcalf and Surveyor O. H. O'Neill will be elected to county offices at the August primaries without a contest, no rival candidates having appeared. James B. Rickard, candidate for Assembly, will also have no rival. All other county offices are bitterly contested.

CITY MARSHAL INJURED.

J. B. Armstrong, City Marshal of Santa Maria, is in a critical condition as a result of an automobile accident near Orcutt. He was descending a grade when his brakes refused to work, and the machine leaped from the highway, tore down a slight descent into a young orchard, and after breaking down several trees came to a sudden stop, throwing Armstrong out. Internal injuries of a serious nature resulted.

POLITICS GETTING WARM IN VENTURA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, July 20. — Only the Republicans have filed a complete party ticket in Ventura county for the primary election to be held August 27. The Democrats will write in the names of their Central Committeemen. Much interest is centered on the contest for Assemblyman. Charles C. Perkins seeks the Republican nomination and has been indorsed by the Republican Central Committee, while Joseph M. Argabrite is seeking the nomination of both parties. The candidates for county offices are: J. L. Argabrite, Auditor and Recorder; E. G. Martin and T. W. McGlinchey, Sheriff; J. B. McClosky and L. E. Hallowell, County Clerk; D. G. Bowker, District Attorney; J. E. Reynolds, Superintendent of Schools; Charles Petit, County Surveyor; J. A. Barry, County Assessor; Charles Willoughby, G. J. Little, Jack Hollingsworth, Harle Walker, S. L. Smith and A. L. Rains, Tax Collector.

NEIGHBORS MYSTIFIED BY DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, July 19.—The cause of a murder and suicide, in which Walter Baldwin of Glen Avon, in the West Riverside district, shot and killed his wife last night, and then turned his rifle upon himself, is a mystery to neighbors of the couple.

The Baldwins were well-to-do farmers of the Glen Avon section. Mr. and Mrs. Ross, near neighbors, heard them quarreling about 7:30 o'clock, and finally a rifle shot. They rushed over to the Baldwin place just in time to catch Mrs. Baldwin as she staggered around one corner of the house and fell dead.

They heard a second shot from the other side of the house, and found Baldwin dying, a rifle bullet in his breast and a fearful wound in his throat gashed by a razor.

Baldwin and his wife were each about 40 years of age. They have a married daughter, whose name and address were not learned by the Sheriff and Coroner.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, July 20.—Lowell M. Jones, a real estate and insurance man of this city, narrowly escaped death last night when his auto collided with a Santa Fe freight train at the San Antonio-avenue crossing. As Mr. Jones approached he attempted to slow down his machine. The brakes failing to work, he ran directly in the path of the locomotive. Mr. Jones came out unhurt, but the automobile was demolished.

HARBOR GUNS ROAR MONDAY.

Test Firing of Big 14-Inch Rifles Postponed on Account of Fogs.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, July 20. — Because of very foggy weather off this port, the firing of the big 14-inch guns at Fort MacArthur was postponed until Monday. The date for the testing of the rifles had been set for today and officers had arrived from the Benicia Arsenal to direct the firing, but the weather would not permit. There are four of the big guns and they will be overcharged with powder during their trials in order to disclose any defects in them should there be any.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Arthur W. Douglas First Redlands Boy to Yield Life for His Country.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, July 20.—Arthur W. Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Douglas, No. 1520 Terrace, was the first Redlands boy to give his life in the service of his country. According to a message received today by his parents, he fell in battle July 9.

He was 22 years old and registered in June, 1917, was sent to Camp Lewis September 19, where he was in training for six months. He sailed on April 5, and was sent almost immediately to the front.

Several letters have been received from him telling of bombardments. His mother said tonight:

"I am proud that it was my son to be the first boy from Redlands to give his life for his country. I have three other boys who may be called into the service and I will give them freely. The government can have anything that I have. I am even selfish in this and would prefer to nurse my grief alone."

ABOARD SAN DIEGO.

Fate of Darwin Pointner, An Electrician, Still Unknown by His Parents.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, July 20.—Darwin Pointner, 17, of Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, was an electrician aboard the the cruiser San Diego. He was born in this city where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Pointner reside. He graduated from Los Angeles grammar schools and enlisted in the navy at Los Angeles in April 1916. He has operated the motion-picture machine on the cruiser and besides looking after things electrically aboard has been making telephones.

All day the parents have watched press dispatches to discover the fate of their only son, but no word has come through either by press or from the Navy Department, and the fate of young Pointner is still unknown.

HARBOR HOTEL MAN ALLEGED DISLOYALIST.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, July 20.—John Granos, proprietor of the Winchester Hotel, was taken into custody today by Capt. W. L. Spellman and Detective Konigsberg of the police department for examination as to his loyalty to the government. With an income alleged to be $250 per month, he has refused to contribute to the Red Cross or buy Liberty Bonds. He has told conflicting stories as to his nationality and whether he is a German, or Finn, has not been determined.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOLDIERS' HOME, July 20.—Maj. E. A. Weed, veteran of the Civil War, is one of the most assiduous war workers in the Home. He is the accredited sales agent of the United States treasury for War Savings Stamps, as well as manager of the local War Savings Committee and devotes his entire time to the cause without remuneration. During the past three months he has collected from stamp sales a total of $5,647.25, in addition to several thousand dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds.

GIRL BANKER WEDS.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BLYTHE, July 19.—The only girl banker in the Palo Verde Valley, has just become a bride. She is now Mrs. Hugh McKinnie, the wife of the secretary of the Tehachepi Fruit and Land Company and the Oro Grande Mining Company. She was Miss Lois Masterman. Before her marriage, she was assistant to her father, A. F. Masterman, president of a local bank. The young woman, who is highly accomplished and of charming personality, made a close study of banking and was regarded as one of the cleverest girl financiers in the State for her years.

MYSTERIOUS HAY FIRE.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, July 20.—The first hay fire of the season occurred at the Monroe Thurman ranch south of this city yesterday, when twenty-seven tons of baled hay, valued at $28 per ton, was completely destroyed. The hay was insured by Mr. Thurman at $20 per ton. The cause of the fire remains a mystery.

PASADENA PLANS TO CELEBRATE VICTORY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, July 21.—This city is called upon to rejoice today in recognition of the great Allied victory in a resolution passed by the City Commission. As they attend church the people are asked to thank God for the success of the Allied arms and continue their supplications for further successes on the field of honor. The resolution, introduced by Chairman A. L. Hamilton, read:

"On account of continuing victories by our Allied armies at the front the people should rejoice. The cause of righteous government is being advanced and our gratifications should be expressed by the general display of flags, and in other suitable ways.

"In the churches of the city especially, in our opinion, should fitting reference and acknowledgment be made for this great manifestation of the triumph of right in the world, and supplication be made for continued success until an unquestionable right termination of the war is secured by the armies of the Allies."

GOVERNOR SPEAKS.

Gov. Stephens will speak tonight at the third of a series of union church services, tonight's gathering being held at Library Park. Eulogies for Belgium will be rendered in honor of the heroic little nation that saved the civilized world by its resistance to the Germans.

At Brookside Park this afternoon "La Brabanconne," the Belgian national anthem, will be sung by Norman E. Hassler during the community song service. The singing will commence at 5 o'clock.

John Birchfield, age 23, a member of the Arcadia balloon camp, was held at the County Jail yesterday morning in connection with an alleged grievous attack on a young girl. He was remanded to the civil authorities by the military for trial. Due to excitement following the affair, Chief of Police W. S. McIntyre stated yesterday that he would issue orders to his men making for an strict enforcement of the curfew law.

GUESTS AT DANCE.

Members of the Eastern Star were the hosts last night to the Arcadia enlisted men, music being furnished by the Elks' band. The affair was held in the palm room of the Hotel Maryland. Last week the Pasadena Chapter of the Eastern Star entertained the officers of the camp. The Shakespeare Club held the third of its week-end dances for the enlisted men.

OPERA SINGER VISITS.

VICTIM OF HUNS.

Frank Alves of Oxnard Killed in Action June 25, War Department Reports.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OXNARD, July 20.—Frank Alves, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Alves of this city, was killed in action in France June 25, according to a message from the War Department received today by members of the family here. He is the first selective service man from this county and city to fall in battle and the third man in the county to make the supreme sacrifice. He was in a machine-gun company and went overseas from Camp Lewis last winter.

His parents are in San Diego visiting another son who is in training at Camp Kearny, and they have not been informed of the death of the son in France.

ITALIANS' PICNIC TODAY.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, July 20.—Much interest is being manifested all along the shore in the Italian picnic scheduled to be held at the Colorado-avenue concrete pleasure pier tomorrow. It is to be Italian war relief day and great plans are being made for the entertainment of the large crowd expected.

Among the Angelenos working for the success of the affair are G. Andrieini, delegate of the Italian Red Cross; Mrs. E. M. Torchia, G. Nathan and E. A. Pozzo. Mrs. J. P. Gardiner and Mrs. J. C. Urquhart are in charge of local arrangements. Miss Marie Tarbino in native costume will sing the Italian national air.

MICHIGAN REUNION.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, July 20.—Five hundred present and former residents of Michigan assembled on the municipal pleasure pier this afternoon for the annual beach outing of the Michigan State Society of Southern California. The opening remarks, following a picnic dinner, were made by President S. Young, and the announcements for the society were made by Secretary G. P. Waring. A brief patriotic address was delivered by W. B. Bartelle and L. Whiting spoke entertainingly on Michigan reminiscences. The afternoon and evening were spent in reunions and social diversions.

START IN AUGUST.
[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, July 20.—Sugar making will begin at the local factory of the American Beet Sugar Company about August 19, according to estimates of local officials. The opening depends on the ripeness of the beets. Beets from the Chino fields will be handled here this year, as that factory will not run.

The Leonard Cleanable Refrigerator is VERY Cold!

¶ Not just normally cold, but very cold, for its ten air-proof, moisture-proof walls positively keep the heat OUT and the cold IN. The secret of this coolness in The Leonard Cleanable is the Polar Felt insulation, which insures a low uniform temperature and keeps the air circulation in the food chambers cold and dry.

Then, too, the doors on The Leonard Cleanable are air-tight and will close automatically if given the slightest push.

But coldness is but one feature of this famous refrigerator. Its cleanliness is equally important. The lining is of real porcelain—smooth, hard and made in one piece minus cracks and crevices.

The Leonard, "like a china dish," is delightfully easy to clean and to keep clean. Really, it's an education in food conservation, just to see and examine THE LEONARD CLEANABLE.

THE CITY AND ENVIRONS.

Indiana Picnic.

Through an inadvertence an item in yesterday's Times stated that the Indiana Society picnic was to be held yesterday afternoon. It should have read next Saturday afternoon. The place is Exposition Park, and a good programme has been arranged.

Soldier Visits Mother.

Flying Cadet Robert Eugene Haynes is visiting his mother, Mrs. O. V. V. Haynes of Los Angeles, en route to the Riverside Aviation Field. Young Haynes was graduated from the Berkeley university ground school and was the high man in his class.

Tennesseeans Meet.

An excellent literary and musical programme has been arranged by the Tennessee State Society, which meets tomorrow evening in Forum Hall, No. 203 Mercantile place. Arrangements will be made for the Tennessee Society picnic, which will be held in Sycamore Grove August 3.

Italian Preacher Here.

Rev. Antonio Mangano, in charge of the Italian department at Colgate Theological College, Brooklyn, is in Los Angeles in the interest of Italian missions on the Pacific Coast, and this morning will preach in the First Baptist Church, No. 727 South Flower street.

Indiana Picnic.

The Indiana State Society picnic, previously announced for yesterday, will be held, instead, next Saturday in Exposition Park. Among the speakers will be G. C. Thornburg and William D. McConnell. Songs will be rendered by the G.A.R. Glee Club, R. H. Mouser and Mabel Cushman.

Event in Central Park.

The Berean Red Cross Auxiliary of the Temple Baptist Church will give an all-day benefit in Central Park next Saturday, commencing at 11 a.m. and continuing until 11 p.m. Booths will be erected, and maidens dressed in Red Cross uniform will sell luncheons and refreshments. The Berean Band will furnish music throughout the day.

Liberty Banquet.

The Union League Club will give a Liberty banquet at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the clubrooms, Gov. Stephens being the guest of honor. President D. C. Casselman of the club will give a word of welcome introducing the toastmaster, ex-Senator R. N. Bulla. Gov. Stephens's topic will be "California and the War." The entertainers during the dinner include Earl C. Houk and Charley Murray and there will be plenty of music and singing.

Civil Service Positions.

Examinations to fill vacancies in the municipal service have been announced by the City Civil Service Commission as follows: On the 29th inst. male stenographer, with salary of from $75 to $90 a month; treasurer's assistant clerk (stenographer,) $100 per month; on the 31st inst., firemen, with salaries from $100 to $115 per month. Further information can be secured at room 4, Normal Hill Center.

For the Jayhawkers.

The Kansas State Society will meet Wednesday evening in The Times assembly-rooms, and all former Kansas people are welcome. There will be an entertaining musical programme, and Judge Paul J. McCormick will give an address on a patriotic theme. Dancing will follow the programme. The annual Kansas picnic and reunion will be held at Santa Monica on August 3, and the regular society meeting for the month will be omitted.

Will Speak on Y.M.C.A. Work.

Dr. George J. Fisher of New York, head of the physical department of the International Young Men's Christian Association Committee, will speak in the blue room of the Los Angeles Athletic Club Tuesday, at 10 a.m., on "Physical Phases of Y.M.C.A. Work in National Cantonments and at the Front." The meeting will be held under the auspices of the War Work Committee of the southern district of the National War Work Council.

POMONA ACTIVITIES.

J. A. Fitch of Pomona reports the following realty deals:

For T. B. Himrod and C. F. Lawrence, to a Pomona investor, nineteen-acre orange grove on San Jose avenue, near Claremont, four acres Valencias and rest navels, a house in Pomona, valued at $2500 and located near the High School, figuring in the deal, total consideration involved, $27,000; for D. H. Berner to Dr. H. T. Laughlin, lot in Antonio Heights tract, Pomona, improved with seven-room bungalow, $3000; for T. B. Himrod to R. L. Knox and Victor R. Young, improved orange grove, of nine and one-fourth acres, on San Bernardino avenue, midway between Pomona and Claremont, $16,500; for Hugh Eaton to Johnson Knight, formerly of Colorado, improved three-acre walnut and fruit ranch at Pomona, on White avenue, near Grand avenue, $4000; for R. H. Leeson to D. H. Shaw, improved, full-bearing, ten-acre orange grove in Upland district, on West Fourth street, near Mountain avenue, $15,000; for W. M. Hicks to A. G. Shettel, seven-room bungalow, and two lots, southeast corner Columbia avenue, and Caswell street, Pomona, $3500; for D. H. Shaw to R. H. Leeson, ten-acre bearing orange grove at Highgrove, $10,000; for A. G. Shettel to W. M. Hicks, house in Upland, on Eighth street, near Euclid avenue, $1500.

FINE FLAT BUILDING.

Combination of Income and Residence Property Just Completed.

A flat building and cottage which is a combination income and residence property has just been completed by J. H. Mason on adjoining lots at No. 1403-7-9 Maltman avenue, the investment being approximately $25,000. A. G. Lindley was the architect and Edwards & Wildey Company the builders.

The buildings are of the colonial type, similar in design, of cream colored plaster exterior, and red composition roofs. The interiors of the flat building are finished in old ivory and mahogany with built-in oscillating beds, tiled mantels, tiled bathroom floors and automatic water heaters. Gas radiators are used for heating purposes. The cottage has five large rooms with attractive open terrace in front and palm covered patio in rear. It is finished in Philippine mahogany and old ivory with handsome Bachelor tile mantel and high paneled dining-room.

The hillside location, allowing an extended view of mountains and valley, is most attractive and gives an excellent opportunity for effective landscaping. Mr. Mason built for permanent home and investment.

DOWNTOWN LEASES.

Cigar Manufacturers Lease South Los Angeles Street Building. Other Deals Announced.

W. M. Garland & Co., represented by C. V. Simpson, report the closing of a five-year lease on a three-story and basement building at No. 445 South Los Angeles street, for A. Stephan Vavra to Max Roth for cigar factory. Mr. Vavra purchased the property a short time ago through Mr. Simpson and has remodeled the interior of the building to accommodate the Roth company, which is installing a complete and up-to-date cigar factory. Mr. Simpson also reports the closing of a five-year lease at No. 443 South Los Angeles street for Max Roth to John W. Macmillen, manufacturers of electrical supplies and accessories.

The same firm, through Mr. Corrigan, reports the following leases: Storeroom at No. 429 South Spring street, to the Presto Cafe; store at No. 111 West Ninth street, to Peerless Fixture Company; store at No. 712 Maple avenue to the New Yamato; store at No. 706 Towne avenue to B. Steinberg, furniture dealer; store at No. 1114 West Seventh street to A. Weber, for fixtures and office supplies; store at northwest corner Sixth and Maple, to Thomas Thorkelson, for cafe and lunches; store at No. 1012 South Hill to W. W. McLain, for auto safety signals.

GARAGE MOVES.

The Wall-street Garage, which has been established for some years at Nos. 634 to 642 Wall street, will open for business at its new location on South Hope street just north of Pico about August 15. The concern is to occupy a modern brick structure 75x156 feet in size, now being built for its use by the Ponet Estate Company. In the new location the machine and repair department of the present establishment will be continued under the name of the owner and manager, Francis C. Davidson.

TO PHYSICIAN.

An attractive residence at No. 1734 Buckingham road was sold last week by a local builder to Dr. N. F. Sprague for a given consideration of $16,000. The house contains thirteen rooms and four baths and occupies a lot 60x140 feet in size. It is finished in mahogany. Ralph O. Williams, with the J. B. Althouse Company was the agent in the deal.

YOUR DUTY TO BE ATTRACTIVE

Have Pretty Dark Hair.

"La Creole" Hair Dressing is the original hair color restorer, and not a dye. Applying it to your hair and scalpe revives the color glands of nature, and restores your hair to a beautiful dark shade or to its natural color. It is the only hair color restorer that will gradually darken all your gray or faded hair in this way. No matter how gray, prematurely gray, faded or lusterless your hair might be, "La Creole" Hair Dressing will make it beautifully dark, soft and lustrous. "La Creole" Hair Dressing will not stain the scalp, wash or rub off, and is easily applied by simply combing or brushing through the hair. Don't be misled into buying some cheap preparation.

USE
"LA CREOLE" HAIR DRESSING
for gray or faded hair and retain the appearance of youth. Also used by gentlemen to impart an even dark color to their gray hair, beard, or mustache. Sold and guaranteed by all good drug stores everywhere, or sent direct for $1.20 by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—(Adv.)

Manager D. W. Pontius yesterday that with the pres- progress, the tunnel work completed by the first of next The difficult work of headings is completed of the tunnels in the section, several of the entirely completed, the proceed with much greater from thirty to sixty days after the tunnel work is completed, all other portions of this marvelously beautiful scenic route—enormous rock fills across mountain gorges, trestles to span abrupt curves, side tracks, water tanks, station houses, etc., will have been finished and ready for use.

ALL MATERIAL READY.

All of the materials are on hand for the complete construction of the line; there will be no delay on this point. Plans have been prepared for the terminal facilities at San Diego, and during the coming week it is probable that bids will be asked for on the construction of roundhouse and shops at San Diego. These are to be located on Newton street, between Sixteenth and Sigsbee streets. The San Diego City Council last Wednesday ordered the vacation of streets necessary for the prosecution of this work.

Approximately $50,000 will be expended at once on these structures, and the arrangement of classification yards and new interchange tracks with the Santa Fe Railroad, together with other terminal improvements, will require an outlay of $150,000, which is to be made as speedily as the work can be handled to advantage. General Manager Pontius stated yesterday that all this work will be completed by the first of January.

In other words, within a comparatively few days after the tunnel work is completed, all other portions of the line, including its terminal facilities, will be in readiness to begin the handling of a transcontinental traffic with a tidewater terminus.

The government has given its authorization for the expenditure of $15,000,000 for the completion of this railroad. The corporation is owned jointly by A. B. and J. B. Spreckels and the Southern Pacific Company. The Southern Pacific became directly interested in the enterprise about two years ago.

At present, local trains are operated from San Diego to Campo, on the westerly section of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad, and the Holton Interurban Railway operates a train service on the easterly section from El Centro to Seeley.

PICTURESQUE ROUTE.

Present construction work is located in one of the most rugged and picturesque sections of Southern California. Probably a very small percentage of even the old residents of Southern California have any realization of the scenic beauties

Patriotic Jubilation to be Held at Exposition Park this Afternoon.

Patriotic citizens are urged to turn out this afternoon and help celebrate the victory of American arms. The jubilation will be staged at Exposition Park and will be under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. The Submarine Base Band, one of the finest musical organizations in the service, will present a patriotic programme. Justice Thomas P. White will speak, Miss Lillian Rosine will sing and Frank Bristol will lead the crowd in patriotic community singing. Walter R. Wheat is in charge, assisted by J. L. Van Norman.

The programme will begin at 3 o'clock sharp. Everybody is invited to come and yell for the army "over there." It will help them to know that their prowess is appreciated at home.

HOW CITY COUNCIL WOULD HELP TAKE THE SUN OUT OF SUNDAY.

BY F. C. SPAYDE.

This is what you may and may not do under the provisions of our new Sunday-closing law:

YOU MAY—	YOU MAY NOT—
Buy food at hotels, restaurants and lunch counters.	Get a shave or a haircut in a barber shop.
Buy ice cream, peanuts and popcorn. Chewing-gum—doubtful.	Buy oranges, peaches or any fruit.
Bathe at bathhouses.	Buy a necktie or a handkerchief.
Go to the theater or the moving pictures.	Buy a pencil or a book.
Buy medicines and ice cream sodas but not merchandise at drug stores.	Buy a loaf of bread or groceries at a bakery or grocery.
Buy the Sunday Times and other newspapers and magazines.	Have your picture taken.
Set sponges (whatever that is.)	Pawn your watch to take your girl to the beach.
Perform necessary labor down on the farm or in the orchard.	Buy bathing caps, razors, or any other goods you now find in drug stores.
Buy milk or cream.	Buy meat at a meat shop.
Sit out on a bench in the park.	Buy a tennis racquet, a baseball, an auto lamp or horn, or a new faucet for the one that is flooding the kitchen.

Blame it on the barbers. They did it. They began this scheme to take the sun out of Sunday. They started the ball a-rolling which resulted in the passage by the City Council of the City of Los Angeles, California, U.S.A., of the bluest Sunday blue law the State of California has seen yet. If old Cotton Mather and Jonathan Edwards and any other of those old Puritan lads in shadeland ever learn of this new Sunday law, the dour faces of those old enemies of joy and wholesome laughter would light up with glee. For from their standpoint the new Sunday law is a corker.

The law became such last Tuesday and would be in effect for the first time today except for a petition for an injunction against it, which was filed at the eleventh hour by a number of small grocers who see ruin for their little businesses in it. Many of these do have most of their trade on Sunday, being located along the routes of Sunday outings. The petition is in the name of Mary Ramsey, who has a grocery at No. 4716 Central avenue. A temporary restraining order was issued by Judge Wellborn and the matter will be up Tuesday on an order to show cause, heard before Judge Jackson. Attorney Charles Haas represents the protestants.

HOW IT STARTED.

Four months ago the barbers started out to get revenge on those Los Angeles men who as a war-time measure are shaving themselves. The young men who patronized the barber shops extensively went to war, and so between the two the barbering business slumped. To get even, the barbers decided to close up on Sundays and sought a city ordinance to close all barber shops on Sunday. And right here let it be said before the barbers pass out of this story, that besides cutting off the Sunday shaves, the barbers have during the past week raised the price of shaves to 20 cents and haircuts to 40 cents as part two of their offensive.

Now the city fathers wanted to help the barbers along in their desires to close their shops on Sunday, so the City Council sought a fool-proof Sunday closing law in the peaceful, New England-like town of Fowler in Fresno county. Number of inhabitants there, 1000. Fowler has a anti-Sunday law which has stood the test of the Supreme Court, has been proved constitutional, non-backfiring, stands without hitching, and no lawyer yet has been found who can jimmy holes in it. "Fine!" said Los Angeles City Councilmen F. A. True, J. B. Reeves and Ralph Criswell, constituting the Health Committee of the Honorable, the City Council of Los Angeles. The Fowler plan of anti-Sunday legislation prohibits most everything but breathing on Sundays, and then fills up the blank lines on the order with such exceptions as the committee can along the line of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad. Leaving San Diego, it uses the old route of the railroad to Tia Juana, and there drops down into Mexico. By this route, several mountain spurs are avoided, although within the Mexican portion of the line three tunnels are required. The route swings back again into the United States at Tecate, and thence reaches Campo, nestled in a boulder-strewn valley overlooked by the mountains.

NEW RAILROAD TO OPEN VAST, RICH TERRITORY.

Commercial Importance of San Diego and Arizona Route Hardly to be Exaggerated.

Winding its way well up on the rugged foothills, the line crosses Campo Creek on a steel viaduct high in the air, and then keeps onward among the constantly higher hills until it emerges into the Jacumba Valley. This mountain region is dotted with little vernal valleys of such vivid green that they are marvels. Sleek stock browse on the lush pasturage, and there are numerous little mountain ranches, showing good development, and the great possibilities of this region when adequate railroad transportation is made available.

Extending onward, the road reaches the head of Carriso Gorge. The route is probably half-way up the mountain sides, through miles of huge granite boulders, whole mountainsides being covered with these immense rocks as thickly as though they had fallen from the skies like snowflakes. Frequently rocks as large as a house are to be seen balanced in most grotesque positions on the tops of peaks. At places it appears that a man with a crowbar might send these immense rocks thundering down hundreds of feet to the canyon's floor. Down in the bottom of the gorge meanders Carriso Creek, its banks dotted with willows and alders. From one shoulder of the mountains to another the railroad grade makes its way, dodging into a tunnel, and then emerging on the other side, only to disappear again within a few hundred feet for another plunge through bores that have pierced the solid granite. Several of the tunnels require absolutely no timbering, being cut through the solid native rock.

Tunnels Nos. 5, 19 and 20 in this section are entirely completed. In others the work is well into the mountainsides from both ends, while in still others only the center cores are to be removed, daylight being visible through the entire bores. Material from the tunnels is hauled out on tram cars and used for fills.

The longest of these tunnels is 2526 feet, and the bore is twenty-six feet in height. Because of limited space, only a certain number of men can work at a time on these tunnels, but day and night shifts are run.

An idea of the scope of this tunnel work may be gleaned from the following statement of their lengths: Tunnel No. 6 is 375 feet long; No. 7, 1200 feet long; No. 8, 2500 feet; No. 9, 600 feet; No. 10, 1000 feet; No. 11, 300 feet; No. 12, 200 feet; No. 13, 291 feet; No. 14, 2600 feet; No. 15, 925 feet; No. 16, 730 feet; No. 17, 661 feet; No. 17½, 815 feet; No. 18, 708 feet; No. 19, 237 feet, and No. 20, 238 feet.

Out on the open portions of the construction work there are "dinky" engines, mule-drawn dump cars, steam shovels, compressed air drills and blasting outfits all at work cutting away the sides of the mountains high above precipitous cliffs and hundreds of feet above the bed of Carriso Gorge.

This eleven-mile section has presented many engineering difficulties and the work is hazardous, but a remarkable record has been made of only one man having lost his life on the entire construction work.

Contractors' camps are located every few miles along the mountainsides, frequently standing room having to be built out for the location of tents and mess houses. Included in these camps are those of Marsh Bros. & Gardinier, William Huston Wattis, Hamilton & Gleason, subcontractors, and four camps of the Utah Construction Company, holding the general construction contract.

LABOR DIFFICULTIES.

Great difficulty has been experienced in keeping the required number of men on the work. During the summer months the heat is very trying, and laborers drift in, stop for a few days, and then move onward. At the present time the "steady" men on this work number a little more than 500.

An amusing incident of the trials of the foremen, who are expected to keep their gangs up to complement, occurred on this work the other day, when a leader of the Mexican contingent declared his intention of quitting. This meant that a lot of his followers would go as well. The foreman, a husky Swede, decided to take moral suasion into his own hands. He called out the Mexican leader, argued with him, and finally gave him a sound thrashing as an inducement to stay with the job. Juan went back to work, and the effect on the morale of the gang was such that not one of Juan's followers has since entertained the idea of leaving the work.

Out at "track's end," at the head of the Carriso Pass, is located the engineers' camp, with a corps of about a score of college-bred men, now as brown as leather, wearing as few clothes as possible, and giving their best efforts to this great piece of constructive engineering. From this camp one has a marvelous perspective of the Imperial Valley. It has the appearance of a great inland sea, the dark green of the irrigated districts showing up like an immense body of water.

It is for this promised land that the road is heading, and it is from this rich territory that trainloads of products will soon find their way to the seaboard. Through the rugged country touched by the road as it crosses the mountains there is promise of much mineral development, and from this source a great tonnage of freight is in prospect eventually.

General Superintendent Pontius stated yesterday that it is the present expectation that the San Diego and Arizona Railroad will be operated from El Centro southerly by way of Calexico and Mexicali, using the trackage of the Inter-California Railroad in its swing down through Mexico and onward to Yuma, where it will directly connect with the Southern Pacific's main line to El Paso.

It is the boast of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad that it will be the shortest transcontinental line to the East, via its own road, the Southern Pacific and the El Paso and Southwestern.

GOVERNMENT DRY DOCK FOR HARBOR ASSURED.

Shipping Board Official is Coming this Week to Pass on Sites.

JOHN H. ROSSETTER, head of the operating department of the United States Shipping Board, is expected in Los Angeles within the next week to decide upon a location for the government dry dock to be built at this port. The new dry dock is believed to be assured as one of the early developments at the harbor, but whether it will be located at the plant of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in the west basin or at the plant of the Southwestern Shipbuilding Company at East San Pedro has not been decided, according to the latest information from Washington.

A dry dock has long been one of the great needs at the harbor, and until one is provided, commerce will be greatly handicapped. After the war, with the return of the fleet of oil tankers now diverted to other uses, there will be an imperative need for the dry dock. The tankers are chiefly engaged in taking oil from this port direct to South America and the Orient. Lack of a dry dock here has in the past made it necessary for them to go to San Francisco for the cleaning and repair work, at great expense and loss of time.

Now that two great shipbuilding plants are located here, there will be much repair work requiring dry dock facilities for vessels arriving from Europe. All ships are now being run under great pressure, and after the war when pressure is relieved and shipping is restored to normal conditions, there will be an enormous amount of overhauling and rebuilding for several years.

Mr. Rossetter is a practical shipping man, well equipped for his position. He was formerly at the head of the operating department of the W. R. Grace & Co. line of steamers, and has always accorded this harbor great consideration in his own business. Later he was also made the head of the Pacific Mail, when the two lines came under the control of the International. When Uncle Sam cast around for a man to head the world's greatest shipping corporation as direcotr of operations, Mr. Rossetter was picked for the job.

WINS BREAD PRIZE.

Former German to Spend Money in Getting Name Changed from Koch to Baker.

"William Cook," which is merely patronymic camouflage for Wilhelm Koch in wartime, a baker at Pasadena, recently won a $100 prize for the best loaf of wheatless bread, a sample of which has been forwarded to Hoover.

Yesterday in his bake shop where he has been setting the pace in breaddom by getting along with 15 per cent. wheat flour and the rest substitute until he perfected the wheatless loaf, he told what he was going to do with his extra $100.

"Fifty goes to the Red Cross, but another fifty gets me a new name," said Bill.

"My name is to be William Cook Baker—no, not because I bake bread—it will be after Mr. Baker, Secretary of War.

"My family were Socialists and when I was 16 I decided I didn't want to be a soldier for the Kaiser and I got my release before I came to this country. I was 21 when I got my citizenship papers in Virginia twenty-three years ago."

PICTURES HERE SHOW HISTORIC EVENTS.

DUPLICATES IN WINDOWS OF SILVERWOOD STORE ATTRACT MUCH ATTENTION.

A number of historical pictures are being shown in the windows of the F. B. Silverwood store. They are duplicates of pictures that are now hanging on the walls of practically every recreation center of the Y.M.C.A. or Knights of Columbus wherever American soldiers are stationed in camps or cantonments.

The pictures are small reproductions in color of originals painted for Hart Schaffner & Marx, and a new issue of them has been printed by that company chiefly as a contribution to make more attractive the canteens and recreation centers for the soldiers and sailors.

The pictures show Francis Scott Key as a prisoner on board ship when he wrote "The Star Spangled Banner;" troops passing St. Gaudens' statue of Lincoln, and Betsy Ross offering the first American flag in its present form. The pictures are of unusual interest at the present time.

IF OMAR HAD LIVED HERE!

Hoover Would Have Taken His Bread, City His Jug, Long Beach His "Thou."

And now it is Wilton Lackaye, famous actor-wit, who has his little fling at "chemically pure Los Angeles." Lackaye, in a letter to Sam Berger, also a detector of human foibles, tells of his visit to the Red Cross tearoom in this city and of hearing a young lady sing of "a loaf of bread, a jug of wine and thou," etc.

"Lucky old Khayyam," he writes, "to have lived in an older, broader, wider, happier time and clime. If he had lived in Los Angeles Hoover would have taken his bread, the local ordinances would have taken his jug, and the Long Beach police would have given him seven years for putting his arm around the girl."

CAN FRUIT FOR USE IN THE ARMY CAMPS.

MANY WOMEN DONATE SERVICES TO WORTHY ENDEAVOR.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. T. Anderson of the city Council of Defense the perishable fruits and vegetables, given in shares by the local farmers, will be canned to be used this winter in the army cantonments, base hospitals, and any other necessary home relief work. The canning is being done by the women of the various precincts who donate the jars, rubbers, and lids. Four kitchens have already been organized and are at work, one at No. 947 South Broadway, Y.W.C.A., State Normal School, and the fourth at the Los Feliz grammar school on Hollywood boulevard.

Precinct No. 675, which uses the Los Feliz school kitchen, sent fourteen automobiles with forty-eight pickers out to Edendale last Saturday and returned with ten cases of blackberries by noon. In the afternoon a new force of twenty women, under expert supervision, met at the schoolhouse and canned fifty-one quarts of blackberries, without sugar, seventy-nine bottles of blackberry jam with as little sugar as possible which was furnished by the City Council of Defense from their sugar fund; ten quarts of squash and six and one-half quarts of rhubarb canned with cold water.

As long as the food is obtainable filled jars will be placed in the storeroom of the city Council of Defense until needed.

FILM ACTOR HELD ON CHARGE OF SEDITION.

UTTERANCES NEARLY CAUSED FIGHT AT STUDIO, WITNESS DECLARES.

Arnie Von Harder, a motion-picture actor, had a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Long, yesterday, on a charge of violating the Espionage Act, and was held in $1000 bond to await the action of the Federal grand jury.

Witnesses testified to the pro-German attitude of Von Harder at the studio, alleging that he had declared that the stories of German atrocities in France were not true; that President Wilson was running the war in interest of Wall street, and that it was a moneyed man's war, in which the common people had no interest. Von Harder was alleged to have said that brains would win the war, and that if there were more brains in this country, it would not be necessary to watch the Germans in the United States.

When Von Harder was asked if he wished to make a statement, he said that he was born in Berlin, and had been in the United States thirty-one years. Asked about a picture found in his room representing a number of soldiers and sailors in the American army, he refused to answer whether the picture was his. He admitted that he had a number of letters written in German in his possession at the time of his arrest, but declared they had nothing to do with the war and were from his family in Berlin. He also admitted that although he had been in this country many years he had taken out only his first citizenship papers.

Sidney Flowers, a young soldier, who had been invalided home on account of wounds, testified that Von Harder had told him all the pictures showing German atrocities in France were fakes. "The pictures are not only true, but they fall short of showing the outrages of the Germans in France, as I know from my own observation," said Flowers. The witness said the unpatriotic utterances of the defendant were so pronounced that a free fight was once narrowly averted, the men at the studio resenting the declarations of Von Harder.

The arrest of Von Harder was accomplished by agents of the American Protective League, operating under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice. It is understood that other charges may be made involving a violation of a State law.

COURT OF APPEAL CONVENES TOMORROW.

The July term of the District Court of Appeal will convene tomorrow morning, and the calendar covers three days. There are eight appeals from criminal convictions from the Superior Courts of Los Angeles, Imperial, Kern, Santa Barbara, San Diego and Kings counties, but there are no special features in any of them.

On Tuesday the appeal of the county of Los Angeles from the judgment of the lower court in the case of Walter L. Lewis, former County Auditor, is on the calendar in the nature of an injunction proceeding.

THREE ARE INTERNED.

Deputy United States Marshal Kavanaugh yesterday took Herman Flohr, Antoine Sigg and Emil Zelk to Fort MacArthur for internment under authority of a Presidential warrant. The utterance of seditious sentiments was charged to the trio.

Oh, La La!

WANT TO SPEAK FRENCH? EASY!

Just Join Classes that will Begin Tomorrow.

Real Language of the Land will be Taught.

Lessons Four Days Weekly in "Times" Building.

Tomorrow marks the opening of the two French classes which The Times is offering to draft men and to Red Cross nurses free of charge, and to the public for a small fee. These are calculated to give a knowledge of French as it is spoken in France.

That the enrollment is heavy in the classes was stated yesterday by C. Harry Allis, the distinguished landscape artist, whose residence in France gave him a complete knowledge of its language and people.

The instruction will not cost you a cent if you are a man of draft age or a woman enrolled in the Red Cross nursing service, and two classes have been arranged for your convenience. Each will meet Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of each week for three months. Both sections will be held in the Times Assembly Hall on the second floor of The Times Building, First and Broadway. One is scheduled to meet from 12:30 to 1:30, and the other from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock p.m.

LINGUIST AND ARTIST.

Mr. Allis, who studied in the Paris schools and later taught in the School for Boys at Cucq, is possibly one of America's foremost landscape artists. His works are on exhibition both in this country and abroad, and his painting, "Verdun," is at present in the Ackerman collection of this city.

Cultivation of what Mr. Allis terms "the French speaking voice" will be the first step taken by the instructor, for without it he asserts that one can neither be understood in France nor by French people. He will, in addition, use French texts only, and it is his aim to give his pupils not only perfection in pronunciation, but fluency in conversation.

"The vital interest in the great war and in the thousands of our boys 'over there' will make the French language almost as essential as English," is Mr. Allis' statement, "to say nothing of the importance of being able better to understand the French people. It is indeed a great pleasure to read many of the delightful French books and stories in their native tongue. And one can picture to oneself more vividly the beauties of Picardy and the life along the Marne, peaceful before the advent of the Hun."

IN PRONUNCIATION.

Mr. Allis has announced his intention of giving his classes daily drill in the pronunciation of the names of the French towns and villages in the war zone. In antebellum days he spent considerable time in the smaller villages, in many of which no tongue other than French had been spoken for months at a time.

"Practical French as it is spoken 'over there' is my aim," he has declared. "The work undertaken is to be entirely in French, and by the 'direct' method in vogue in the Paris schools by which the pupil learns the language from contact with the instructor."

Mr. Allis will receive registrations at The Times tomorrow morning from 10 until noon, and will commence instruction at the scheduled class hour. In the afternoon he can be reached at the Egan Dramatic School, Little Theater Building, at Pico and Figueroa streets, the telephone number of which is 60372.

A little speed, please, if you want to enroll!

CANNOT COLLECT FOR TRIP TO OWN HOME.

FORMER SUPERVISOR NORTON MUST ANSWER ON SEVENTEEN COUNTS; DROP OTHERS.

Former Supervisor R. H. Norton, from whom the county is seeking to recover $2675.66 paid him while he was in office for mileage, pleaded the statute of limitations on twenty-six counts of the complaint, and yesterday Judge Jackson sustained the demurrer. The District Attorney's office, represented by Deputy Van Cott, had conceded that on these twenty-six claims the statute of limitations had run.

The court overruled Mr. Norton's demurrers on the remaining seventeen counts, and gave him ten days to file an answer, provided that the county does not amend its complaint. In that event Mr. Norton will have ten days' additional time.

The court held that Mr. Norton could not collect mileage to and from his home. The charge in these cases was 10 cents a mile. He also put in claims for mileage for trips to San Francisco, where he looked over the exposition incidentally, San Diego and other places.

The suit is against Mr. Norton and his bondsmen, the Southwestern Surety Insurance Company, the American Surety Company, the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, the National Surety Company, and the International Indemnity Company. He was bonded in the sum of $20,000.

TELEPHONE COMPANIES GET TIME EXTENSIONS.

The State Railroad Commission has extended to September 30, the time within which the Redondo Beach Home Telephone Company may reconstruct its system to comply with all the laws of the State regarding pole line construction, etc.

The commission also has extended to December 31 the time within which the Santa Monica Bay Home Telephone Company may reconstruct its system, and to June 30, 1919, the time for the Whittier Home Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Incorporations.

The French American Shipbuilding Corporation, incorporators William E. Russell, George M. Chartier, Floyd M. Hinshaw, Leon Fighiera, J. A. Russell, E. Roy Lathrop and Howell Baker, capital stock $2,000,000, subscribed $1600; The Williams Manufacturing Company, incorporators LeRoy Robinson, J. F. Huber, A. C. Williams, R. E. Williams and E. R. Moving-Picture Folk File Suit to Recover Actor Horse Left Here While They Were in the East.

Sena Owen Walsh and her husband, George Walsh, both moving-picture stars, went to New York, leaving in the possession of Tom Mix, cowboy moving picture actor, Mrs. Walsh's small brown horse called "Joe." This small brown horse with a white spot on its forehead is also a moving picture actor, famous in the screen world.

When the Walsh's returned from New York they asked for the return of the horse, and complain that Mr. Mix, who had been using it in picture work, refused to give it up. Yesterday Mrs. Walsh filed suit, through Attorney Birney Donnell, for the return of the horse or its value, $500, and $1000 damages.

MORE MEN FOR FREE NAVIGATION SCHOOL.

TWENTY APPLICANTS AWAIT APPOINTMENT OF TEACHER FOR NIGHT CLASSES.

Twenty applicants for the day class in the government free navigation school are awaiting the arrival of a teacher to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation on the first inst. of F. J. Neubauer, who for several months conducted the day sessions. Prof. Neubauer started for a two weeks' vacation on that date, and resigned before returning to Los Angeles. The night class in navigation is continuing under the direction of Capt. Hugo C. Frerichs.

The navigation school soon will round out its first year in Los Angeles. More than 100 graduates now are assisting Uncle Sam in winning the war by sailing his supply ships in all parts of the globe. The school has been one of the most flourishing of the more than a score established by the government in Coast cities.

Capt. Charles W. Saunders, chief of recruiting for the Coast district, has been requested to supply an instructor for the day class, and he will announce an appointment within a few days.

Applications may be made at the Chamber of Commerce or at the free navigation school in the old Los Angeles High School building on Hill street.

According to advices received by the chamber from Washington, there is pressing need for both officers and men to man the new ships that are being launched daily for the merchant marine service.

HE'S NOT PRESENT.

Attorney in Hospital While Disbarment Proceedings Against Him Are in Court.

The disbarment proceedings against Joseph Citron, a young attorney, were partially heard by Judge Monroe yesterday and continued until tomorrow. Mr. Citron was not in court. The certificate of Dr. R. B. Griffith, produced in court, stated that Mr. Citron had been operated on at the California Hospital for appendicitis and other ailments, and would be confined there two weeks.

The Bar Association, represented by Hunsaker and Britt and Overton, Lyman and Plum, accuses Mr. Citron of compromising a suit to collect on a note for $2000 and appropriating the $1750 received to his own use. The note belonged to Alfred Penn, Jr., who is now in the army. W. H. Anderson is counsel for Mr. Citron.

SUES TO KEEP LAND AWAY FROM WIDOW.

TRUSTEE FOR W. G. McCARTY BRINGS ACTION NAMING MANY DEFENDANTS.

An aftermath of the sensational McCarty divorce and lost-love actions developed yesterday when Lyle W. Rucker, trustee in bankruptcy for W. G. McCarty, filed suit against W. H. McCarty, Margaret E. McCarty, Walter G. McCarty Company, Walter G. McCarty, the trustees of the Walter G. McCarty Company, Florence A. Barr, P. M. Reidy, Mary J. Prager, Eugeuen F. and Sheda L. Klein and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, asking that property held by the defendants be adjudged in trust for the Walter G. McCarty Company, Walter G. McCarty and Florence A. Barr.

It is alleged that Walter G. McCarty owned seven parcels of land in 1908. In 1914, it is alleged that Mrs. Barr, a widow, named as defendant in the lost-love suit, and Walter G. McCarty "in contemplation of the insolvency of Walter G. McCarty, confederated and conspired together and agreed for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of Mr. McCarty" and conveyed to and recorded in the name of Mrs. Barr certain property for his use and in trust for him.

It is also alleged that other of the defendants confederated in practically similar lines. It is camp is divided "ship"—the main naval is run and ordered ship's lines—by a broad the three weeks he re- is known as a to be elevated to the "gob," and thence to a he crosses that road, very comparatively, free man. And so intensive is that three week's training as a goofie, that last week Lieut. Pryor's graduates from the detention camp, comported themselves so efficiently on their first day at review that they won the colors—the distinction for which all companies strike.

The hospital is also on the detention camp side of the road, distinguished chiefly by its white hospital beds in place of cots and hammocks, mattresses, sheets, and a little coveted petting. Dr. O. P. Spalding is the senior medical officer, aided by five assistant surgeons. But the pride of the station is that it stands first in health records for the whole United States, not a single death in the whole year of its existence, four cases of pneumonia cured with sun baths, one case of spinal meningitis, safely cured, and for the rest, mere minor complaints. And the recruits arrive so fast that the camp has long since outstripped its original allotment of space, used up all its cots, and overflows into hammocks swung on beams in a dormitory tent.

STATION'S CLUBHOUSE.

The Y.M.C.A. Building is on that side of the road, too—that haven which forms a clubhouse for the whole station, where concerts and entertainments are given, writing material and newspapers provided, and just a soupcon of religion, tactfully administered.

Across the road, life is very different. The great building which runs along the water front is called "the ship" and is run exactly as a ship would be organized. In the captain's cabin sits the new commanding officer, Capt. Guy Whitlock of long sea-going service, formerly of the Nebraska, upon which he took the trip around the world during the Roosevelt administration, and naval attache at Buenos Aires when the war broke out.

Just round the alley way from him is a cubby hole sacred to discipline—and Lieut. J. H. Horsey is discipline officer. This means that he is judge, jury, schoolmaster, mother and general arbitrator for the camp, the dispenser of penalties and punishments and has a terrible time trying to shroud his humorous and jolly disposition. All troubles go to him. Whether it be a stern father imploring him to see that son, John, does not marry a certain undesirable maiden, or another imploring him to see that he does; whether it be a case of amateur loan sharks, furtive gambling, rule breaking, or sheer devilment, Lieut. Horsey has to straighten out the trouble. While we were there he was arbitrating an embarrassing case, in which one jackie had mortgaged another chap's bag for $2.50, with interest at $1, and, alas, the wherewithal had not appeared in time to save disclosures.

The prison quarters are known as "the brig," but the offenders within it are rarely guilty of any serious offense. It looks most impressive, with its armed sentries keeping guard without.

BUGLE CALL TO MESS.

Mr. Horsey (it is naval etiquette to address every officer as "Mr." under the rank of captain,) is also mess officer. His great pride is that 800 men can be served with a first-class meal in seven minutes. They "mess"—which means eat—in an immense open-air "deck," and are served on the cafeteria plan. It is certainly impressive to hear the bugle call, which means "mess formation," see the men line up and march to the mess deck, receive their most appetizing rations—it was beef, vegetables, bread and butter, stewed peaches and cereal the day we were there—and lay to with appetites never seen at the Alexandria or Hotel Coronado.

The kitchens are called the "galleys"—and feminine housekeepers must view them with envy. For there are expert dishwashing machines, potato peelers, bread cutters, every kind of labor-saving device. The bakery turns out several thousand loaves a day, and the best bread in the country. And such pies—no fond mamma may fear that her Willie is being underfed. Then there is the canteen, at which they may purchase luxuries at cost price—and the profits, if any, go to the athletic fund. All payments are made with books of tickets of varying values, "filthy lucre," hygienically dispensed.

Of course, the entire navy are desciples of hygiene. Cleanliness is an obsession with them. The canvas cots have to be scrubbed, the mattress covers washed, and every sailor washes his own clothes; those natty white uniforms that show every speck of dirt and have to be made snow white in sea water and generally worn rough dry, although the fastidious beaux can get them pressed for a nickel.

GOOD AT WASHING.

Sailors are first-class laundresses and are allotted three white suits each and one serge one—serge is for dress occasions. Under every cot is a precious treasure chest, passing small to contain those priceless little personal possessions which every man loves to accumulate. Big canvas bags hold the wardrobe—and they have to be scrubbed, too. The entire station seemed to be one big drying ground, clothes lines everywhere and snow-white apparel waving in the breeze.

In the mess deck there is a big white screen and a movable motion-picture machine, which is a prized form of entertainment the men enjoy. In the "berth deck," where they sleep, there is a big stage at the end, and on gala occasions cots are rolled out of sight and artists come down from town to amuse the men.

Naturally, there is a first-class band, which gives an afternoon concert every day. The camp teems with clever musicians. That is why naval bands can be so generously loaned for Red Cross events in town.

Every man wears an identification tag around his neck, bearing his name, number, company, etc. Mostly they are worn on a cord, but sumptuous ones buy themselves a gold chain, which we naturally mistook for a romantic charm of some kind.

WESTERN ANNAPOLIS.

The recently formed "cadet" classes are responsible for the prideful surmise that San Pedro is to become the Annapolis of the West. For, in this corps men are placed who have education and intellectual attributes above their fellows, and they receive the sort of intensive training by which they will either graduate directly as commissioned officers, or prove themselves incapable. Lieut. W. Irving is instructor for this class, which includes navigation, seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, boat drill, signalling and hygiene. Most of the classes are held in classrooms just like a college course, but practical knowledge in boat management, in which they are taught how to manage every kind of craft from a rowboat, a sailboat to a battleship, is the most popular. Any recruit can, however, work up to officer's rank, via petty officer routine.

The station is like a miniature town. For, besides the clothing depot, the great storehouses, the carpentry, engineering, plumbing departments, etc., there is a tailor's shop, a barber's, and, just outside the gates, a restaurant. I noticed there was no labor-saving device in the barber shop; that office is still performed by human hands.

The "dungarees," which sounds so Kiplingesque, are the men who wear butcher blue cotton suits, and are the engineers, fitters, builders, etc.

THE WEEKLY EVENT.

Of course, the great event of each week is the departure of the men whose training is complete—those proud contingents which stand at attention, with all their worldly baggage beside them, ready to bid farewell and leave for parts unknown, to distant duty, adventure, danger, perhaps to fame—perhaps forever. Every week they leave us, these proud boys that the training camp has transformed from pasty civilians into valiant men of the sea. And their officers look a little more stern, a little more rigid, on such occasions, for any show of sentimental weakness is anathema. But as news comes back later of their prowess, when some eastern commanding officer writes a word of praise for San Pedro's achievements, when some San Pedro contingent has won the colors in some big eastern review—why, then, the officers allow themselves just a little sentimental pride for these—their boys. And the new recruits probably get an extra dose of hard drilling to insure that the standard has not relapsed.

Activity begins at 4:30 a.m., when the cooks are called, and dies away into silence at "taps"—9:05 p.m., when all good jackies must be in bed. A giggle or two after that fatal minute may get a whole company into disgrace.

Here is the complete routine of the day's work at the training camp:

Angeleno in France Says Buy Bonds for Guns.

Declares Cannon Needed to Defeat Germans.

Can't Stop Americans When They Get Started.

A fair estimate of the American as an artilleryman and a trench fighter is contained in a letter from Kenneth S. Reynolds, a Los Angeles soldier, to his step-father, W. P. Reynolds, real estate and mining man with offices in the Hellman Building.

Reynolds is 22 years old. He was working on his father's claim at Gold Reef, Cal., last year, when drafted. He went to Camp Lewis and was soon transferred to France, where he is now a member of the First Motor Machine Regiment.

His idea of the American is that he goes after things in dead earnest and "brings home the bacon."

"The American artillery," he says, "is without doubt the best in the world, and if you want the war to come to an early, successful finish, buy all the Liberty Bonds in sight and boost for big guns. If the Americans have plenty of big guns and ammunition they will knock the spots off the Germans.

"The American soldiers seem to have the 'savvy,' which some of the others lack, and they shoot at something every time they pull the string. The Frenchies don't quite understand how the Americans figure. They are in love with the American artillery, but they don't like the infantry worth a whoop. They say we are too fast.

"About the second day an American is in a trench up goes somebody's head and bang goes a shot at a head. He is lucky if he only gets a burn. That scares the tar out of the whole bunch for a while. Then they get to talking about it and that makes them mad. The Frenchmen try to quiet them down, but you might as well try to quiet a rattlesnake as a singed American. They either have to be taken out of the trenches or else over they go, and believe me, it is good-by Boche every time they go over. It is useless to tell an American to take the first trench. He takes everything in sight."

Speaking of German destruction Mr. Reynolds says: "Day before yesterday I took a trip to Rheims and stayed three hours. That was long enough, because you can see everything that is left in that time. The cathedral is damaged quite a bit, but not as bad as one would expect, considering the fighting that has been going on there. But the Germans didn't take the place, and what is more they never will take it, because they have American artillery all up and down the front."

In describing the "alert," which signals the approaching of bombing airplanes Mr. Reynolds says it sounds just like the siren whistle blown by the Los Angeles Times on election day. One night when a bomb was dropped near the sleeping quarters the soldiers all rushed out of the building. Mr. Reynolds was the last man out. He had his pants over his shoulder and his shoes in his hands, he says.

"We ran for about a mile, till we got out of town," he says, "then waited about an hour, and because the Germans didn't drop any bombs we cussed them all the way back. Now, when we go to bed our automobiles are headed toward the street, with a priming can on the fender and the hood unlatched. Our shoes are unlaced and set exactly where we know they'll be, our overcoats and tin derbies are near at hand, and we sleep with the rest of our clothes on."

IS WELL POOR ONE OR IS IT GUSHING?

REPRESENTATIVES OF DISTRICT ATTORNEY TO INVESTIGATE "BALDWIN NUMBER FOUR."

Representatives of the District Attorney's office were expected some time today to visit the Montebello oil field to make an examination of "Baldwin No. 4," on the property of the Red Star Petroleum Company, which was reported yesterday as having developed into a gusher.

Deputy Dist.-Attys. Hogan and Glover are conducting the case against I. W. Fuqua, president and manager of the company, who is charged with filing false reports with the State Inspector. The preliminary examination has been on for several days before Justice Hinshaw.

Following closely on a report made to the District Attorney's office that the disputed well would be bailed out to disprove allegation that the strata was oil bearing, it was reported that the well began to gush while this operation was under way.

To McNeil's Island.

SEDITIOUS CARTOONIST MUST SERVE TWO YEARS.

L. N. LEGENDRE, a cartoonist, with offices in the Van Nuys Building, charged with violation of the Espionage Act, withdrew his plea of not guilty before Judge Trippet, yesterday, and was sentenced to the Federal prison on McNeil's Island, for two years.

The detection of the Pro-German activities of Legendre was secured by means of a dictagraph placed in his room, by agents of the Army and Navy Intelligence Bureau, and the defendant acknowledged the truth of the statements that had been alleged against him in the complaint.

In commenting on statements imputed to Legendre, that "this was a rich men's war," and that it was "a Morgan war," Judge Trippet took occasion to say that the events of the past year had shown that the rich men of the nation were doing their full duty in the great national crisis.

"There is no conflict between the rich and the poor man at this time," said the court, "and the men of means in the United States are suffering along with the poor in doing what they can to assist the government in its effort to win the war. American liberty is threatened at this time, and Germany says that there must be no freedom of the seas except as that nation dictates to the world."

The court declared that the undenied charges against Legendre demanded severe punishment. It was time to draw the line between the friends and the enemies of the nation; there could be no middle course, he declared.

Legendre lives in Sierra Madre, and the language imputed to him was used on June 8. His wife was in the courtroom when Legendre was sentenced. The attorney representing the defendant admitted to the court that the action of his client was utterly reprehensible, and that he ought to be put away some place where his unpatriotic utterances would have no effect on those who might hear them.

COUNCIL DIRECTOR TO VISIT THIS CITY.

LUNCHEON TO BE FOLLOWED BY MEETING OF WAR WORK BODIES.

C. C. Moore, director of the State Council of Defense, will make his first visit in Los Angeles since his appointment, arriving next Tuesday. The Women's Committee of the Councils of National and State Defense has arranged for a luncheon in his honor at the Alexandria at 12:30 o'clock on Wednesday. The luncheon will precede the regular meeting of the Central Committee of the Women's Committee.

Besides the members of the Women's Committee, invited to meet Mr. Moore at luncheon, are members of the County Council of Defense of Southern California, the judges of the Superior Court, Red Cross officials, and other organizations interested in and engaged in war activities.

Mrs. H. A. Cable, chairman of the Women's Committee, Councils of National and State Defense, will preside at the luncheon, and three-minute speeches will be made by Mrs. A. S. Lobingier, Mrs. Ed Lyman, chairman of the Red Cross; Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, Judge Wellborn of the County Council of Defense, Marshall Stimson of the "Four-Minute Men," and Mrs. Mathew Robertson. The Governor may also be present.

The luncheon and meeting are open to those interested in the activities of the State Council, and the Women's Committee. Reservations may be made for the luncheon up to noon of Tuesday, at the State Council of Defense headquarters, No. 719 South Hill street.

PROVERBS.

Theodore Roche, attorney for Franz Bopp and prominent as a legal light in I.W.W. cases, is coming to Los Angeles to open the gubernatorial campaign for Mayor Rolph of San Francisco. Remember the old saying about "Birds of a feather"?

FALLING STARS.

Professional baseball has been ruled a non-essential employment and there are indications that the draft regulations of the "work-or-fight" order will include theatrical performers and moving picture actors. Perhaps the movie directors will now get a little rest. There's likely to be a considerable slump in the applications of fair-haired pacifistic juveniles!

THE RIGHT TALK.

"These men stand admittedly in a position of hostility to this government, and the court is not inclined to accept the dictum that they and those of their kind should have the right of free speech for the purpose of destroying the Constitution," said Judge Bledsoe in pronouncing sentence upon Magon and Rivera. The recording angel has "written the judge as one who loves his fellow-men." "May his tribe increase."

SPANKING AND FEEDING.

The Italians are repeating the feat of the ancient Romans by restoring order, hygiene, discipline and law among the Albanians in the territory taken from Austria. Go to it, sons of Italy! That is exactly what the United States, England and France are trying to do for every country in the world that needs assistance—although some nations, like bad babies, have to be given a good spanking before they can be reasoned with, or even fed.

USE NOTHING GERMAN.

They are spreading the gospel of the U.N.G. This is not the Union National Guard, but the members are pledged to Use Nothing German—as a war measure. The things that were made in Germany may not find admittance to their homes. They will have naught to do with German cooking, neither will they marry to the strains of the Mendelssohn or Wagner wedding marches. The only German thing they crave is the scalp of the Kaiser.

THE WAR ETERNAL.

William Pickens, a prominent negro educator, in addressing a local audience of colored people, spoke glowingly of the late Frederick Douglass, who has been called "The noblest slave that ever God set free." Harriet Beecher Stowe's fictitious hero, "Uncle Tom," was a noble character; but he was ignorant and knew not the love of country that inspired the life of Douglass. The latter, although a slave, was an educated man and, loving his country and his race, could not be a pacifist. It is not those who resign themselves to evil, but those who valiantly fight and work to eliminate wrongs, that have ever been and will ever be the benefactors of mankind.

TWO-HEADED.

Mayor Rolph of San Francisco is posing before an amused public as the two-headed calf in the political circus. His campaign itinerary provides that at 4 o'clock in the afternoon he shall address the Hickory Club and the Jeffersonian Club in advocacy of State rights, a tariff for revenue only and a strong line of demarcation between State and Federal governments; and that he shall address the Union League Club at 8 o'clock in the evening in advocacy of a high tariff for the protection of American labor and industry, and a strongly centralized Federal government. In short—"If you believe in a low tariff and State rights, vote for me in the Democratic primary; but if you believe in adequate protection for American industries and a strong central government, vote for me in the Republican primary. I can give you both."

WOOLWINE'S CHANCES.

Thomas Lee Woolwine has sprung up almost overnight from a possibility to a probability for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. When Mayor Rolph of San Francisco threw his coat into the Democratic ring—his hat was already in the Republican arena—he sent Frank Heney's stock from above par down to fifty below. The labor-union votes and the votes of the sons of violence are now oscillating between Rolph and Heney. The way has been cleared for genuine Democrats and friends of militant law and order to back a candidate whose Democracy, like his integrity, is above suspicion. Woolwine is that candidate. Reports from San Francisco, where the first offensive seems to have been launched, are to the effect that Woolwine will carry Northern and Central California (not by 200,000, as a typographical error made The Times say Saturday morning) but by 20,000 votes. His standing and popularity in Southern California are revealed by his vote for District Attorney two years ago.

WOMEN IN THE CAMPAIGN.

FEW OF THE time-honored political maxims are going to hold good in the present campaign. The women have taken a header into politics and the sea is full of them. And for the first time in the history of the State the women registrants exceed the men, the female vote is in the majority. This fact has occasioned a mild sort of panic in masculine realms, where formerly certain prescribed tactics could be relied upon, where certain kinds of speeches and appeals could be trusted to have given effects, and where party alignments were a fairly safe bet. But the women are not necessarily going to play havoc o'er the once harmonious scene. Indeed, so far they have shown a rather unsuspected penchant for logic—logic, once regarded as man's peculiar prerogative.

And after all, what is politics? It is the business of the city, State and the nation, not to be regarded with disrepute, but rather, as a matter for conscientious study, reputable service, active consideration worthy of the best brains and attention of the electorate. The women are frankly new to this sort of business and propose to inform themselves rather minutely, not alone as to individual candidates, but as to methods, ways and means. In this respect the women's clubs have formed a painstaking and effective university, for there they have not only practiced the technique of parliamentary debate themselves, making for orderly thinking and well-disciplined sessions, but it is in the clubs that every political measure is discussed and every political candidate invited to express his views.

Time was when the male of the species claimed politics and political knowledge for his own. He occasionally suffered conscientious scruples on the subject and vouchsafed a little guarded information to his womenfolk, whose ability to understand he seriously doubted. But other times, other manners. Today it is madame whose knowledge of political questions enjoys wide ramifications, whose information is quite alarmingly exact, and who presents monsieur with a lengthy catalogue of tips on who, why and how. It is to madame that monsieur hastens for knowledge, for an intelligent array of facts, for enlightenment upon lurking darkness; and her pen pictures of some of the ebullient and self-confident candidates, their public utterances and their private aims, would make the old-time, easy-going politician turn in his grave.

II.

TAKE the candidates for Governor, for instance. When Francis J. Heney spoke before the Woman's City Club he used all the old flamboyant rhetoric, all the old hoary bromides, all the paint and none of the technique. It was the sort of stuff the demode politician reserved for the mob. He gave the women gaudy melodrama, while complimenting them on that very intelligence which had been trained for polished reserve, cultured subtlety, and a minute discrimination. In fact, he presented those connoisseurs in candidates with a multicolored chromograph, when they could have effectually appreciated a skillful mezzotint.

And while there are Women-for-Woolwine clubs, which would seem to indicate that Woolwine stands high with a devoted band of the sex, this ingenious form of campaigning leaves the ladies very capable of dissecting any Woolwine weaknesses and discussing him quite impartially.

The engaging habit the women's clubs have of inviting the various candidates for office to present themselves on their platforms is a disconcerting innovation in politics and a marked feature of the present campaign. It gives them an opportunity of seeing the candidates in the flesh, studying their physiognomy, their literacy, their degree of logic, and, what is even more interesting, said candidates' opinion of women. Most male candidates make the grievous mistake of smothering the women with compliments on their intelligence—what they have long since considered an established fact.

There is no leading measure or issue that is not exhaustively discussed at the women's clubs. Speakers are heard on both sides of every issue; questions are asked from the floor; and he is a fortunate speaker indeed, who does not leave that platform dubious as to the impression he has made. Some of the leading questions leave no doubt in the mind of the candidate as to his audience's familiarity with the subject in hand. Rash and florid statements have to be verified—yes, altogether things have been very perturbing since the ladies found politics interesting.

III.

IN THE present campaign there are few women candidates for office, and even those cannot rely upon the whole-hearted support of their sex. Women seem to have no intention of supporting a woman just because she is a woman, and they are apparently anxious to ensure that their first women representatives shall do them credit. But they are concentrating on the work to see that the best available men are elected and to that end male candidates are subjected to a scrutiny which will go far to raise the level of politics. But one rather disconcerting fact is obvious: the women consider the selections offered pretty poor in many cases and feel that they will have to make the best of a sad choice. If the male of the species is to maintain prestige and influence in the political world as time goes on, it is obvious that a much better class of man office-holder will be demanded. At present it is the best feminine intellect which is interesting itself in legislative channels, and second-rate masculine intellects suffer accordingly. The best female intellects have little difficulty in surpassing second-quality male intellects, and masculinity can only hope to hold its own in the field if the caliber of its legislative candidates is raised to a higher standard.

In this connection it is well to recall that when the first contingent of lady lobbyists returned from Sacramento they one and all voiced their amazement that the average Senator and Representative should have been of such small mold. The subject was discussed from many club platforms with polite astonishment that the State should be run by men who surely could not hold first-class jobs in a big business corporation. And when the establishment of a moron colony for the feeble-minded was being debated in the Friday Morning Club, the lady who rose to remark that we seemed to have a very effective one at Sacramento already, raised a joyous laugh of satirical approval.

IV.

THE women have developed two disconcerting traits since their advent in politics, formerly regarded as the exclusive attributes of men—logic and a sense of humor. These are powerful weapons, powerful allies. They are also proving themselves able and conservative public speakers—they don't harangue, they don't filibuster, and they eschew melodrama. Mindful of the traditions against their sex, women speakers verify their facts, measure their statements, and keep their sentimentality well in check.

There seems to be no danger at present of the women aligning themselves on a sex partisanship on any measure, for their opinions and tastes are as diverse as men and their party affiliations equally apportioned. Women are, however, much more likely to consider the candidate than the party; they have not been steeped in party prejudices as the men have. But one thing we are sure they can be trusted to do, and that is to see that the elected candidate lives up to his pledges. There will be short shrift for the backslider of flamboyant promise and small performance. For the women have time and taste for politics and their interest is persistent and steadfast.

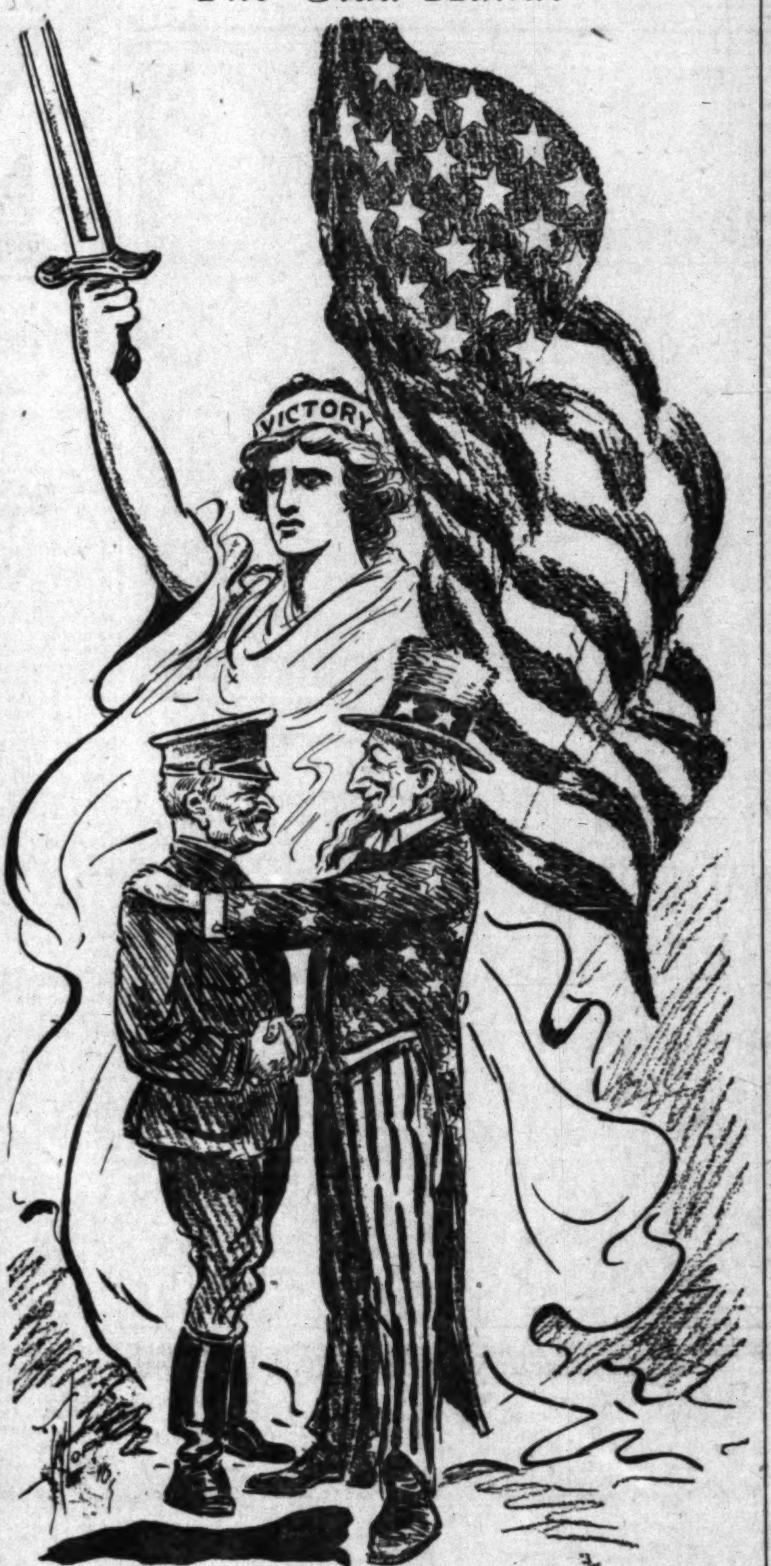
In this connection it is interesting to know that our officials are under constant feminine scrutiny. It is one lady's appointed duty in each club to report on, say, the Supervisors, keep a careful tab on their activities and their votes, and tell the club all about them on civic department days. Another member is appointed to attend all the City Council meetings and present her club with a monthly report on individual Councilmen. In this way it stands to reason that a slacker city official stands a poor chance of re-election.

In the meantime, the woman campaign manager is also with us. And women are born advertisers. We even have an incumbent sheriff with a woman campaign manager in this election. These women campaign managers will naturally use their club affiliations to further the cause of their candidates; but it is probably true that women are not supporting women just because they are women, whether she be a campaign manager or candidate.

Of course the wives of candidates had been known to dip into politics long before women had the vote. But in the olden days when duchesses bought votes with kisses, and wives culled votes with picture hats, conditions were very different. The modern plan of campaign is far more subtle. The candidate's fair relative has long since been affiliated with numerous women's organizations and ere election day arrives she has been a constant attendant at them all. And she wins her way to favor with service, she makes herself a valuable member if she is clever, and has probably been at pains to adorn the club before it adorns her. Wheedling votes for one's pet candidates out of men was a very different matter. The lady campaigner today faces a very different proposition. Her sex knows all about her and is usually quite indifferent to her purely feminine charms. She must have a first-class argument at her tongue's end, backed with facts and evidence. She needs have brains as well as beauty and charm.

The Times says these things although some of the most active women politicians in California have shown a weird enthusiasm for useless commissions and boards and a multiplicity of needless office-holders, all piling up the tax-burdens at an appalling rate and giving California a forbidding repute as a high-cost experiment station. But The Times trusts the average woman voter is seeing a great light on this subject.

The Glad Hand.



HOW THE YANKEES FIGHT.

Strictly speaking, some one of Mr. Hohenzollern's bright young war correspondents ought to be more intimately acquainted with Sammy's mannerisms in a scrap than are we who sit thousands of miles away with noses buried in the dispatches. But maybe the Germans haven't sufficiently recovered their breath to talk about the devils that have been at their heels. Hindenburg had a fit of apoplexy the other day, it is said. Perhaps the Kaiser had reminded him that the Americans were to amount to nothing in this war. Anyhow, according to the Germans, the Yankees "are not playing the game."

Being raw, untrained and rebellious troops, this was more or less expected; and there is nothing more disgusting to a veteran than to find a greenhorn nosing into his especial line, turning his calculations upside down and giving the lie to oracular pronouncements from the Wilhelmstrasse itself.

If the battle of the last few days had been a war game, decided by referees rather than by bullets and dead men—and some live ones, too—the Americans would have been declared officially wiped off the face of the earth. They were technically licked, theoretically annihilated, hypothetically crumpled.

But, said Gen. Liggett by way of explaining to Foch why the Americans wouldn't stay put when the Germans had pushed them back a couple of miles: "This is unendurable and none of our soldiers would understand their not being asked to do whatever is necessary to re-establish a situation which is humiliating and unacceptable to our country's honor. We are going to counter-attack."

Imagine anybody being crazy enough to attack the apex of a German drive! It was magnificent, but it was not war. No German referee would have stood for it. He would have said Gotteramerdungscewinhousen! As it was, we may never know what the Germans did say. The Yankees just picked up their heels and planted them squarely a hundred yards ahead at every jump.

When the German waves had swept over the positions held by the Yankee troops a lot of little corporal squads of Americans were tucked away in thickets and dugouts. By the rules of war they should have emerged with uplifted arms and cried "Kamerad." They did nothing of the kind. They waited quiet as little mice until they heard the "rebel yell" of the returning Yanks, then opened fire right and left with machine guns, and the bewildered Hun must have thought the ground sprouted Yankees all the same as mushrooms.

And consider the two Yankee sergeants who were captured in the first rush of Germans. They were prisoners and they were taken to the rear to be questioned by a German officer, and they were taken under guard. But the two Yankee sergeants did not like the looks of the officer; or perhaps he said something disrespectful and made them peevish; for certain it is that a few hours later they came trottting back to their company and brought along the officer's private papers as a souvenir. That is not "playing the game." A prisoner may escape if he can, but to shoot the guard with its own weapons, and to kill an officer behind the German lines is strictly "verboten" by all the Kriegspiel rules.

And then the Yankees were such poor soldiers as to take ground so fast their soup kitchen couldn't keep up with them. To a German the idea of running away from the soup kitchen must seem the height of foolishness. Only very young and raw troops would do things of the kind.

And no doubt the Germans could make some expressive comments on the use of explosive bullets by the Yanks. Herr Gott! The use of explosive bullets is strictly forbidden by international law to which all civilized nations and Germany have subscribed. But the Yankees used dum-dums and lots of them. You see, the Yanks went ahead so fast and shot so rapidly that the ammunition carriers, like the soup kitchens, couldn't keep up with them; so not wishing to stop the fun when it was going good, all the same as a Fourth of July back home, they just took a lot of German machine guns, together with a thousand or so boxes of ammunition, and turned loose. No doubt the Germans could have wished the Yanks to be a little more careful about picking up stray guns and shells, for these boxes were dum-dums, explosive. No doubt, too, they had been planted in the German camps by wicked Belgian spies who wished to discredit the honor of Germany before the world.

The Yankees are too enthusiastic and impetuous to be good soldiers. They are too free with the bayonet, also; and the four-year veterans protested loudly over their shoulders as they beat it toward Berlin. But don't imagine those German veterans were running away. No. They were simply leading the Yankees on; and the foolish Yankees permitted themselves to be led into nine different towns which they refuse to give up; and the latest dispatches say the Yanks are complaining heavily with big guns and little ones, with bombs and bayonets, because the Germans are a little reluctant about letting them into Soissons.

And that is how the Yankees fight. They go headlong with a yell in their teeth and a smile on their lips; they grin when the ambulance carriers come along and they tell the doctors funny stories while he whets his carving knife; they rush for the hand-to-hand grapple, heedless of bursting shells and German oaths.

Judging from the acreage and conditions, the wheat yield for 1918 will top the highest previous record. It is believed that the yield in total bushels will exceed 1,000,000,000 bushels. How large a bin would be required to hold that much wheat? Class in arithmetic stand up!

THE LANCER.

NO DOUBT all the little angels sang and rejoiced when Al Jennings ceased to find the life of a bandit profitable and turned respectable.

Although the event seemed more calculated to interest the Jennings family and the county jailer than the general public, we all did our solemn duty by Al.

I, for one, tried my best to get up the proper degree of excitement over a long sniveling story by Will Irwin explaining the not-very-clear reason why Jennings wanted to be a thief and a less clear reason why he changed his mind.

I never could understand exactly why Al's adventures in virtue were of any more interest than those of a million other crooks, but I faithfully read Al's long and excited account of his decision to be an evangelist, said decision coming immediately after Billy Sunday had departed the town with some $80,000 in collections. But there are limits. Al is going to do it all over again for the movies. But I strike!

I am tired of Al. Doesn't it seem odd that all these reformed bandits insist upon having their soul struggles out loud and always in front of an audience!

Oh, would that Al might go back and become a bandit again! Between yielding him my Ingersoll and being bored to agony by his everlasting yawp about himself I prefer losing my watch.

I desire the blood of a more or less innocent woman.

That she has been my hostess does not matter. In fact, that's the trouble.

Among her guests I found an army officer just from the trenches and he had some new stuff. I wanted to talk to him and he wanted to talk to me.

I got him out on the porch and he was rattling away like a Browning machine gun—in fact, we both were—when the hostess came bubbling out.

"Now," she said, "I am not going to let you men get off here by yourselves." With that she bounced in between us, dragging a slab-sided literary lady who made the following profound remarks:

"Don't you find fighting in the trenches awfully exciting?"

"Does one become frightened in the midst of a battle?"

"How does it feel to be wounded?"

She started to ask him if he had ever seen the Kaiser, but I stabbed her with an ax and we hid her body in an empty flour bin.

I have just returned a letter to the sender.

I don't know what the letter was about. I only got as far as the signature and a rubber stamp at the bottom of the page. The rubber stamp said:

"Dictated, but not read."

I sent the letter back with the following inscription:

"Opened, but not read."

And to this I added the following note: "If you are not interested enough in your letters to read them, I'm sure I'm not."

Another phrase much used in modern business letters never fails to stir my wrath. It is this:

"Mr. Jones was obliged to leave the office before attaching his signature to this letter."

The most successful man I know is the one who writes the best letters I have ever read. They have what Barrie calls "that damn charm" in them; they make you feel pleased with yourself; they make you feel that he had been looking forward to writing you this letter; had been saving it up as a kind of rare pleasure for himself. And he doesn't stick a nasty, little, ill-mannered slur at the bottom with a rubber stamp.

Many profound and learned, not to say fussy, political economists are intensely worried over the fear that the ladies may refuse to give up their jobs running elevators, chauffeuring automobiles and such after the war.

For my part I am in terror for fear they will not refuse. You see I have it figured out this way:

If they are kept occupied as elevator pilots and in other most distinguished he occupations they will not resume their social activities. If they do not resume their social activities the dance craze will not return.

I shudder every time I think of the dance craze.

It would have been pathetic had it not been so tiresome. Poor old creatures. How they creaked around the floors trying to be 20 again! I used to see them dragging their dejected and patient old husbands around. Every once in a while one of these hapless martyrs would give me a most pitiful and imploring look over the shoulder of his partner. A look of longing. A look of envy. You see I was adamant. I wouldn't dance.

There is a very distinguished and well-known father in Germany who is not at all in doubt as to whether his sons have been killed or captured. Eh, Wilhelm!

Whatever else has been said of him in the past or is to be said of him in future, Col. Roosevelt is no piker as a patriot. The Roosevelt boys could have easily found something "soft" in the way of army headquarters jobs either on this side or in France. Every one of them has gone in where the trouble is the thickest. American democracy rings true. The blood of the rich man and the poor; the black man and the white is dyeing the ground of Chateau Thierry in a common stream. THE LANCER.

The German fleet still lies bottled up at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, afraid to come out and engage the ships of the Allies. No greater demonstration of the value of the command of the sea has ever been witnessed.

J. W. Robinson Co.
-Seventh and Grand-

A Manicure at Robinson's is a joy—and it costs only 35 cents.

Demonstration of New Hot Point Electrical Cooking Devices to Save Time, Worry and Temper.

To show those who now have electric cooking devices how to get the most good out of them, and to teach those who have not had experience, just how to use Hot Point devices, a demonstration will be held in Robinson's Household Department this week, of:

Toasters, Flat Irons, Cookers, Grills, Chafing Dishes, Percolators and Traveling Sets.

Every one who cooks or even eats ought to be interested. For electrical cooking is going to be as indispensable as electric lighting, before this world is very much older.

HOUSEHOLD DEPT.—LOWER FLOOR

PALM BEACH SUITS
Keep You Cool, Men
$15 and $20

Palm Beach Cloth and Mohair come now in patterns and colors that permit particular men to dress in their usual good taste, although in light, airy clothes that make the hottest days seem cool and comfortable.

They come in many different patterns, including dark dressy stripes and some new plain shades.

FIRST FLOOR

Special, Men Silk Shirts Exclusive Patterns
$10

For men who are accustomed to wearing the very best, but who now want to economize we offer a series of fine silk shirts of heavy quality, in patterns that not only are unusual and extremely smart, but actually are exclusive. There is just one of a pattern in each size.

A very unusual shirt at $10.

FIRST FLOOR

Dresses That Are Reduced in Price Are Real Bargains

Not to claim too much, nor to boast, although we might be justified in doing so, the Frocks of Silk—of light Georgette, of summery Crepe de Chine, of Taffeta and of airy Foulard are quite unusual at the small prices for which they are offered.

They are reduced in price. They have sold for very much more. But one must not expect everything. The lines are broken. You may not find your size in the frock that you like. You may not find a shade to suit you in frocks that fit. But the prices are so much lower than usual that everyone ought to look before deciding upon a frock.

THIRD FLOOR

About 150 Frocks remain for clearance this week.

At $14.50, $19.50 and up to $39.50—which were formerly very much higher.

Each frock has the something—the different touch—that is so distinctly Robinson's

Philippine Underwear at $3.95

Gowns, Envelopes, Combinations

Not the ordinary Philippine wear. We have pretty Philippines at $2.95, but the better bargains are these, for the lowest price rarely means the most value.

There are Gowns and Envelopes and Combinations.

They are done in the finest Philippine style. They are soft and sheer, beautiful beyond description and new, to the latest moment, in all the little whimsies that are wanted in underwear.

Again—the price—and choice of a full new assortment—$3.95.

THIRD FLOOR

Pink Satin Bloomers $2.95

Pink satin pretties are very pleasing with tiny French flowers nestling coyly in the ruffles at the knees. They are very cheap—exceptionally so, at $2.95.

THIRD FLOOR

Khaki Middies for Mountains or Vacation

Middies, made like coats, of regular government khaki, look well, wear well and are very becoming to most girls. Large pockets and belts add attractiveness. Sizes are 14, 16, 18, at $3.50.

Skirts to match—lengths 30 to 36 at $3.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Chiffon Taffeta Special

35 inches wide in white, ivory, Ciel, pink, corn, rose, Nile, pearl, Beige, tan, golden, taupe, Myrtle, purple, wine, Belgian, reseda, navy, midnight, black.

And it is a good grade of taffeta—has body—and substance and beautiful sheen—and it is pure not adulterated silk.

It is a special for Monday only—yard $1.29.

SECOND FLOOR

All-Wool Challies

Seventy-five pieces of all wool Challies have arrived. They probably are the last to be had for some time to come. They are very beautiful. There are plain new patterns and stripes and they are every thread pure wool. 27 to 30 inches wide, $1.25 the yard.

Wool Challies are among the most attractive of fabrics for dresses and for skirts. New York is giving them a place along with gingham in popular favor. For beauty and attractiveness no fabric has more in its favor. For economy, for practical purposes, nothing could excel a pure wool material at $1.25 a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

GIRLS' COATS

Children's Coats in smart styles, in checks or plain colors; have embroidered pique collars, others have quaint high waists with belts and large patch pockets.

Sizes are 6, 8, 10, 12. They are specially priced at $2.95-$4.95.

GIRLS' FROCKS

Another special for Girls is a line of exceptionally good looking plaid and plain blue, pink, buff and green gingham Frocks. Sizes are 6, 8, 10, 12, 14. Prices are only $1.95 and $2.95.

FEW SURPRISES IN LIST OF PRIMARY CANDIDATES.

Some Alleged "Straight" Party Men Found in Queer Company; Stephens is not Progressive Here.

BY THE WATCHMAN.

THE complete list of candidates whose names will appear upon the primary ballot shows few surprises, but is worthy of close scrutiny by the voters. It will be found that in a number of instances candidates who have been advertising themselves as the "only straight Republican" or the "only Bourbon pure Democrat" have filed under every party head that would have them.

It was expected that Francis Jonah Heney would file under the Republican head, but he was satisfied to run as a Progressive and a Democrat. From the north comes a story to the effect that Heney changed his mind after a confab with W. G. McAdoo. It is reported that Mr. McAdoo advised him to run exclusively as a Democrat, indicating that the national administration really expects to take a part in the final election.

This should not be too alarming, however, to Republicans, because it will be remembered that when National Chairman Hays got into the Wisconsin fight, he whipped the administration to a frazzle. That he will send some eastern spellbinders here if necessary was the statement he made two months ago.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITY.

In the list of entrants are to be found numerous Socialist candidates. Henry H. Roser of this city is the Red candidate for Governor. None of the Socialists expects to be elected, but they may have an important influence in some districts. That is, if they had no candidates they could make it interesting for some of the others.

In looking over the list of candidates as prepared by Registrar Lyons it will be found that some of them have filed under several party heads, but this does not mean to a certainty that their names will be on the ballot under each heading.

This is due to the fact that a candidate for a State office may file part of his petitions here and part in other cities. For instance, the local list shows that Gov. Stephens filed under the Progressive head. He did so, but he filed only 1500 names and must have 2300 to get on the Progressive ballot. Unless the discrepancy is made up in other sections he failed to qualify as a Progressive candidate.

Lessons in French FREE To Drafted Men —and— Red Cross Nurses

The Times has made arrangements with C. Harry Allis, eminent artist and formerly an instructor in the School for Boys at Cucq, France, to teach French to all enlisted and drafted men and Red Cross nurses, free of charge.

Mr. Allis uses the direct method of teaching, by which the student learns the French language, as it is spoken in France, from contact with the instructor.

The classes will be conducted in the Assembly Hall on the Second Floor of the Times Building, First and Broadway, from 12:30 to 1:30 and from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock, Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays for twelve weeks.

No persons now in, or who contemplates entering, the Military or Naval Service of the United States, or Red Cross work, should neglect this opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the French language.

The Times' French Classes will be open to public enrollment upon the payment of a small fee to Mr. Allis, but no charge whatever will be made for instruction given to men in the United States Military and Naval Service or to Red Cross nurses.

Students may enroll with Mr. Allis at The Times Building, between 10:00 and 12:00 o'clock a.m., any day this week.

Politics.

moment to the public and he has never swerved from his duty. He is the sort that should be retained on the Superior bench.

P. B. Dougherty is making a fine race for justice of the peace. Included in the list of persons signing his nominating petition were men prominent in all walks of life.

Jo V. Snyder, the only Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is running as a loyal American and in announcing his platform says he believes the people should decide the liquor question. He does not believe in total prohibition because it would devastate thousands of acres of California vineyards. Speaking of possible Lieutenant-Governors, everything looks roseate for Joe Rominger of Long Beach. He is the south's candidate. He has a clean record and is the kind of man for the job.

Dr. Jessie Russell, prominent in club affairs and also in politics, is running under two heads—Republican and Prohibition—as a candidate for the Assembly in the Sixty-first district. There are so many drys in that territory that she may have a chance, but I doubt it.

Montaville Flowers, the author-orator of Monrovia, who hopes to defeat Randall, is a patriot. He is talking little but loyalty. The other night before a large audience he said: "There are enough English, French and American soldiers on the western front to hold a damnable German offensive forever. Germany came into the game as an empire builder too late."

As a result of our damphool primary law there are nearly 400 candidates to be voted upon at the primary election. Anybody with change enough to hire a petition circulator may get his name on the ballot.

C. J. McCormick, who was elected to the Board of Education despite vigorous opposition and who has served the people well, is a formidable contender in the Third Supervisor District. He has a large following and numerous personal friends, being prominent in State Federation societies and a good mixer.

E. J. Delorey is building some fences in the Second Supervisor District that will be pretty hard for J. H. Bean to scale.

The fight for Sheriff has resolved itself into an elimination contest. No one has any idea that John C. Cline, the incumbent, will not be one of the nominees. In fact, his four opponents admit that he will be a leader. Now the question is, will Perry A. Howard, Samuel L. Browne, James Albion Walton or Robert T. Brain oppose him in the final election? Without fear of contradiction I will say that it will not be Walton, but as to Howard, Browne and Brain it looks like a toss-up.

Henry H. Yonkin, candidate for the State Senate in the Thirty-eighth District, has a cinch. No opposition. THE WATCHMAN.

ACT IS UNFRIENDLY TO THE GOVERNMENT.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT DISAPPROVES OF EXCHANGING LIBERTY BONDS FOR STOCKS.

Characterizing as unfriendly to the government attempts by stock salesmen and promoters to exchange stock for Liberty Loan Bonds, Gov. Lynch of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District has notified all Liberty Loan State and county chairmen to report immediately full details of any such activity in their territory.

Gov. Lynch's letter to the Liberty Loan chairmen follows:

"There has been reported to us very considerable activity by stock salesmen and promoters, principally those representing companies whose securities are utterly worthless, in efforts to exchange the stocks they are issuing for Liberty Bonds.

"This practice is specifically disapproved by the Treasury Department, and we shall be compelled to characterize any continuance of it as an act unfriendly to the government.

"If any such cases come to your notice, please write to me promptly, giving name of company issuing stock which is being offered, its address, name of the salesman, and of the officers of the company if you can get them."

COLLEGE GIRLS IN CAMPAIGN.

Editor Matthews's Daughters Aid His Canvass.

Randall's War Record Loses Him Supporters.

Many Speakers to Orate for Woolwine for Governor.

BY THE WATCHMAN.

College girls playing the political game may sound somewhat strange, but Lucile and Genevieve Matthews and one or two of their girl chums are finding a fascination in the distribution of literature for J. L. Matthews, who is making a campaign from door-to-door in the supervisorial race in the First District. The daughters of Mr. Matthews are spending a large portion of their vacation in getting the folks acquainted everywhere with the literature of their father.

In Pasadena the other day they went systematically from street to street, and the people seemed to like the idea of this novel form of publicity. Mr. Matthews says that in this business of running an economical campaign in times of Hooverization in all things he is reasonably sure that he has many other candidates a trifle envious. Out in Covina one may find Mr. Matthews at work kicking a job press in the office where he gets out the Covina Argus, and with a supply of literature printed he starts out delivering with his girls. And his systematic campaign is having a decided effect in his favor. People are talking about him.

One can't help but believe that a man who is as active a campaigner as Mr. Matthews would also be energetic on one of the biggest jobs in the county—and the job of Supervisor needs a man in the prime of life, who has punch and pep. Supervising at the Hall of Records is a job for a strong man these days. It's time that we had such a man on the job. And the people in the First District seem to be rapidly coming to the conclusion that J. L. Matthews is the man.

They're Deserting Randall.

W. C. Mushet, Republican candidate for Congress, returned yesterday from a tour of the San Fernando Valley, from whose precincts he received a big vote two years ago when he was elected delegate to the Republican National Convention.

"The valley is opposed to the incumbent," said Mr. Mushet, "on his war record. I found many prominent men, Republicans and Democrats, who supported Mr. Randall two years ago who are doing all they can to defeat him this year."

Mr. Mushet issued a statement yesterday in which he charged that the Republican Loyalty League without authority from any considerable number of Republicans, has tried to defeat any attempt of the Republicans of the district to get together in an effort to beat Randall, which, declared Mr. Mushet, is the big issue.

"In defeating Randall, who is a war obstructionist," he said, "the people of the Ninth District will help win the war, for by removing him from Congress and electing in his place a loyal American they are backing up the administration and the whole war programme."

Mushet headquarters have been opened at No. 412 California Building, and a thorough campaign is being launched.

To Make Hairs Vanish From Face, Neck or Arms.

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

CALIFORNIANS SMASH TRADITIONS ON WAY THROUGH CANADIAN CITY

Review of Regiment in Calgary First Time Fully Armed American Unit Greeted in Dominion—Twelve Thousand New Men are Now at the Cantonment.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP LEWIS (Wash.) July 20.—A California National Army regiment, the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry, which trained at Camp Lewis for service overseas, recently made history and smashed traditions when the unit marched down the streets of Calgary, Can., on its way East.

Led by their band, the members of the regiment swung down the main street of Calgary and were cheered by thousands of onlookers. The Stars and Stripes floated side by side with the Union Jack throughout the city for the event. The appearance of the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry on the streets of Calgary was the first time that a full American military unit, armed, had ever passed in review on Canadian soil.

At Montreal the Third Battalion of the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry was drawn up for review and inspected by the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada. He was accompanied by Maj. J. D. Woolnough, in command of the battalion. At the same time Col. Creelman, D.S.O., acting Mayor of Montreal, and but recently returned from the trenches in France, presented to Maj. Woolnough a British flag, the first, so far as is known, to be carried by American troops.

A photograph showing the Three Hundred and Sixty-third Infantrymen marching through the streets of Calgary recently arrived at Camp Lewis and created a good deal of comment among the officers and men at the cantonment. The Three Hundred and Sixty-third has always been considered one of the crack regiments of the Ninety-first Division and is expected to give a good account of itself "over there."

NEW RECRUITS ARRIVE.

Again Camp Lewis has opened its doors to National Army recruits. First of the new quotas were received at the camp on Monday and by tonight nearly all of the 12,000 selective service men in this draft had reported at the cantonment, being inducted into the army and assigned to units of the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade, where all of the new troops are on duty for the first few weeks at least of their training.

Men arriving in this draft were handled more expeditiously than those of any other contingent. Officers in charge of the receiving station had become veterans in their work and it is now only a matter of minutes after a man reaches Camp Lewis with his draft board contingent until he is wearing Uncle Sam's khaki and has started on training work which speedily will fit him to fight for his country overseas.

The headquarters of the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade was moved just before the new men began to arrive and barracks that were not filled to capacity were prepared to receive the recruits. Company supply sergeants had been designated in advance and had uniforms and equipment all ready to issue to the new soldiers as soon as they were assigned to quarters.

The new arrivals probably brought less baggage to the camp than any other contingent of draft troops, as they had been informed that their uniforms would be promptly issued and they would have little use for civilian clothing.

DELAY FOR LETTERS.

As has been the case in every draft, many letters have arrived at the Camp Lewis postoffice with a name and Camp Lewis as the only address. It is taken for granted that these letters are for the new men, but it will be impossible to deliver them for several days at least, as it takes time to locate the men.

Relatives and friends of the recruits are urged by officers not to begin writing to the men as soon as they leave, but to wait until they arrive, are assigned and have either written or telegraphed their correct address.

Announcement of the forming of a new division at Camp Lewis is daily expected. That one will be organized in the near future is known, but whether it will be of National Army or Regular Army troops is still a matter to be learned. The First Infantry, which recently pitched its tents at Camp Murray, following its arrival from Honolulu, has moved to Camp Lewis, and makes the second Regular Army regiment at the cantonment, the Forty-fourth Infantry having been there for several months. The chief organizations now in camp are these two units and the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Depot Brigade.

The depot brigade is now the largest organization at the cantonment, and has reached its maximum size, since its establishment last September. The unit now has approximately 22,000 National Army men and approximately 690 officers.

Speculation is rife as to who will command the new division to be formed. Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell's name has frequently been mentioned in connection with the post, but no official announcement has been made.

WHO WILL COMMAND?

Who will command the Ninety-first Division when it begins service overseas is another question of interest at the cantonment, but no early word concerning this is expected. Maj.-Gen. H. A. Greene, who trained the division, is now in the Philippines with the rank of brigadier-general.

To take charge of the new department of civilian relief and home service for the Red Cross at Camp Lewis, W. C. Collins, former member of the Spokane City Commission, recently reported at the cantonment. Soldiers who are in any way anxious or worried about the comfort and well-being of the folks at home have only to apply to Mr. Collins at Red Cross headquarters and immediate action will be taken by him to allay their fears.

"We are fully equipped to meet every demand of the soldiers," says Mr. Collins. "No problem is too small or too large to receive the best attention possible. I have come here to hear all sorts of problems and will be on hand to see that every condition is properly dealt with, whether it be of a military, civil, personal or technical nature.

"If families are sick at home, with no means of support; if the rent comes around and there is no money on hand with which to pay it; communications are wanted between the soldier and family—in short, if there is anything that will relieve the minds of the soldiers at Camp Lewis, that is what we are here to do. And as far as we are able, we aim to help others and to show them how to help themselves."

Who'll Win One of These Medals?

Miss Marie Crawford and a medal.

Three of these plaques, given by the French government, will be presented by the Wiliam Sandoz mission tomorrow to those most active in this city in behalf of the disabled soldiers of France.

Tomorrow.

FRENCH INVALIDS TO BE AIDED BY "VICTORY DAY."

ELABORATE preparations have been made for the celebration of "Victory Day" in Los Angeles tomorrow. In his proclamation issued last Tuesday, Acting Mayor Farmer designated tomorrow for rejoicing and celebration of the great showing made by the American troops in the Battle of the Marne, and a proper observance of the day will be made.

Chief among the activities of the day will be a street campaign for funds for the relief of the half million invalid soldiers of France, conducted under the auspices of the William Sandoz Mission, now in Los Angeles, and sent here by the French government under the direction of M. Millerand, former Minister of War.

Several hundred prominent women and girls of Los Angeles have volunteered their services for this activity. Arthur Letts will be chairman of the day and George Fusenot will be the treasurer, while the captains will be under the general direction of Mrs. Hughie Hughes. Mr. Fusenot has designed a beautiful medallion to commemorate the occasion and these will be pinned upon the coats of all who give their bit toward helping the French soldiers.

The occasion will be particularly notable because the French government, through Mr. Sandoz, will recognize the activities of those who give their time and energies in behalf of these soldiers. Three medals, bearing the seal of France, surrounded by the Napoleonic wreath and attached to the tri-color, will be presented to those most active in the work and will be publicly presented by the French Consul following the celebration. Men from the Submarine Base will participate and will sing on the downtown streets.

In his proclamation, Acting Mayor Farmer dedicated Victory Day to the half million invalid soldiers of France in the following terms:

"This day will be dedicated to these men as 'Victory Day' in recognition of their sacrifices at the front, thus making possible the great victory which the Allies will eventually win.

"I appeal to your sympathy and your patriotism in this worthy cause. Let those of us who have health and strength do our utmost to assist those who have given their all in the cause of justice and liberty."

The captains of the teams for tomorrow are: Mrs. Lucien N. Brunswig, Mrs. Willis Booth, Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, Miss Adrian Esnard, Mrs. A. Sentous, Mrs. Emil Kehrlein, Miss Claudia Le Tourneau, Mrs. Margaret Hamm, Mrs. A. D. Houghton, Mrs. J. J. Scott, Mrs. R. Bolton, Mrs. Naud and others.

Employment Bureau.

PLENTY OF JOBS HERE; STEP UP AND TAKE 'EM.

THE following statement is issued by William L. Clark, chief examiner for the local United States Employment Service, formerly the Public Employment Bureau of Los Angeles, on the labor situation in Southern California:

Notwithstanding high rates offered, there is apparent a steady decrease in the number of available skilled and unskilled workers. With the corn and cotton crops soon to be harvested in Imperial Valley, the situation will undoubtedly become more serious before it improves. To illustrate typical unfilled orders on our boards at Court (Franklin) and Spring streets, the following opportunities may be mentioned:

Miners and muckers, out of town, permanent, transportation advanced, $3.50 to $4.75 per day. This company's product is urgently required for government war work.

Mechanics and laborers, out of town, fare advanced, 33 1-3 to 60 cents per hour. This company is filling war contracts.

Carpenters are needed both in and out of the city, at wages ranging from $4 to $5.25 per day. For government work outside the State, $5 per day is offered carpenters, fare advanced.

At going rates we have many calls for painters, gas and steam engineers, electricians, solderers, sheet metal workers, pattern makers, auto mechanics, hoist engineers, drillers, riggers, machinists, blacksmiths, linemen, gas power plant operators, sash and door men—in fact, for skilled men in every line.

A steady stream of employers calls at our quarters offering attractive inducements to hotel and ranch workers for service in and out of the city. The demand far exceeds the supply.

The draft took the cream of the workers between 21 and 31. Employers were forced to raise their age standards and this had the effect of quickly stripping the market of desirable workers up to say, 36 or 38 years old. In the process of adjustment to the new conditions, the maximum age limit has automatically advanced. The immediate effect on the labor market has been to create a healthy demand for the services of the man who was previously handicapped by the presence of a little gray hair.

The people of Los Angeles should have no patience with the able-bodied idler. At best these unemployed are community liabilities, consumers who produce not. In times of peace they were, to a degree, tolerated as ineffectuals, but in our present crisis they constitute a menace. These nonproducers are robbing the men who are making the world a decent place to live in.

Step forward, Mr. Able-bodied Man, and select your job. It's here for you. It's free.

RED CROSS IS PRACTICAL PART OF GREAT FIGHTING MACHINE

Aiding the Army, it Takes up the Broken Threads and Ministrations are Boundless—No Longer a Mere Bandage-Making Body—Some Examples.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent of The Times.

PARIS, July 7.—"Swing on, and stick if you can," said the driver, as he shot his ambulance from the garage out into the rue and raced off into the dark with the speed of an engine going to a fire. "This is going to be a b-a-d, busy night. It is every newspaper man for himself and the devil take the hindmost."

The Germans had launched one of their big offensives. It struck in an unexpected place, in a zone where there were no evacuation stations back of the lines. So the wounded were to be taken direct from the first-aid stations to bases in the south. But, as distances are measured in America, these base hospitals were only a short distance—a two-hour ride over roads permitting of great speed and "easy going" for the wounded.

To help meet this emergency was one of the duties of the American Red Cross. The driver, an ex-football player, had made several attempts to get into the army, but "athletic heart" was the invariable decision of the doctors. Determined to do his bit in some way or another, he caught on as a chauffeur for the Red Cross. At home he had racing cars of his own and his dad kept a flock of chauffeurs on his pay roll.

A LOAD OF NURSES.

Five miles out we shot by what at first appeared to me in the dark to be a truck load of pigs or calves, but the driver told me that they were nurses with their dark capes. These nurses were huddled on the floor of a truck identical with those in which we haul live stock to the slaughter-house in America. They, too, were headed for the front in the dead of night. Angels of mercy on a mission of love in a cattle truck!

In the dawn of the next morning one of these same nurses rode back in our ambulance to minister to the wounded during the trip. All the next day she worked among the blesses, and before her task was finished she had been thirty-six hours without sleep. One sometimes wonders if the world will ever be able to repay the women who sacrifice so much, often including health, in this war.

Our ambulance soon took on its cargo. There were four in it. One had lost his left hand, another had received a gunshot wound in the body, and two had been gassed. First-aid treatment, and the care given them during the trip, did much to mitigate their suffering. During that trip, not one of the men made a complaint. Four gamer men never lived. Three days later I was permitted to visit them. All were more than holding their own. The one who had lost his left hand was concerned chiefly because it incapacitated him for further fighting.

"I've still got a good right," he said contemplatively. "Wish they would give me another chance."

But it will be Blighty for him. A few months of loitering in flower gardens and parks, or idle sightseeing, insurance or pension, or whatever it is they give such as these, and the priceless consolation of knowing that he did his bit.

Since then I have learned that the complete recovery of the three other men who rode down in our "bus" is assured, although it will probably be months before they get back on the firing line.

One night before this I had ridden with this same driver. The Boches had sent south a Gotha, which dropped a brace of bombs on one of the suburbs of Paris. On such occasions the Red Cross ambulances are placed at the disposal of the military authorities of this city. One of the bombs had struck in a neighborhood where the homes of poor people huddle close together. Naturally, the loss in life had been considerable. There were wounded to be tended, and bodies to be gathered in whole or in part. It was not a pleasant task—this to which the Red Cross had voluntarily set itself. Indeed, it was a gruesome task—pathetic and heartbreaking as the little hand of a child was picked up here, or a little foot there. I would like to forget the picture, and know that you do not care for it. It is these things which are making the Americans fight like madmen when sent against the German assassins.

RUSHED TO THE FRONT.

Again, our soldiers are being rushed to the front. A troop train swings into one of the gares. The men are tired and hungry. Rolling canteens, manned by pretty Red Cross workers, are rushed alongside the train. Ravenously the men reach for the sandwiches and hot coffee as it is passed out. During that ten-minute stop, a thousand soldiers have been refreshed and heartened.

It is a May day at the Gare de l'Est. Unnumbered scores of refugees are being disgorged into the big terminal. Many of the aged are ill, some of the young almost famished. Others have tramped until their shoes are mere leather shreds. They must be clothed and fed. Again, the Red Cross meets the emergency in conjunction with military and civil authorities.

These are merely glimpses of the manifold and varied activities of the American Red Cross in France, to which practically all of you have given freely of your money.

POTENT AUXILIARY.

The Red Cross is no longer a mere bandage-making, brow-soothing organization. It is a very potent and practical auxilliary in the world war with an ever-increasing range of activity. Entering the field here a year ago it now has enrolled in its ranks 3000 workers under direction of Maj. James H. Perkins, Commissioner for Europe.

It assists in caring for the sick and wounded among the soldiers, and helps feed the well. Its canteens and canteenieres are legion. Everything that it has is free to the fighting men. During the first nine months it had served approximately 12,000,000 meals and hot drinks.

But its work does not stop with the army. French civilians are among its beneficaries. They are looking after the health of the people of the slums. They have taken these children and are teaching them gardening in vacant spaces near the old walls of Paris. French soldiers wounded in such a way as to be handicapped are being taught useful vocations. They bear much of the burden of the refugees, which otherwise would be too great for the smaller towns of the south to which they are sent. Many of these must be clothed, and permanent arrangements made to supply them with food. Serving them meals when they first arrive in Paris is only a light part of the task. Provision also is made for French children orphaned by the war.

AMERICAN FRONT IN FRANCE, July 5.—The American army is waging two wars, one on the Germans and the other on the trench louse, more affectionately known as the cootie.

The cootie is a small, meat-eating animal which has attached itself to the American Expeditionary Force. Like the bed bug of our boyhood, he is spirited and has a rollicking disposition; but, while about the same size, he has a bite of larger dimensions, and buries his fangs in the unprotected flanks of armies.

However, when he opens his bill and takes out a mouthful of epidermis the results are not necessarily serious. Only when the wound is scratched by the hands of the victim is trench fever likely to result. The bite of a cootie is followed by an itching sensation, and the soldier's first impulse is to scratch. Tests have proved that the scratch is more serious than the bite, unscratched bites never resulting in sickness. Therefore, the Sammies have taken a vow to scratch only in a safe, sane and conservative manner, if they scratch at all. It is a clear violation of the rules of the order to scratch with both arms free. The ideal system is simply to soothe the bite with the palm of the hand, although to refrain from using the claws requires great will power and high nobility of purpose.

No way has yet been found to keep the cootie from taking up his habitation inside a warrior's coat of mail. The cootie is of an affectionate disposition, and loves warmth and companionship. His idea is to make the human frame his permanent dwelling place. When feeling the need of exercise, he does the high hurdles the length and breadth of the frame, occasionally executing a running broad jump by way of variety. When he does both the high hurdles and the broad jump, he calls it a field day and issues passes to all his friends.

An ordinary cootie is an undoubted source of annoyance, but when you get cooties that are afflicted with little cooties of their own, it is almost unendurable. Cooties that have cooties are never quiet. It makes them feverish.

An anti-cootie crusade is on in full force. At points back of the lines are anti-cootie centers, technically known as delousing stations. The fighting man returning from ten days in the trenches always pauses here to shed his accumulated cooties. Entering the building he disrobes, and his apparel, after being placed in a fish net bag, is shoved through a window into sort of a fumigator. In there are deadly fumes which choke the cooties to death. Then the soldiers line up under shower baths sufficient to ac-

DIES BEFORE REACHING FRONT

Author Spent Year Trying to Enlist, then Misses Point of His Ambition.

The devotion of an entire year in an effort to enter the British army and serve his country, only to die after he had accomplished his ambition, but not on the battlefield, was revealed in the will of Henry Duke Swinsted, filed for probate yesterday.

Swinsted was an English author residing in Los Angeles when war broke out. He offered his services to the Canadian government twice in 1916, without success. Finally in May, 1917, he was permitted to enlist as a private in the Medical Corps. He reached England with his detachment and died on February 14, last, just before receiving orders to embark for France.

His surviving father is beneficiary of the property, according to a copy of the will filed here.

SUNDAY-CLOSING RULING SAVORS OF BLUE LAWS.

Is Los Angeles on the Way Back to Old New England Restrictions?

think of before lunch, and presto! It's law.

Thus came into being the new anti-Sunday ordinance, which was prepared by the committee, introduced at a meeting of the City Council on April 29, last, passed on June 3, and which became a law at midnight last Tuesday, and whirls into action and would have become enforceable this very Sunday morning, but for the temporary restraining order.

Mayor Woodman declined to sign or veto the measure, and it became law automatically after ten days by his failure to return it to the Council with his approval or veto.

THE PENALTY.

If the policeman on your beat says you are violating the new law, and brings you into court, and the court find you g-u-i-l-t-y, here is what the law says will be done with you:

Section 4. Any violation of this ordinance shall constitute a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00,) or imprisonment in the City Jail of Los Angeles for a period not to exceed six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Councilman Ralph Criswell of the committee which framed the new law, said in its defense:

"The law was necessary because there is a growing class in the community which is keeping their stores open all the time and gradually increasing their stocks to include everything under the sun. Take, for example, the Japanese fruit stores. They are putting in groceries. They have been open all day and night on Sundays, and have been gradually making grocery as well as fruit stores out of their places. This is un-American. We must put a stop to it. Americans take reasonable times for storekeeping and for rest and recreation. The new law provides that all necessities and means of recreation may be had on Sunday. It puts an end to merchandise selling."

Under the new law dough may be made in bakeries, necessary government work, such as shipbuilding may be carried on, livery stables, garages, making and selling of newspapers, work on farms and orchards, may go on. Places where food to eat and drink are sold and recreation in the form of moving pictures, theaters, merry-go-rounds, etc., is given, will be permitted to continue.

Any article about the law would not be complete unless it told the real ancestry of the law, because it shows if this blue-Sunday business is kept up what we are coming to. For it is not such a long step from a shave-less, fruit-less, meat-less Sunday to a laugh-less, joy-less, kiss-less Sunday, such as the old Puritan boys and girls had back in Connecticut and Massachusetts in the glum year of 1643. That's where the Los Angeles law of 1918 had it's real start. There was some inclination to even laugh out loud on Sundays in those days, so in the Laws and Orders of the Connecticut Colony of 1647 appears the following:

"It was propounded to the court to consider whether it were not meet to make a law for restraining of persons from their actual employments upon any part of the Sabbath, and the rather because some have of late taken too much liberty that way and have been called to answer for it."

The court did "therefore order that whoso shall break the Sabbath by doing any of their ordinary outward occasions, from sunset to sunset, whether on the land or on the water, acts of mercy and necessity being excepted, he shall be counted an offender."

The New Haven courts judges in wig and gown started right out to enforce it and stop this skylarking on Sundays of folks who did engage in most unseemly laughter.

Records of the courts of those days show there followed much fining of young men for "swearing rashly" on the Sabbath, the fine being 10 shillings per swear. The colonists were probably swearing at the new anti-Sunday laws and doubtless paid the fines willingly as being worth the money.

Just as in the new law here in Los Angeles there were some exceptions to the Sunday stillness. For example, "Robert Bassett was permitted to beat both the first and second drums for church and beat them distinctly," so that persons far removed would know that church was about to begin.

William Peat, however, got into trouble "for stealing watermelons from Mr. Hookes's lot" and it being Sunday, he, Peat, was put in the stocks. And the records show that there was much fining for infractions, so many, in fact, that in 1656 an additional act was passed making it a crime to "kindle a fire in the woods, or the orchards, grounds or barns." The New Haven fire department being not permitted to work on Sundays, it will be seen how necessary it was that there should be no fires.

One historian says that Connecticut passed an act during this "Blue Law" orgy providing that "No woman shall kiss her child on the Sabbath." Trumbull and other historians claim that this is an exaggeration, but certain it is that Massachusetts did have such a law and other blue laws.

The colonial idea of a red-hot, exciting, interesting Sunday was for by Cotton Mather, Jonathan Edeveryone to stay indoors with the blinds drawn and listen attentively while a member of the family read several hundred pages of sermons wards and other best sellers of that time and after which every one turned in at 8 p.m., after a perfect day.

See what we are coming to?

Next October.

GOVERNMENT HAS BIG PART IN LIBERTY FAIR.

Federal Exhibit will Show Latest Ways to Raise and Save Foods.

FOOD and the best methods of preparing and conserving it and the latest in farm tractors and agricultural implements are to be among the features of the exhibits at the California Liberty Fair at Exposition Park, from October 12 to 26. The farmer who has only a small plot of ground and the man who owns a vast acreage will each be given an opportunity to learn what the United States government has done and is doing to make the food supply of this country a much simpler problem.

Word has been received from Washington regarding the display of foodstuffs to be sent from the national capital. The directors of the fair here are in close touch with the Federal authorities, and two great buildings have been set aside for the food and farm products exhibits. As a result, this part of the fair will be one of the most extensive ever provided for an exposition.

The State Exposition Building, the handsome brick structure with 10,000 square feet of floor space, has been given over entirely to the food products display. Every exhibit will have an excellent frontage, as wide aisles have been provided. The entry blanks are ready, and Charles L. Wilson, superintendent of exhibits, will be on hand every day this week at the temporary headquarters in Central Park, to seal the signed entry blanks and make certain that the correct space is allotted to each exhibitor.

NO SPECIAL FAVORS.

Directors of the fair are anxious that the general public have a correct idea regarding these exhibits. Nobody is to be given special favors. Keen business competition naturally will exist, but no favorites are to be played, and as proof of this the first who comes tomorrow morning will have first choice and will not be required to pay any additional sum for any preferred space.

"This is not to be a money-making fair," said R. W. Pridham, president of the board of directors, yesterday. "This is to be an educational exhibit, in which the public is to be taken into the confidence of the directors, and the management proposes to work together to make a fair that will show to the world the part California is taking in helping to feed the Allies who are pressing the Hun back into his own territory."

There will be many surprises at this fair, declared President Pridham. He expects that every foot of space will be taken. He says the demand for space is such that many have been only waiting for the announcement that the entry blanks are out to avail themselves of the opportunity to sign up for space.

SIMPLICITY TO RULE.

Simplicity is to mark the display of foods. There will be nothing elaborate. Not a dollar is to be wasted in the showing of the goods. However, the displays will be such as to need no special decorations. The fact that California has something to show will be brought out distinctly, and the finest of the products from field and farm are to be given ample space where the housewives will have a chance to study and learn the methods that have been used to produce the goods.

The national, State and civic organizations having to do with the matter of food production, control, preservation and utilization of food products will co-operate with the fair management to the fullest extent. Demonstrations and lectures are to be given by government experts and there will be nothing noisy or tiresome.

The professional pride of the housewife is to be appealed to from a Federal viewpoint. Every woman is to be shown how to conserve by the right methods, and once having been shown she will be asked to carry out the plans which have been demonstrated.

ELECTRICITY AND GAS.

Electricity and gas for power, cooking and heating have been provided for by the fair. Water supply and the drainage is of the best. The expense of installation is to be small and water will be plentiful and absolutely free. This portion of the exhibit is to be given the needed attention, as here the public is to learn what the government desires to teach.

The intensive and constructive use of the proper farm implements for the preparation and cultivation of the soil to produce foods will be one of the vital features of the coming fair. Here again the government will take a hand. The building set aside for this exhibit is to be known as the "Agricultural Implement and Farm Tractor Pavilion." In this structure will be grouped the latest inventions and the best possible machinery known to the Agricultural Department at Washington for tilling large and small farms.

This building is to be devoted entirely to machinery purposes, but it will not be complex. The "wayfaring man," even though he be not skilled, will be able to study the latest tractor and the most complicated farm machinery, because such tractor or farm implement will be shown in a "knocked down" form, whereby each visitor can see the machinery to the best possible advantage.

JEWISH WELFARE BOARD ISSUES CALL.

VOLUNTEERS SOUGHT TO WORK IN ARMY CAMPS DURING THE SUMMER.

Col. Harry Cutler, national chairman of the Jewish Welfare Board, has issued a call for volunteers to give at least six weeks of their summer vacations to the work of the board in the camps and cantonments. This appeal is directed particularly to school teachers and others who are unemployed during the summer.

The Welfare Board announced recently that it will send 100 men to France to work among the Jewish soldiers there. Since the first quota of these men will be recruited from the workers who are now engaged in camps and naval training stations in this country, men will be needed in short order to fill the vacancies, temporarily, at any rate. Men of good education and broad sympathies can be used advantageously for the varied work of the board among the camps.

The Jewish Welfare Board, which has over 150 workers in camps throughout the country, has been officially recognized on the same basis as the Y.M.C.A. and K. of C. Its national headquarters are at No. 149 Fifth avenue, New York.

Makes "Comfies."

ENGLISH NURSE, HERE, KNITS FOR SOLDIERS.

AS PART of her contribution to to the war, for the fighters of which she has knit over a half 100 pairs of sox in addition to three sweaters and twelve pairs of wristlets, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Long, a former hospital nurse of London, at present of No. 1518 West Twelfth street, this city, yesterday presented to Sergt. B. R. Pitzer of Mather Field, Sacramento, a visitor in Los Angeles, a pair of hand-made dark blue woolen soxs, girdling the top of which is an American flag wrought into the pattern. The "comfies," which are similar in design to a pair that Mrs. Long knit for Admiral Beatty, will be worn by the soldier in France in the near future, he stated, as plans are already under way for his transfer overseas.

Sergt. Pitzer is enlisted in the Aviation Corps of the United States Army, having been in service for nearly a year. He has been in training at various points in the country, and is the possessor of honor chevrons. Mrs. Long, on the other hand, has lost fourteen cousins and nephews in the war. A native of England, she has seen active service as a war nurse, and has experienced two London air raids.

"That thunder storm we had a few nights ago was not a marker in noise to an air raid," she declared yesterday. "When the Zeppelins commence to drop bombs, one cannot hear oneself think."

In addition to her hospital work, Mrs. Long declared that she took up knitting as a "sideline." Returning to this country she stopped three months at the Allies Bazaar in Chicago, where she made a record for knitting. Before leaving England, however, she presented to Admiral Beatty a pair of soxs similar to those which she has just completed for Sergt. Pitzer, but which bore the Union Jack in the upper part.

The Admiral, she says, is the English hero, and everywhere throughout London are placards bearing his proclamation that prayer will bring an Allied victory.

What's In a Name?

Is "Mormonism" Misunderstood Because of Its Unpopular Title?

By DR. JAMES E. TALMAGE,
Of the Council of the Twelve, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; Salt Lake City, Utah.

WHAT'S in a name? So asked one who has been called the chief of English bards; and hosts of thoughtful minds have been conscious of the same insistent query springing up as a conception original to each. Who but the superficial will venture to deny the influence of names? We are all subject to the witchery of bias and of prejudices for or against; and the odium or the good repute of a name ofttimes determines our provisional acceptance or rejection of that for which it stands.

Most of us are in the habit of putting up our knowledge in little packages, each labeled with a name. These we stow away in more or less orderly fashion, and though we glance frequently at the label we are apt to forget what any one of the packets really contains.

"Mormonism" is an unpopular name; the truths for which it stands, the principles which it embodies are more readily believed in if left unlabeled.

It should be remembered that the term "Mormon," with its several variants, was first applied by way of nickname to the people now so designated. But nicknames may be so sanctified by effort and achievement that they become titles of respect and profound significance. To this fact history lends definite and abundant testimony.

It may be remembered that the term "Christian" was first applied as an epithet of contempt. You know how it was hurled in hatred and disdain at the disciples in Antioch. (See Acts 11:26.) Yet the followers of Christ accepted the name and hallowed it by sacrifice and righteous deeds; and today the world counts but one distinction greater than being called a Christian, and that is to be a Christian in fact.

The early application of the term "Mormon" to the people of the church so called had reference to the Book of Mormon, which was first published in the year 1830. This work is known today, by name at least, among reading and thinking people generally. As set forth upon the title page of this much discussed work, the book purports to be a translation of certain ancient records giving an account of the aboriginal peoples of the Western Continent.

The "Mormon" people do not resent the misnomer by which they are commonly known, and which has been fastened upon them by popular usage. They deplore, however, the possible misunderstanding that the church to which they belong professes to be the church of Mormon. It should be understood that Mormon was a man, a very distinguished and a very able man, it is true, an eminent prophet and historian, according to the record bearing his name, but a man nevertheless. The "Mormon" Church affirms itself to be in no sense the church of Mormon, nor the church of Joseph Smith, nor of Bringham Young, nor of any man other than the Savior and Redeemer of the race. The true name of this Church, the designation by which it is officially known as an organization among men, is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The people claim that this distinguishing title was given through Divine revelation, and they cite as evidence of propriety and consistency attaching to its bestowal the words of the Resurrected Christ to the disciples of the ancient Church in the West. To the supplication: "Lord, we will that Thou wouldst tell us the name whereby we shall call this Church; for there are disputations among the people concerning this matter," the Lord Jesus Christ, there present in Person, replied:

"Verily, verily I say unto you, why is it that the people should murmur and dispute because of this thing? Have they not read the Scriptures, which say ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name? For by this name shall ye be called at the last day; and whoso taketh upon him my name, and endureth to the end, the same shall be saved at the last day; therefore whatsoever ye shall do, ye shall do it in my name. Therefore ye shall call the Church in my name; and ye shall call upon the Father in my name, that He will bless the Church for my sake. And how be it my Church, save it be called in my name? For if a church be called in Moses's name, then it be Moses's church; or if it be called in the name of a man, then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name, then it is my Church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel." (See Book of Mormon, 3 Nephi 27:4-8.)

The members of the Church aver that the distinguishing features of their religious system, in short, the essentials of the philosophy of "Mormonism," are epitomized in the name of their organization—The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

If the name be used without divine warrant, its assumption cannot fail to be regarded as a sacrilege; if it has been authoritatively bestowed one need look no further for explanation of the vitality exhibited by the Church in so impressive a degree from the day of its organization to the present.

KEARNY MEN CHAFE TO HIT FOE EITHER IN RUSSIA OR FRANCE.

Possibilities of American Intervention in Siberia is the Main Topic of Conversation—Soldiers are Eager for Action Somewhere.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP KEARNY, July 20.—When a man has something, or is at one place, he wants to be somewhere else or have something more. There is an old saying in the army that if a soldier hasn't anything to kick about he is not a fit subject for the army. In a different sense this is always true, even now, but probably less so than at any other time in the history of the army. From time immemorial the feeling that present possessions are not enough has been the starting of wars. It is just as true now. In fact, the desire for domain caused the Kaiser and his lust-mad war lords to try to encompass the world, and now the world is about to envelope them and crush them. From all parts of the world individuals feel it their duty to put their weight with the cause of those fighting the Germans.

In Camp Kearny are all manner of men, gathered from the four quarters of the globe, and about every one of them is burning with a desire to see the Huns forever defeated. If a man is in the trenches, he hopes for a trip to Blighty, just to get a rest. But as soon as he is well he wants to get back into the fray.

FRANCE IS MAGNET.

France has been the magnet for the Sammies' hopes for some time. In this camp alone there are more than 27,000 men, all anxious to fight the Kaiser, but they do not care, for the most part, whether they do it in Russia or in France. Many of them, in spite of the hardships, would like to take the advice of Horace Greeley and go east by going west. In spite of the desire that has arisen here for a trip to Russia, by way of Siberia, there is one man who would go right to France. He has a score to settle. He, of course, is but one of many who feel the same way. His score is directly and personally with the Germans and he holds no mistaken ideas about their fairness. To him they are beasts. This man is Private Michel Keustermans of Battery A, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery. Keustermans is a Belgian and was in the Fort of Cognilee at Namur as an artilleryman. He saw 75 per cent. of his garrison killed. He was captured and escaped from the Germans. He made his way to near Louvain and saw that city in flames. Then he reached his home town. His sisters, cousins and most of his family were killed.

SEEKS TO RETURN.

At one time the Belgian hid in a haystack. German soldiers came and jabbed into the stack with long lances. He was cut up, but escaped. He speaks five languages and was at home in that country. Making his way to Antwerp, he rejoined his battery, only to be again captured. It was then that he witnessed unspeakable atrocities on the part of the Germans. He was forced to labor as striker for a blacksmith. One day he threw away his Belgian uniform and put on the blacksmith's clothes. He made his way to a bake shop, where the change was made. By the time the soldiers arrived he had bread making and this gave him a chance to escape later to a point near Holland and over that border.

Keustermans reached America, having been wounded. As soon as he arrived here he applied for citizenship, thus leaving the way open for him to be drafted. His tales of suffering in Germany and of the brave fight of the Belgians have awakened the slumbering spirit of many of the conscientious objectors who came here in the California draft, as he was one of them. When he got through several of the objectors were even cheering. Keustermans wants to settle his score, but there are many here who believe this can be done just as well and as effectively by reaching the back door of Austria and Germany.

About nine years ago Baron von Guttmann visited Seattle. The baron had just returned from an extended trip along the coast of Siberia. Von Guttmann was then to Austria what the Krupps are to Germany. He spent several hundred thousand dollars on the Siberian trip, chartering a ship at Seattle. He returned with a large fund of information, and freely talked about such innocent things as fisheries, hunting and gold on the Siberian coast, but he said that he could not disclose the bulk of his information, nor why he had compiled it, except that he must make a report to certain persons in Austria and that he intended to write a book about his hunting trips. Now the possible purport of this famous "hunting" trip comes back with Von Guttmann's close association with the Krupps as foundation for the intimation that the steel magnate might have been gathering information as well about Siberia's strategical coast positions, as well as the military advantages in ores. Now the apparent desire of the Germans is to keep the Russians busy fighting among themselves until the Huns get control of important factors of the government.

TALK OF SIBERIA.

Military men, here, unofficially, have discussed the possibilities of turning the tide of the war by sending an army into Russia by way of Siberia. Many say that such an army would have to winter in Siberia, but certain factors could unite to make this not entirely necessary. In these days of warfare, the magnitude of a job does not daunt a government. For instance, if necessary the whole Ford plant could be transferred to Vladivostok, cheap coolie labor could be put in the mines of the surrounding country, skilled labor be sent from America and steel rails could be turned out sufficient to double-track the Siberian railroad at the rate of twenty miles a day. Rails can be laid any time in the year. The engineers of the Copper River Railroad laid rails on glacial ice, filling in ballast later.

An army going across Siberia would be like a huge magnet. With enough Americans to leaven the body, to give Russians a feeling that the army was coming as aid and not bent on invasion, such an army would gather strength as it neared the back door of Austria. The railroad could be completed by spring, with a steel rolling mill working double shift at Vladivostok. There would be little serious danger of attack along the line of communication, except for the German prisoners and this would largely be a job for the military police. Once in Russia more than a million Russians would join the army and the Germans would find themselves facing the most serious crisis of the war.

WOULD ALTER WAR.

The arrival of such an army in Russia would change the methods of warfare, cause many divisions to leave the western front and throw the fear of right and justice into the so-called heart of the Kaiser. Fighting would be in the open, and that is what the men in Camp Kearny most desire, to start a real drive towards Berlin. The Russian situation interests them to such an extent that Siberia is the principal topic at mess tables.

The possibilities of establishing a steel rolling mill at Vladivostok has many points of vantage in placing a huge rear guard army in Russia by spring. Contrary to general opinion, Vladivostok is not a closed harbor in winter. About six weeks out of the year ice impedes traffic, but this can be overcome. A former sea captain, who has roamed all the seas and got his education in navigation at Annapolis, now in San Diego, tells of seeing huge ice-cutting ships opening the harbor in short time. He has been there three times.

MANY HARDSHIPS.

Going with an army into Siberia and Russia opens possibilities that men going to France do not even dream of, though the traveling would mean hardships and lots of constructive work.

To the Sammies here it makes little difference where they go, so long as they get a whack at some squareheads. But they want to go somewhere else besides here, to throw in their bit of hard work to show what the Americans can do by way of real fighting. Though the 15,000 men who recently joined the division have been here, but a short time, they already have shown a desire to fight. This is shown by the anxiety to learn as rapidly as possible the modern ways of warfare. One has but to talk to these men to learn what they want; what they want is to fight squareheads.

LOOKING ON AT CAMP KEARNY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP KEARNY, July 20.—G. G. Freese, a San Diego policeman, is hopping mad. He has tried to join every branch of the service and has been turned down because he had too many mishaps, all of which mean broken bones. Freese was the man who rescued eight from drowning at Ocean Beach when a tide rip caused the death of thirteen men. He kept working until he had to be rescued himself. Of course, he has done his bit before. He carries service badges for the Nicaragua affair, for the Philippine insurrection, for good conduct in the navy and for service with the bluejackets who landed at Vera Cruz. But too many bones in his body have been broken. Just the same he has the spirit, even if he could not stand the trench warfare, which he personnally says he can.

Helps Others.

W. A. Stoner, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stoner of Sawtelle, was a member of one of the training cadres at the recruit receiving camp. He is in the One Hundred and Fifteenth Sanitary Train and has been here nine months.

Sell Tin Cans.

If you are a visitor at camp and happen to see a soldier attached to the kitchen on "K. P." cutting and pounding a tin can, don't get the idea that he is doing it for exercise. The government has required that tin cans be flattened out so that they can be easily baled by the conservation and reclamation department. The bales are sold.

Mullally Honored.

Col. Thornwell Mullally, commander of the Grizzlies, was taken by surprise the other day when his band marched up and started to play in front of his tent. The colonel was plainly astounded. He said: "What's the big idea?" or words to that effect. But two men stepped forth and presented him with a large silver loving cup, almost large enough to take a bath in. He had to have explanations and found that J. R. Fithian and Maj. E. C. Durfee, who helped organize Maj. Stewart Edward White's former battery, which came from Santa Barbara, sent the cup to him. The band made a whirlwind drive at Santa Barbara and the cup was sent in appreciation.

From Sea to Air.

Norman Ross of Los Angeles, famous swimmer and holder of American water records, will soon graduate at the North Island aviation school. He has but one cross country flight to make to get his reserve military aviator certificate.

Paints Artillery.

Harry F. Heine, formerly of the Grizzlies, Battery B, now in France, left a lasting mark of his art here. He is a painter. While here he started to paint horses, men and field guns going into action. The painting, which was unfinished, has all the verve of the artillery. It is now mounted and hung in Knights of Columbus Building, No. 1.

Works in Office.

Corp. Fred Frank, formerly prominent in Los Angeles political circles, is temporarily working at headquarters of the One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery, helping to get the service records of the new recruits in shape.

Back from East.

Maj. John R. Charlesworth of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry has returned from special duty in the East. While there he saw his son, Byron E., who was in charge of a gun crew of the steamer Tyler, sunk off the coast of Spain by a U-boat. The young man has been made a chief petty officer and has received a letter of commendation for standing by the guns while the Tyler was sinking, though water covered their feet. Five of the crew were lost and the others have been given special mention for bravery. The five have also been honored.

Special Training.

Maj. H. H. Brown of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Infantry has returned from the small arms school at Camp Perry. He has taken command of the Second Battalion again.

FILM PRODUCERS TO HELP WAR EXHIBIT.

HUGE PAGEANT WILL BE THEIR PART IN GIGANTIC EXPOSITION.

Leading motion-picture directors and producers have enlisted in boosting the Allied war exposition, which will be staged in Exposition Park August 1 to 11. While plans have not been entirely perfected yet, it is believed that under the supervision of the Motion Picture War Service Committee the largest pageant ever staged in Los Angeles will be given the evening of the opening day. This pageant will consist of electric floats equaled only by the Mardi Gras festival of New Orleans.

This gigantic war spectacle is being given under the auspices of the United States government, and includes sixteen freight cars of war trophies of every description captured by the Allies on the different battle fronts. Details of soldiers from the cantonments and forts in Southern California will be on hand, and the most realistic war maneuvers will be staged. One of the principal features will be an airplane attack on Exposition Park, with a defense by anti-aircraft guns.

The motion-picture directors who pledged their services last night include: D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennet, S. E. V. Taylor, Thomas H. Ince, Cecil B. de Mille, Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, W. S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, J. Gordon Edwards, William Sistron, Robert Brunton and others.

LOCAL MAN AT AD CONVENTION.

Among the delegates from the Los Angeles Ad Club to the convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, was L. R. Uhlenhart, branch advertising manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company of Los Angeles.

While in San Francisco, Mr. Uhlenhart attended a banquet at the Palace Hotel given by the Goodrich organization under Mr. F. R. Carroll, formerly branch manager in Los Angeles, to H. O. Alexander, sales manager, who is leaving the Coast for an important assignment in the big Goodrich factories in Akron.

Military Agreement.

BRITISH SUBJECTS TOLD OF WAR STATUS HE

Convention with this Country Give[illegible] portunity to Volunteer.

STRINGENT regulations applying to British male subjects of military age at present in the United States were adopted at the recent military service convention between this country and Great Britain. All British subjects between the ages of 20 and 44 years, inclusive, residents of the United States, and all persons who were not born nor naturalized in Canada but who were residents of that country before proceeding to the United States, are hereafter to be classed as Canadian, it was announced.

C. White Mortimer, the local British Consul, has been notified of the action taken, and has been supplied with a number of pamphlets in which are set forth the provisos. These are being distributed free of charge to Britishers at their consulate in the International Bank Building.

As yet the date of exchange of ratification of the convention has not been determined, although it has been stated that Canadians of present United States draft age may enlist voluntarily in the Canadian Expeditionary Force within sixty days of the date of exchange. Should they fail to enroll themselves for service, they are liable to draft by this country. The same provision has been made for Canadians outside draft age, it is stated in the circular, except that the period for voluntary enlistment will be thirty days, which may be fixed for their registration under the laws of this country.

POWER OF EXEMPTION.

The power to grant exemption to Canadians has been vested with the British Ambassador at Washington. As the Senate has approved the convention, Canadians may now make application for such, it is stated.

In filing a claim for exemption, Canadians will be required to submit a petition in writing to the military branch of the Department of Justice at Ottawa, Can. Each application must state the full name, birthplace, address, age, occupation, position as to wife and family of the applicant, in addition to whether or not he has taken out his first papers, or is registered under the selective military service law of this country. He must furthermore give the name and number of his local board, his serial number, order number, classification and the result of his medical examination. The applicant must identify himself either by a full description or by inclosing to the branch two unmounted photographs of himself.

Claims for exemption may only be made upon one or more of the following grounds: Physical unfitness, membership in His Majesty's reserve, or regular forces, in the royal navy or royal marines, or in the Canadian expeditionary force; an honorable discharge from service, membership in the clergy or in any recognized religious order existing in Canada on August 29, 1917, or the need that the applicant be engaged in some work of national Canadian importance, or that he should be trained for any such line of activity.

PROMPTNESS URGED.

Stated in the pamphlet are the following:

"It is essential that there should be embodied in the applicant's affidavit or solemn declaration in support of his claim an engagement to the following effect:

"'I solemnly undertake and engage that if I be found disentitled to exemption I will when required so to do by the director of the military service branch of the Department of Justice at Ottawa, or other competent Canadian authority, enlist in the Canadian expeditionary force and report for duty at the time and place required, subject to payment of my reasonable traveling expenses for the purpose.'

"It shall, moreover, be a condition of the granting of exemption that the applicant shall promptly answer in writing any questions touching his claim for exemption which may be notified to him by the director, or other competent Canadian authority.

"Certificates of exemption granted under these regulations shall be subject to be reviewed, limited, extended or withdrawn [illegible]

"As the time within [illegible] cations for exemption [illegible] sidered is strictly limited [illegible] who wish to apply under [illegible] lations should realize the [illegible] of submitting their applic[illegible] the earliest possible date."

Any Woman Who Tires Easily, Is Irritable, Nervous and Run-down Should Take Nuxated Iron to Help Increase Her Health, Strength and Vitality.

The Child's Appeal

What is Your Answer?

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women, without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and Medical Author. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the [illegible] go from their [illegible].

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can [illegible]

Most of us have been taught by experience that some of our public servants are inclined to look upon their employers with contempt and indifference instead of using their best efforts to protect our interests. A genuine report on the business methods of some of our local statesmen would make interesting reading for the average taxpayer and no doubt the affairs of the State are on the same basis."

THE TIME IS RIPE.

"The time is now ripe for an organization Statewide and based upon the principles outlined by the Association for Betterment of Public Service," is the opinion of Adolph Ramish, president of a theatrical producing corporation owning a chain of theaters.

W. A. Barker, president of the association, at a meeting yesterday of the Executive Committee of 100 prominent business men who organized the body, outlined the general purpose of this movement as one combining patriotism and loyalty to the American government with methods of efficiency in the conduct of our State and local governments that will result in lowering of the taxes and the saving of millions of dollars to the taxpayers, which will enable them to put greater effort behind their war work.

Mr. Barker stated: "By arousing a greater public interest in the affairs of our State government, our voters will send the best men in the community to our Legislature. The Association for the Betterment of Public Service earnestly seeks to place before the voters the names of men who will honestly and conscientiously work for an economical and efficient administration by the elimination of the unnecessary commissions and the placing of the State government work in the hands of men of ability who will serve the taxpayers in an efficient manner. There is a crying need today for this organization and we urge the citizens and taxpayers of Los Angeles county to back it with every ounce of effort that they can rally to the cause. By doing this, they are helping to organize their State and put it in a position to realize the greatest effort and patriotism in the support of the United States government."

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The resolutions adopted by the Association for Betterment of Public Service are as follows:

First—To arouse universal interest in public affairs.

Second—To secure the election of able, fearless men of high standing to public office.

Third—To secure the strictest economy in State and county government.

Fourth—To abolish all commissions, bureaus and political jobs not absolutely necessary to efficient government, and to combine and coordinate commissions having similar duties.

Fifth — To discourage class instinct, class hatred and class legislation, and to inculcate a spirit of loyalty to the American government.

There are no membership fees or dues and all loyal citizens of Los Angeles county are urged to sign the application for membership and to mail it at once to the address indicated.

NAMES OF OFFICERS.

The officers of the association are: W. A. Barker, president; J. M. Schneider, vice-president; Harold L. Arnold, vice-president; Mrs. O. P. Clark, vice-president; W. A. Faris, vice-president; Mrs. C. F. Gray, vice-president; Harry N. Ticknor, vice-president, Pasadena; L. L. Lostutter, vice-president, Pomona; Mrs. J. B. Stearns, vice-president; Gilbert Wright, vice-president; Frank Roberts, Long Beach, vice-president; Judge W. A. Rennie, Venice, vice-president; A. W. McPherson, Santa Monica, vice-president; Charles H. Toll, Glendale, vice-president; Cass Rees, Whittier, vice-president; Charles Gordon, Glendora, vice-president; H. M. Burgwald, secretary, and E. S. Haskell, treasurer.

All applications for membership should be sent to the secretary's office, 335 Consolidated Realty Building.

It is expected a report of candidates indorsed by the association will be made during the next few days. A secret committee is now selecting the names and going over the qualifications carefully. Only men of the highest ability and character will be indorsed and recommended to the voters.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE EXPOSE OF HEARST.

THE "MONITOR" REPORTS PROGRESS OF MOVEMENT AGAINST HIS PAPERS.

BOSTON, July 20.—The Christian Science Monitor continues its expose of Hearstism and presentation of the anti-Hearst campaign. Under a New York date the Monitor says:

Towns, clubs, churches and private individuals are rapidly enrolling themselves in the campaign against Hearst papers and magazines. It is not an uncommon thing, according to reports, to see commuters gathered at a suburban railroad station awaiting their morning train acquire all the Hearst papers possible and, with the aid of a match or two, convert them into a brisk bonfire. Bronxville, N. Y., was cited as the stage of such an event not long ago. Women as well as men are active in the campaign to bar such reading matter. In Forest Hills they have formed a committee with the avowed intention of fighting any effort to bring these papers back into town, the Forest Hills Taxpayers' Association having passed a resolution requesting the local news dealers to discontinue those papers. This town is said to be the first to avail itself of the agreement of the Long Island News Dealers' Association to refrain from sending them into any town if so requested by its citizens.

The Nyack (N. Y.) Club at a recent meeting voted to bar Hearst papers from the town, not only for the duration of the war but thereafter as well. Nyack guardsmen are planning to rid the whole county of them by requesting the news dealers to discontinue their sales and by appealing to the people not to buy or read them.

The Engineers' Club in New York has barred all papers and magazines published by William Randolph Hearst from its library. Various New Jersey towns — Montclair, Englewood, Sterling, Nutley, South Orange and others—have been the scenes of active campaigns against Hearst papers. In Dumont, N. J., the Women's Council of National Defense, impatient of slowness of action on the part of the men, adopted resolutions denouncing Hearst papers as unpatriotic and pledged themselves "not to subscribe to, buy, read or countenance in any way" any of the publications, not even the Household Magazine, which many of them had formerly taken, arguing that buying even that would be too much like "trading with the enemy."

PASADENA WILL HONOR BELGIUM.

Celebration of Nation's Independence Day to be Held Today.

Pasadena will celebrate the Belgian day of independence today, with exercises in the afternoon and evening. These will be held under the direction of the State Council of Defense and the Pasadena division of the Belgian Relief Commission. The evening exercises will be held at Library Park, and will be participated in by members of the Belgian colony of Los Angeles, headed by Charles Winsel, Belgian Vice-Consul. They will come from Pomona, where exercises in honor of the day will be held in the afternoon.

Among the speakers Sunday evening at Pasadena will be Gov. Stephens and Judge H. M. Wells, a four-minute man, and Vice-Consul Winsel will respond on behalf of Belgium.

MONDAY LAST DAY OF WAR ON USURY.

ALL PETITIONS MUST REACH HEADQUARTERS NOT LATER THAN TOMORROW NOON.

Five thousand signatures to the "Swat-the-Loan-Shark" petitions were received at the offices of the Anti-Usury League, 323 Merchants Trust Building, up to closing time yesterday, making 85,000 signatures on hand, leaving 5000 yet to be received at the offices of the league by 4 p.m. Monday. At that hour J. P. Steele, managing director of the league, will take the great stack of petitions in an automobile and file them with Registrar of Voters D. B. Lyons.

Mr. Steele is confident that by hard efforts on the part of the workers the desired 90,000, and perhaps more names, will be secured to file. This will insure more than the required 74,320 names, after Registrar Lyons's force has gone over the petitions and thrown out those with incorrect addresses, mistakes in spelling, etc.

The league is anxious that every possible signature be secured Monday morning, and asks that all friends who are gathering signatures bring their petitions with signatures to the headquarters, not later than tomorrow noon.

IN CUSTODY.

Guadalupe Garcia, claimed by the government to be a member of the Magon-Librado crowd of "Reds," and all-round anarchists, was taken into custody yesterday by the police war squad, charged with violation of the Espionage Act. It is alleged that he circulated some of the pro-German literature prepared by Magon and Librado, of which the "Manifesto," published in Regeneracione, on May 16, 1918, is a type.

Garcia is 33 years of age. He will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Long, tomorrow morning, and the government will ask that a heavy bond be exacted.

The Perfect Baby Of The Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence upon The Future Infant.

Before the arrival of baby knowing women for over half a century have used with regularity the time-honored preparation, Mother's Friend.

Here is a most wonderful application for the abdomen and breasts. It penetrates the muscles, ligaments and tissues, rendering them pliant to readily yield to nature's demand for expansion.

By its use the anxious weeks of pregnancy are made comfortable. The usual wrenching strain, bearing-down and stretching pains are counteracted. The system is prepared for the coming event, and its use brings rest, repose and happy anticipation.

By the regular use of Mother's Friend during the period the muscles expand easier when baby arrives, and naturally the pain and danger at the crisis is less.

Mother's Friend is prepared after the formula of a noted family doctor by the Bradfield Regulator Co., A-32 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is for external use only; is absolutely and entirely safe and wonderfully effective. Write them for their instructive and interesting "Motherhood Book." There is a wealth of instruction and comfort to be derived in reading this little book. It is plainly written just what every woman wants to know and will be a splendid little text-book of guidance, not only for yourself, but will make you helpful to others, and in the meantime obtain a bottle of Mother's Friend from the druggist, and thus fortify yourself against pain and discomfort.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

HAWAII ACTS TO OUST HEARST FROM ISLANDS.

Vigilance Corps of American Defense Society Adopts Resolution Against Pro-German Publications.

COPIES of the issue of July 3 of the Pacific Commercial Advertiser of Honolulu, the principal daily of the Territory of Hawaii, which have been received here, report the adoption on July 2 by the Hawaiian Vigilance Corps of the American Defense Society of a resolution pledging the members to keep "out of the Territory of Hawaii, as far as lies in our power, all newspapers and magazines controlled or published by William Randolph Hearst."

The resolution, which was adopted unanimously, recommended that all news dealers doing business in Hawaii be requested voluntarily to give up the sale of all Hearst publications, whether of newspapers or magazines, during the progress of the war.

The resolution was as follows:

"It is eminently fitting at this time that the Executive Committee of the American Defense Society should take up, for decisive action, the question of keeping out of the Territory of Hawaii, as far as lies in our power, all newspapers and magazines controlled or published by William Randolph Hearst. The un-American and pro-German sentiments of these publications are very well known, and recently Hearst has been carrying on an anti-Japanese campaign that carries a distinct menace to the welfare and safety of the Territory of Hawaii.

"It is, therefore,

"Resolved, that the vigilance corps recommend that all news dealers doing business in the Territory of Hawaii be requested voluntarily to give up the sale of all Hearst publications, whether of newspapers or magazines, during the progress of the war. It is understood that all unfilled, bona fide subscriptions shall be honored to their completion, but that no new subscriptions shall be taken during the progress of the war. Further, that it shall be suggested to all news dealers in the Territory of Hawaii that, as far as possible, they shall offer to their patrons to exchange any Hearst publication for some other publication whose American sentiments and loyalty are beyond any question of doubt."

In its account of the meeting at which the resolution was adopted, the Pacific Commercial Advertiser says, under the heading "Hearst's Papers Blacklisted by Vigilance Corps," that the meeting was held at the Young Hotel. It proceeds:

ADOPTION UNANIMOUS.

"The resolution was offered by C. G. Bockus of the Executive Committee. After its approval, Mr. Bockus, John L. Fleming and F. L. Waldron were appointed a committee to interview the news dealers on the subject and to report results at the next meeting. It was also decided to memorialize the President to take such steps as would result in the discontinuance of all German papers for the period of the war.

"Norman Watkins officiated as chairman of the meeting. He first read a letter from Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, who has charge of a movement which has as its purpose a pledge not to buy German goods.

"The resolution in regard to the Hearst publications then came up and passed, with little discussion, by unanimous vote.

"With the exception of Thomas E. Wall, president of Wall, Nichols & Co., which firm is agent here for the Hearst publications and supplies other news dealers throughout the Islands, all the news dealers in Honolulu said yesterday that they would cheerfully comply with the request of the Vigilance Corps to kick Hearst's publications out. . . .

"The action taken yesterday by the Vigilance Corps is in line with action taken all over the United States. . . . Scores of other communities have concluded that they have had enough of William Bolo Hearst and his harmful publications and have kicked them out or are preparing to do so. Canada has long barred the Hearst papers, while the International News Service, which belongs to Hearst and supplies him with his fake news, was thrown out of England two years ago for deliberate faking of war news.

"Hearst and his papers are being denounced all over the United States as inimical to the welfare of the nation, if not actually pro-German, and there is arising a loud demand that Hearst himself be punished as was a much lesser culprit, Rose Pastor Stokes, who was sentenced recently to ten years in the penitentiary for saying things about the war and the administration that were enthusiastic praise in comparison with the things that appear almost daily in the emissions of the Hearst presses.

COMMENT OF DEALERS.

"Comment on the action yesterday of the Hawaiian Vigilance Corps by newsdealers of Honolulu follows:

"Thomas L. Wall—'As I now see it I am inclined to think that they are carrying this thing too far. We represent the Examiner of San Francisco and Los Angeles, and the Hearst magazines, here and at Hilo, supplying other dealers and subscribers. . . . Demonstrating where I, personally, and Wall, Nichols Co., stand on this general question, however, I would say that when I returned from the East, I found that the publication "Bull" was being sold from our counters. I immediately stopped the sale; and if I find anything in the Examiner that indicates that it is pro-German, I will take it out and burn it in the street.'

"D. F. Thrum, treasurer and manager of Thrum's, Ltd.—'This agitation is the result of the policy of Mr. Hearst, which for many years has been to criticise and nag at the administration. He has done that with all administrations, Republican or Democratic. Along about January he began criticising the President's war policy, and the present agitation comes directly from that. In February one of the Hearst magazines came out with an article which was so positively pro-German that it was suppressed on the mainland, although copies of it had already slipped through to Hawaii. Something bigger, more substantial and more sweeping than a mere understanding between dealers is called for.'

WILL CUT THEM OUT.

"William N. Patten, president of Patten Company, Ltd., said: 'I do not read either the papers or magazines published by Mr. Hearst and am not clear as to the merits of the objections which have been raised. However, our position is just this: We are Americans in here, and are behind the President in the war. If the American Defense Society objects to one or all of the Hearst publications, we will join with other dealers in cutting them out.'

"Gen. John H. Soper, president of the Hawaiian News Company—'I think the Hearst papers have done a very great deal of harm (probably the most harm of all,) in trying to stir up trouble between the United States and Japan. That Hearst policy was criminal, to say the least. There never has been the slightest cause for any feeling, other than friendship, between the United States and Japan, except that cooked up by this man Hearst and his newspapers.'"

"Kultur!"

"DESTROY, BURN, KILL!" IS ORDER TO GERMANS.

Devastation is Way to Glory, Says Paper Taken from Prisoner.

ON ONE of the battlefields of Europe a paper was taken from a German prisoner by Lieut. J. L. Carter of the Canadian Pioneers. So terrible were the words on it that a translation of the paper is being used by Lieut. Carter in the speeches he is making with the view of opening the eyes of the American people to the awfulness of German kultur.

It is evident that German soldiers are being supplied with this and similar documents as a dispensation for the atrocities the reports of which have shocked the civilized world.

Lieut. Carter was the speaker at the recent luncheon at the Union League Club of the War Savings speakers' organization of which H. N. Wells is chairman. He told his experiences on the battlefield and read this translation:

"Sons of warring Germany, forward! This is the hour of glory. The cannon, your invulnerable brother, calls you. Was it not built to reform the universe?

"Cavalrymen — attack, oppose, charge! The mass of victims await you, and unchecked your horse has a winnowed course. Flesh of these imbeciles is fit for manure to fertilize the field—the fields that will be ours and our sons'.

"The life of the conquered is absorbed by the conqueror. It goes to the murderer—the life of the murdered.

"The life of the whole world is resting on the breast of your fatherland. Do not weaken with feminine pity toward women and children. The son of the conquered may become tomorrow's conqueror.

"What is the use of victory if tomorrow we may expect retaliation?

"What sort of a father would you be if you but killed the enemy and let his son live?

"Sons of Germany,—destroy break, assault, devastate, burn, and kill, kill, kill!

"The way to glory."

WANT TANK RECRUITS.

Young Men of Powerful Stamina Sought for Spectacular Service in Army.

The University of California military bureau having placed a number of tank corps men for service in the National Army, Lieut. G. G. Garland will arrive in Los Angeles on July 20 to co-operate with the university in recruiting other units for this branch of the service. A telegram from Lieut. Garland states that only men of the highest mental alertness and of powerful stamina will be accepted for the Tank Corps. High school graduates, between 18 and 40, of strong physique, and not draft registrants of Class 1A, are eligible.

Men with mechanical ability can win rapid promotion. Machine-gun mechanics, lathe hands, bench machinists, machine designers, oxy-acetylene welders, auto mechanics, blacksmiths, tractor drivers, motorcyclists, topographers and wireless buzzer operators can make practical use of their knowledge in the Tank Corps.

Commissioned officers are selected only from the ranks, and the entire personnel is composed purely of volunteers. Besides high school and college graduates, there are a number of openings for professional and business men who can pass the physical test. Applicants for the Tank Corps should communicate immediately with room No. 410, I. W. Hellman Building.

LAUREL CANYON STAGE LINE.

Louis Laine has filed with the Railroad Commission an application for authority to operate an automobile passenger stage service between Laurel Canyon points, Gardner Junction and Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles county. Laine is taking over an old stage line in connection with the Bungalow Inn, located in Laurel Canyon, and it is the only means of transportation in that territory. According to his application, he will use two five-passenger machines, make several trips throughout the day and a fifteen-minute service on Sundays and holidays.

REBUKES THE "EXAMINER."

Santa Monica Vigilance Man's Wife Indignant.

Paper had Asked Picture of Son with Colors.

After Attempting to "Get Something" on Him.

The Times is in receipt of the following copy of a letter to the Examiner from Mrs. James Westervelt:

"No. 1148 Sixth street,
"Santa Monica.

"Editor Los Angeles Examiner:

"Your letter asking me to send you, for 'early publication,' a picture of my son, who is with the colors, has been received. My indignation at your impudence is boundless, though such impudence can hardly be surprising in any employee of William Randolph Hearst.

"It is bad enough that you assume—for your letter was evidently a circular one—that patriotic American mothers will be so eager for a little cheap publicity that they would disgrace themselves by granting your request. But when I recollect how you hired what were apologies for 'men' to try to induce my husband to rescind what he had said about your employers — which meant he was to lie, for what he said was the truth—and on his refusing was threatened with having his character blackened through the publicity of the same newspaper that now writes to request my son's photograph—as I remember this, then indeed the impertinence of your request becomes colossal. No, not now or ever will I allow anything of mine to be published in your Pharisaical columns except this final expression of my opinion.

"MARY CLARKE WESTERVELT."

Mrs. Westervelt is the wife of Attorney James Westervelt and the mother of John Westervelt. James Westervelt, as a member of the Santa Monica Vigilance Corps, incurred the displeasure of the Hearst paper by his activity in connection with the adoption by the corps of the resolution by which the members of the organization pledged themselves to cease reading, patronizing or subscribing for the Examiner. It was promised him by the Examiner's men that things would be made warm for him if he persisted, but his course was unchanged. John Westervelt is the young man of draft age who twice attempted to enlist, but each time was rejected by reason of physical unfitness. He had a weak heart. When he came before the exemption board, the Examiner sought to gain possession of his questionnaire to use in attacking his father through him and there was an exciting scene when the reporter attempted to snatch the document out of the hands of H. J. Stanley, clerk of the board. Finally young Westervelt gained a place with the colors and is now in training.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

Hair is by far the most conspicuous thing about us and is probably the most easily damaged by bad or careless treatment. If we are very careful in hair washing, we will have virtually no hair troubles. An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair; that dissolves and entirely removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt; can easily be used at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of Canthrox (which you can get at any druggist's) in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This chemically dissolves all impurities and creates a soothing, cooling lather. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After Canthrox shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.

SCREEN.

The Pictures.

MOTION AND EMOTION.

TOPICS RANGE FROM PATRIOTISM TO THE SCANDALOUS.

Alhambra.

Giving evidence of its great popularity, "Pershing's Crusaders" enters its second big week at the Alhambra today. Seldom has a production aroused such a widespread interest as has this first official picture of the United States government. Coming as an official message from Washington, "Pershing's Crusaders" arouses a fine spirit of patriotism worthy of America, and it will go down in history as one of the big accomplishments of our powerful government. A propaganda to defeat the Hun! These few words explain the great purpose of "Pershing's Crusaders." Are you going to sit quietly by and allow this great marvel to come and go without being a part of it, a part of your government's great work?

Grauman's.

One of the strongest photoplays of the season to be flashed on the screen at Grauman's beginning tomorrow, running for one week, will be "The City of Dim Faces," starring Sessue Hayakawa in the role of a Chinese. The story was written by Frances Marion, well known for her ability as a producer of ficticious works and student of Oriental life and manners. The story deals with a young Chinese-American, a college graduate, whose father is a Chinese merchant in San Francisco's Chinatown and whose mother is a white woman. The Paramount photoplay is strongly cast and well directed by George Melford. In portraying the character of the Chinese, Hayakawa is called upon to extend his ability as an actor. The programme at Grauman's for the coming week will consist of eight separate features of diversified amusement.

Tally's Broadway.

"The Safety Curtain," a picturization of Ethel M. Dell's widely read story of the same name, is the offering which brings Norma Talmadge to the screen of Tally's Broadway again next week. It is the story of a phenomenally clever dancer of the English music halls, who later becomes the bride of an English officer. Miss Talmadge plays the part of Puck, the dancer, while Eugene O'Brien, as leading man, is seen as the officer. Miss Dell's story has a very dramatic beginning within the walls of the music hall, where Capt. Merryon rescues Puck from the burning stage. Subsequently the scene shifts to India. The whole picture is clean and full of heart appealing situations, and should prove one of Miss Talmadge's most popular offerings.

Clune's Broadway.

"Believe Me, Xantippe," won a prize in a Harvard contest, went "over the top" on the stage, and comes to Clune's Broadway on Sunday to an assured success on the screen. "The police are a bunch of overfed house cats. They couldn't catch a cold," is the innuendo flung at the New York cops by a dashing clubman when he returns to his bachelor apartments to find that they had been ransacked by burglars. The

CHARLES RAY AND HIS WORK IN PHOTOPLAYS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

THERE is something ghastly—something improbable and impossible—about the yellow powder which the motion-picture actor has to smear all over his face in order that he may look "natural." It's all according to one's bona-fide complexion. Charlie Chaplin uses a violent pink powder. Charlie Ray doesn't.

Young Ray was made up as a youthful and ingenuous lawyer, and was rehearsing in a scene from a new photoplay, at the Ince studios, the other day. One knew he was young, because his paint was yellow, though the paint made him look old, jaundiced and blasé. But he will appear like twenty-one in the pictures. Such are some of the amazing tricks of photography.

However, even the hideous motion-picture variety of make-up can't obliterate the fine and open directness of Charles Ray's countenance. It is this innocent boyishness of expression, together with his great intelligence as an actor, that has rapidly brought him into the first trenches in the hard fight for fame, and that will very soon carry him magnificently "over the top."

Our young actor—he is only twenty-six—admits that it has been a hard fight, and that he is still at it with both fists. He started when he was eighteen, a schoolboy at the "Poly" High, acting nights as a "supe" in the old Grand Opera house on Main street, in the buoyant days of rampant melodrama. For months he had to be content to "stand round" by himself or rush round with the mob, but at last his great opportunity came—"Me lud, the kerridge waits!"

From that splendid moment he knew that he was marked out to be an actor. So, a little later, he went to Phoenix, where Wallace G. West was then tutoring a budding little stock company—and making it show some fine paces, too. This training did Charles Ray a lot of good, prepared him to step into pictures, which he straightway did six years ago. He faced his first camera at Ince's, whose studios were then at Culver City, and he has looked into the same camera—or rather away from it, since this is his creed in art—ever since.

His progress was slow, for young Ray had his own idea about motion-picture acting, and his idea did not, in those far-off days—though it does now—quite coincide with the idea of the actors around him. He did not believe in mugging or mouthing the passions, and he saw no need for tearing them into tatters. He believed in the natural, the repressed, when almost nobody else did. He played juveniles opposite Louise Glaum, Bessie Barriscale and other favorites of the screen. But he didn't find a lead till 1915, exactly three years after his initiation in pictures, when he took the role of the youthful slacker in "The Coward," a war play dealing with the American rebellion. This was his second great opportunity.

"When the part was assigned me," said Charles Ray, "I immediately began to make a close study of cowards, harking back to my boyhood recollection of the expression and manner of the boy who was afraid to scrap, or afraid to go out alone in the dark, or afraid of dogs and horses. I examined pictures depicting fear, read books about it, and then tried to reproduce what I had seen or read.

"I must have registered cowardice pretty well," he added, smiling modestly and ruefully, "for the deuce of it was that for a long time after 'The Coward' I was assigned role after role in which the hero—he always became a hero—was a born coward. Believe me, I got pretty tired of cowards before my director would let up on them! But he finally did, and in 'The Favorite Son' I found a more sympathetic role, one similar to many that have followed it, and that the public seems to have liked as much as I did."

Ray's work in "The Claws of the Hun" recently shown at Grauman's—where, by the way, all his pictures are to be exhibited for the next year—pleased me mightily, and I told the actor so viva-voce as well as in print. "But," I added, viva-voce, "it seemed to me that after the Huns had crushed your hand to a pulp you made rather expeditious use of it in climbing a wall, a little later."

"Your objection is well taken," Ray admitted, "but it was answered before you made it. I had my hand puffed up and painted horribly, when it occurred to me that the public doesn't like to look at such horrors. So I reduced the swelling and washed off the black-and-blue paint. Then, too, that wall-climbing scene had to be done in a hurry, for the cameraman and I had permission to remain at the electric plant for a few minutes only. I had to climb in a hurry."

It was admitted by Ray, and by me, that a young man under stress of great excitement would forget all his crushes and bruises, and that therefore, on the whole, the young American hero of "The Claws of the Hun" acted precisely as a young hero should. From all of which it will be seen that Charles Ray makes very close and conscientious study of his roles, and that he does not take the art of motion-picture acting lightly.

He is, in truth, one of the most consistently serious actors now working for the screen—which is FILLS LONG-FELT WANT.

ORGANIZATION WILL HELP YOU WRITE SCENARIOS.

By Grace Kingsley.

Founding schools to teach would-be scenario writers how to write for the screen has been one of the greatest little indoor sports of the age. Any tired waiter who liked pictures, or any blacksmith out of a job felt that he was the very little brighteyes who could tell the seeking soul just how to write scenarios for the picture producers, while the fellow who had followed a hundred different callings and failed in all of them, thought the first time he heard a noise that it was a call to teach scenario writing. But their day is past. The world is wise.

And now Mr. Picture Producer, you're not to be troubled any more by that infernal pencil-written scenario tied up with baby-blue ribbon. And you, Miss Scenario Writer, aren't to shed any more hot scalding tears on account of viewing on the screen your very own pet idea which you sent to the Phoney Film Company but for which you were never paid.

That is, these things aren't going to happen any more if the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, which has just come into being, and which promises to fill a long-felt want in the picture producing world has anything to say about it. And the organization would appear to have a good deal to say, in a clean-cut, straightforward sort of way.

In other words, the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, which has just opened offices at No. 585 I. W. Hellman Building, proposes to smooth out all those crinkles in the road which lies between the free-lance scenario writer and the picture producer; and the project is so simple it seems strange nobody has thought of it before.

Of course, there have been so-called scenario schools, which promised to make Totty Two-Shoes, scenario writer, famous for $2.98, yet had no backing by any reputable film company; and there have been so-called bureaus for the sale of scenarios, and some of these have been fairly successful where the work was honestly carried on. But the new project is neither a school in the ordinary sense, nor a bureau at all. It is an institution which promises clean, honest service to both producers and writers, is conducted by men who have themselves been successful scenario editors and writers, and has as references and co-operative workers some of the biggest figures and names in Filmland, including the famous Cecil de Mille, director-general of the Lasky forces; Thomas H. Ince, Artcraft producer; William S. Hart, Metro Pictures Corporation, Triangle Film Corporation, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Christie Film Company, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Mabel Condon Exchange and others.

According to the plan under which the Palmer Photoplay Corporation will work, the writer who feels he has a scenario in his system may confide the fact to the organization, making his communications by mail, as no personal interviews are desired, whereupon the organization will send him a prospectus stating the terms of membership. The membership includes a text-book on scenario writing, together with criticism of all scenarios submitted; and

ROOMANOV AND KALL.

FAMOUS REFUGEE PIANISTS AT THE ORPHEUM.

Musical circles here will have a double treat this week when, at the Orpheum, two of the most noted of Russian pianists will make their American debut. One is Prof. Alexis Kall, lately head of the Petrograd and Moscow imperial conservatories, before the fall of the Czar, when Russia had such artistic things, and the other—in whom perhaps the greater interest centers—Adriana Roomanov (she holds to the Russky spelling,) scion of the Czar's family, grand niece of the Grand Duke Paul, close to the imperial throne itself, and long mistaken for Tatiana, eldest daughter of Nicholas himself.

The two are fugitives from Russia; they landed recently in San Francisco, and by chance M. Meyerfield, Jr., head of the Orpheum circuit, heard them play. Ascertaining that they were practically without funds or of plans here, he secured them for the Orpheum, and this is to be their debut in America—for they have not yet played in public anywhere. Both are pianists; madame is also a composer, and they will appear singly and together, using two pianos.

Mme. Adriana Roomanov,
Famous Russian pianist, at Orpheum this week.

Adriana Roomanov is an example of the overcoming of difficulties. In the imperial Russian circles she was an oddity in that she had and displayed a real talent. The Grand Duke Paul, despite imperial objections, insisted that this talent be cultivated, and through Prof. Kall it was developed. After an era of recognition in royal circles—but never publicly—she was a victim of the great crash of imperialism in Russia, and in a night, almost, found herself without home, means or future.

Soon Prof. Kall himself was "out of a job," for Petrograd had little use for arts save of warfare, and he persuaded Adriana that America offered an outlook.

An incident of their journey here was the fact that she was taken for Tatiana, eldest daughter of the Czar, her cousin, and that many newspaper tales of Tatiana's escape were printed in consequence. These even led to the proffer of a royal palace by the Mikado in Tokio, only to result in its withdrawal when her identity was disclosed.

The couple will really mark a distinct note in Los Angeles artistic circles, and the fact that this city was selected for their American debut bespeaks much on its behalf as a musical center.

Dupuy's Choristers.

Dupuy's Choristers will give a sacred and patriotic service this evening at the Westlake Presbyterian Church, Ninth and Grand View. These singers are selected from the famous Orpheus Club and have for the past year and a half been singing at Immanuel Presbyterian Church, where they made an enviable reputation for themselves and their director, Joseph Dupuy; they are now making a tour of the churches of Los Angeles, preparatory to army and cantonment work, the younger members preparing themselves to act as song leaders when they are called by Uncle Sam.

NO GERMAN ON TELEPHONE.

An order prohibiting the speaking of German over the telephone has caused considerable hard feeling and resentment at Aulne, eight miles northeast of Peabody, Kan. J. T. Noll, secretary of the Aulne Telephone Company, who issued the order, says in a written statement defending the order:

"I am an American, believe in America and all her actions. Our two boys, all we have in the world to live for, are in France today in active service, and being an American I will, with all the power vested in me, try to make those of every nationality who are not loyal to this country become so. I have been criticised from all quarters, but little does it worry me, for I do not believe there is one word in the order that cannot be indorsed by citizens who believe in America. I came to the conclusion that some of these people were conversing in German for pure spite, and immediately had this order put into effect.

"The Aulne telephone exchange is a mutual company. A large number of the Aulne subscribers are Germans, living near Hillsboro. Hillsboro is unique in that it is a town of 1200, with its only newspaper published in the German language."—[Topeka State Journal.

TIPS FROM TEXAS.

An egotist is a person who believes that if he doesn't lead the parade it won't be much of a procession.

Another good thing about paying as you go is that it is a sure cure for wanderlust.

Our guess is that if women wore barrels they would cut bungholes above the waistline.

What has become of the old-fashioned helpless girl who acted as if she had been brought up in a baby buggy?

Probably the only advantage the one-gallused citizen has is that he can get along with two buttons.

It has just about gotten so in this country that a man is afraid to make a fool of himself without securing a Federal license.

As a general thing, when a woman admits that she hasn't got anything to worry over it is a sign that she is a widow or a maiden lady.—[Dallas News.

PRODUCERS SHOULD GIVE BETTER FILMS.

BUT FAULT IS NOT ALWAYS HIS IF HE CANNOT GET THEM, EASTERNER SAYS.

PASADENA, July 8.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I want to laud you for your stand against sensational motion pictures. Every mother will be interested and want to help you in trying to make the pictures safe for our children to see. In order to have perfect pictures we must have them made by perfect people, and have perfect people go see them. How about it? Alas, none of us is perfect!

We mothers ought to see every play first before the children see it and then have sufficient leisure and ability to know a good play when we see it and why it is a good play. We have to trust much to others. The person to be held responsible by the parents and teachers is the exhibitor. He ought to be a literary critic of the highest type, an artist and a teacher. Is he? No, he is a money slave. He has got to make his theater pay. If he were a literary critic he probably would not have money enough to run a theater. Enough splendid plays are made so, with the travel pictures and the news weeklies, he can give a good programme each week if he will.

But he has his troubles, too. If you went to the public library and asked for Hugo's "Les Miserables" and were told you could not get it because only another library was allowed to carry it how long would you stand for it? I asked Manager Root of the Strand, where we all like to go because of the fine music there, why he never showed a Mary Pickford play. He replied, "I cannot show one, I am under contract not to." Think of it! Back in my home town, the local theater could not show my play because it was a Reliance, and they could show only the licensed films. I say, give the exhibitor the liberty he ought to have or the death he deserves if, having that liberty, he does not give good plays.

I am sorry for the exhibitor when I see refined people turn away from the theater because of the sensational pictures and the depressing titles the advertising manager puts out. The advertising managers are the real criminals of the screen. The pictures are never one-half as bad as the ad man would like us to think they are. The exhibitor needs the services of a literary critic. He cannot trust what the producers tell him. Parents ought to go often to the theater to make it pay and to offer to the manager that helpful, intelligent criticism that he is always glad to receive.

The producer is a money slave, too. The war must have hit the business hard. He has vast sums invested in the business and we all ought to help him make it pay if we can be helpful. Back East the play's the thing; out here, it seems to me, you worship just a few players to the exclusion of others in a way that is not quite fair. It seems to me that only Mary Pickford, Elsie Ferguson, Douglas Fairbanks and William Hart and a few others get the attention they deserve. Of course, we love these players, too. I asked a prominent religious gentleman of Pasadena the other day, "Why do you love William S. Hart so much out here?" He quickly replied, "O, he always gives us a fine, clean play." So you see, the play's the thing after all, even out here.

Now where is the producer to get all the splendid plays we all want to see? Let The Times answer that and help the producer to get them. He simply cannot get them, that is all. I have known him to part with a fabulous sum to an author with a reputation only to get for his money nothing much but a title and a chance to give the author a lot of free advertising. You see the producer hasn't learned the art of spending his money wisely yet.

Does the producer honestly think he is "giving the people what they want?" How can he take a man with lines of debauchery frozen into his face, put a high, white collar on him (back East we call it a white-washed fence around a lunatic asylum,) a long black coat, call it a minister on the screen and expect to get by our sense of humor with it?

Isn't an old good play better than a new bad one? Do not be afraid of reissues. How I would like to see Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" again or Earl Williams in "The Christian" or Helen Gardner in "Vanity Fair." A party of us went to see Douglas Fairbanks in "Say! Young Fellow," and voted it a very fine play. I like Elsie Ferguson in the Ibsen plays. I like anything George Fawcett does; he's great! I'd like to see Cora Drew again. It is not possible to make better plays than some of the old Edison Company plays. We easterners like your stars, too; but won't you let us see some of the old Edison and Vitagraph players once in a while? I am homesick to see Earl Williams on the screen again.

Let the producers make more plays that the children may see. I think we grown-ups have been selfish in getting what we want to see. Outside of Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and Charlie Chaplin, what plays are there for them to see?

There are actors and actors, aren't there? Human nature must be much the same on the screen as off of it. I know a lot of persons off the screen who are not saints. Did you ever see a real, live actor off the screen? I have. I saw Crane Wilbur once at Atteboro. He has a wonderful voice well trained. He would make a perfect minister and he would not be preaching to empty pews, either. If I were a minister, I would get Mr. Wilbur to preach my sermon for me some Sunday and let him crowd the church for me. I invited two actresses to my home. I found them women of refinement with charming manners and each had heart interest in me. There's the actors' charm—he has heart. Ask a favor of him when things go wrong and he will not turn a cold, snobbish shoulder to you; he'll help. As for the silly girls who pay any price to get on to the screen, who is to be blamed? Blame their mothers that could raise such daughters.

But why cannot our beautiful daughters and our college girls have the chance to earn the big money now going to these silly girls? They would bring beauty, refinement, intelligence and uplift to the screen. They will not work in the studios as the conditions are now. We must not let our daughters feel that it does not pay, in dollars, to be good, ought we? We mothers will help make the theaters pay. Why, then, do the producers not see to it that the good salaries go to good girls? Let us capitalize goodness all around. May I offer:

A PLEA FOR FAIR PLAY.

Would you like to be the movie man
Doing brave deeds in shadow-land
Making us laugh or cry, as he can,
While picturing truth so all understand?
Yes.

Would you work as hard as surely he must
In the awful heat, all plastered with paint,
Where the atmosphere's of lowest lust,
And cursed by a director who is no saint?
No.

Would you have a heart so big and tender,
And freely pour your dollars out
When your country calls you to be a spender
To help put the cruel Hun to rout?
Yes, yes.

Would you like to be, when Uncle Sam calls,
A Mary or Clara, a Doug or dear Bill,
Touring the country making big hauls
Selling Liberty Bonds to fill up the till?
Yes, indeed.

Ought we a "keeper" of the movie man be
Give back something for all that we take?
God tolerates us, so why should we
Make the shadow-man's golden heart ache?

NOON-TIDE PRAYER ASKED FOR ANIMALS.

CORRESPONDENT SUGGESTS IT BE INCLUDED IN OBSERVANCE FOR THOSE IN WAR.

LOS ANGELES, JULY 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Noontide prayer for "our soldiers and sailors and aviators and those of our allies, our Hospital Corps and war nurses and every agency and effort that makes for victory and peace," is indeed a most exalted and sublime observance and should be religiously adopted by every man, woman and child in the alliance of civilized nations.

There is, however, a specific omission in this prayer which, in the white spirit of beneficence, should be included as essentially fitting and just, and that is the mention of the horses and dogs as a recognition of their valuable and important service to humanity in the red conflict for liberty and peace.

The late venerable Archdeacon Wilberforce of England, scion of a nobility that fought so valiantly for the rights of humans and the lesser animals alike, felt not that he had profaned the sanctity of England's greatest cathedral when he prayed compassionately for "the faithful suffering animals, who have shared the agonies of war, its hardships of cold, hunger and physical anguish, as well as the arduous service of rescue work."

There has drifted down through the garden of the ages the fragrant and touching prayer of St. Basil, bishop of Caesarea, A. D. 370:

"And for thou also, O Lord, the humble beasts, who with us bear the burdens and heat of the day, and offer their guileless lives for the well-being of their country, we entreat thy great tenderness of heart, for Thou hast promised to save both man and beast and great is thy loving kindness, O Master, Savior of the world."

The patient, plodding war horses and mules, hauling the heavily laden transport wagons of guns and ammunitions until from sheer exhaustion many drop by the wayside; or again amid the dull roar of great guns and bursting shell, they pull the heavy artillery into almost inaccessible but formidable vantages. And the dogs—the Red Cross dogs—that fleet and silent-footed seek out the wounded and the dying and carry to them refreshment, hope and peace. The dispatch dogs, who, amid the rain of steel-winged bullets carry important messages across a field swept by the enemy's fire and die at the feet of the victorious commander—are not less heroes.

"We shall certainly meet these suffering creatures in another dimension when the education of this life is over," for John says in his prophetic vision of the glorious end: "And every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and in the sea heard I saying: 'Blessing and honor and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne. Amen.'"

Let us include in our noontide prayer the universal remembrance of the animals upon the battlefields and also those who upon the city street or country road are all helping to win the war.

ROSEMONDE WRIGHT.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

Israel Zangwill, the distinguished English Jew and writer of plays, novels and essays, who is also president of the International Jewish Territorial Organization, attended the elementary schools as a child, and is largely a self-educated man. He first took up the profession of teaching, but soon turned to journalism and novel and play writing. He has been a strong advocate of women suffrage.

The Prince of Wales has a very distinct leaning toward music. While at the front he has often attended the soldiers' "sing-songs," and on several occasions he has been persuaded to sing a solo.

Brig.-Gen. James G. Harbord, commander of the fighting marines now in France, is just as good as the hero in the story book. The Boche never takes so much of his time that he cannot write a letter once a week to his mother in Manhattan.—[Kansas City Star.

Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, at the age of 21, was a medical student at the University of Christiania. Before receiving his degree a play from his pen was produced at the National Theater, with such success that Ibsen concluded he would do better in the realm of literature than in that of medicine.

Lord French, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, is said to be possessed of a characteristic which will be particularly valuable to him in his new post. It was very much appreciated by the French on several occasions. They said of him that he was "tranquille d'esprit." In rendering this phrase into an English equivalent, a Frenchman comes to the rescue with the quotation of Drake's remark on Plymouth Hoe in 1588: "We have time to finish the game and beat the Spaniards too."

The German Emperor is no blood relative of the deposed Czar of Russia, but he is a cousin of the Czarina, as he is also of King George of England, the three being grandchildren of the late Queen Victoria of England.

Triumphant.

MADAME BERNHARDT IN "CHAMP D'HONNEUR."

IT WAS a great accomplishment for Martin Beek to offer Mme. Sarah Bernhardt in the Orpheum theaters. A secondary accomplishment was the happy selection from her immense repertoire of "Camille" and "Champ d'Honneur." During her engagement here she will be seen in both selections. Mme. Bernhardt's portrayal of the role of Camille is still supreme, though it has been played by the world's greatest actresses for over sixty years, and it is also a role that, if for no other reason, would command attention for its timeliness. Also these selections give Mme. Bernhardt both a male and a female role.

Bernhardt of the golden voice has not changed a bit in the last thirty years, if the unanimous verdict of a majority of her critics is at all accurate. The story of "Camille" is familiar; "Champ d'Honneur" less so. Playing the male part of Marc Bertrand, a French actor-soldier, Bernhardt is given every opportunity to display her mastery of dramatic technique and at moments rises far above any heights hitherto attained by her in the greatest of her successes. The actor-soldier, mortally injured (his right leg hopelessly shattered,) has hidden the flag of France in a tree before delirium seizes him. His wounds do not pain him half so much as the thought that he cannot recall in his clearer moments where he had concealed the flag.

From trench to trench the former actor had gone, always under enemy fire, reciting poetry to the men in the trenches, until finally he is wounded and staggers to a tree, against which he half sits and half reclines. Here he is found by an English officer, who remembers him and interrogates the dying soldier. Bernhardt waves aside the field nurses and the Red Cross dog, and throws her whole soul into Paul Deroulede's verses "To the Bearer of the Flag." When dying, the actor-soldier cries defiance to the Huns in a final "Vive la France!" and at the close Bernhardt clutches the tricolor of France to her bosom.

Mme. Bernhardt will be supported by her own company from Paris.

Charles M. Schwab does not cherish a very high regard for himself as a politician. Writing in a current periodical, he says: "I have only one political speech to my credit. It was made over at Braddock thirty years ago when I was young and impulsive. I urged the election of the Republican ticket. As a consequence, or a fact, the town went Democratic for the first and only time, I believe, since the Civil War."

BEFORE LEAVING, URGES CITIZENS TO SEE FILM PLAY "PERSHING'S CRUSADERS."
Just before leaving the city Mayor Woodman issued the following proclamation:
"There is now being shown at the Alhambra Theater an official war film entitled "Pershing's Crusaders." It is intended to explain to the people of this great nation what is taking place 'over there,' and the part that our boys are playing in it.
"The picture should be seen by every loyal American citizen, as it brings us closer to a realization of conditions than any reading matter can.
"I am informed by the State Council of Defense that no private interests are involved, but that the entire revenue derived from the Alhambra Theater, less actual distribution expenses, goes to the government.
"I cannot urge too strongly upon the citizens of this city the desirability of viewing the film."

Superba.

Monroe Salisbury, starring in "Winner Takes All," his latest Bluebird screen success, occupies a ranch house in the play which will be a model for a prairie home now being built by a wealthy easterner who chanced to be a guest at the Bluebird studios as the photodrama was being filmed. As Alan MacDonald, a homesteader, Monroe Salisbury fights a powerful ring of cattle barons who are trying to oust him from the great free range. At first the fight is along lines of persuasion. It intensies in hatred until the oppressors hire a man to kill him.

With a price on his head, Alan MacDonald brazenly attends a masquerade given at the palatial home of one of the prairie princes. He is recognized and escapes in a shower of bullets.

Quinn's Rialto.

The exquisite artistry of Nazimova in "Toys of Fate" has taken Los Angeles moving-picture audiences by storm, and packed houses have been the rule at Quinn's Rialto during the last week. To satisfy many turnaways the sensation of the screen season will be given another week in her latest production, and the second and positively last week begins today.

Nazimova gives a superb portrayal of a wild, carefree gypsy girl in "Toys of Fate." The Los Angeles critics have been unstinted in their praise of the picture, and audiences have left the Rialto fully enraptured. As in her first production Nazimova has again demonstrated that she has few equals on the screen. "Toys of Fate" gives her wide scope to demonstrate her unusual abilities.

Symphony.

Alice Joyce and Marie Dressler will be the stars of the coming week's bill at the Symphony, starting with the matinee today. The emotional star will have as her vehicle "Find the Woman," a screen version of one of O. Henry's popular stories, while the funmaker will create numerous laughs in "The Agonies of Agnes," her most recent comedy. Added attractions of the week will be the latest Pathe news and a scenic film, showing the wonderful works of nature in Southern Guadalupe. Such well-known stars as Walter McGrail, Arthur Donaldson, Jessie Jean Paige, Martin Faust and Henry Houri have important parts in "Find the Woman."

Miller's.

A big new show is to open at Miller's today. It is headed by that sterling actor and wonderful athlete, William Russell. His new vehicle is "Up Romance Road." Those who have seen it say that for speed, pep, ginger and fast action it has anything any star of the athletic variety ever put over. It deals with German spies, and is filled with plots and counter-plots that keep the audience keyed up from the first title to the final fadeout. Another feature of the new bill will be Fatty Arbuckle, the world-famous funny fat man, in "The Village Scandal," one of the funniest of his famous Mack Sennett Keystone comedies.

Garrick.

Believing that Lois Weber, often referred to as "the Belasco of the screen," was unjustly accused by a local paper when in its editorials against objectionable films it condemned "Scandal," one of the famous woman producer's best known films, Harry P. Caulfield, owner of the Garrick, will stage the production there for the coming seven days and let the public vote on the question. Ballots have been provided for the patrons and the results will be announced at the end of the week. "Scandal" is based on the unwritten commandment, "Mind your own business and keep your mouth shut." Lois Weber herself appears in the production along with such well known stars as Rupert Julian, Adele Farrington and Phillips Smalley."

Palace.

"Old Wives for New," that intimate disclosure of the problems of marital life that comes to the Palace this Sunday, is from the novel of contemporary life by the late David Graham Phillips. As produced by that Belasco of the silver sheet, Cecil B. de Mille, with a cast including such notables as Elliott Dexter, Florence Vidor, Sylvia Ashton, Theodore Roberts and Tully Marshall, "Old Wives for New" is more than a good picture—it is an event. In addition to "Old Wives for New," the Palace will have William S. Hart in a clever tale entitled "Mr. Nobody," and one of the much-liked Christie comedies.

not the same as saying that he plays only serious roles, for he has a delightful feeling for comedy. He is at once simple and subtle, the quiet master of every needed facial expression. Too, he has a young and pliant body that often tells what the eyes or the mouth have left unsaid.

But better than all these good things is the fact that he interprets the dreams, the hopes and the fears of noble youth in a sincere and noble way. The plays he gives are the plays for everybody. They are clean, wholesome, uplifting, and the moral they point adorns the tale every time. In other words, they teach, but do not preach.

The wistful beauty of idealistic and inspiring youth—the youth that has not yet experienced the tragic pathos of defeat—does anyone depict it more wonderfully in motion pictures than Charles Ray I know of no one, and therefore his particular radiance places him very high, it seems to me, in the galaxy of motion-picture stars.

We are all eternally young, no matter what the years may try to tell us, and the legends of the gods are ever the tales of youthful prowess. Being young, we are still the conquerors of fate—and, being young, we like the heroic, modern fables in which Charles Ray moves triumphantly from picture to picture.

Tale of a Shirt.

More than two years ago Miss Rose Keller, who was employed in the Reliance shirt manufacturing plant at Seymour, Ind., pinned a card bearing her name and address on a shirt which was ready for shipment. The shirt was bought by a retailer in Milwaukee, who sold it to Basil McNulty, a Rock Island Railroad employee.

McNulty wrote Miss Keller, and she replied. Other correspondence followed, and photographs were exchanged. During the last Christmas holiday season McNulty called on Miss Keller. The couple were married June 28 at the St. Ambrose Catholic Church. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Leo Keller. They will live in Estherville, Iowa.—[New York World.

Arthur Zachritz Drafted.

Eight times rejected for service with the army, navy or marines—all because a fighting tackle on the football team of Syracuse University back in 1911 kicked his heart out of place—Arthur Zachritz, 27 years old, athlete and attorney, has been drafted.

Some athlete!

That's what they used to say about him.

And the draft board decided that "some athlete" ought to make "some soldier"—even if he had a heart where it oughtn't to be and had been rejected eight times because of it.

Star half-back on the St. Louis University eleven in 1911, his heart was kicked out of place in the Thanksgiving Day game with Syracuse, when the St. Louis men held the visitors to a tie.—[St. Louis Star.

TO OPEN NEW THEATER AT CAMP KEARNY.

Los Angeles Actors Find Warm Welcome with Gen. Strong and His Army.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

LADY laid a soft black nose on my knee and looked up at me with great brown eyes. Lady is an Irish setter, and, as I stroked the silken red hair of the finely modeled head, she gave me to understand that her willingness to protect Helen Jerome Eddy with her life, if need be, did not mean that she was compelled to approve all of the situations in which her mistress now found herself. Laddie came up and joined our wordless conversation. Laddie is likewise an actor, being the superb Scotch collie who is the owner of J. Wharton Jones.

To begin with, neither Lady nor Laddie felt that their camp should be so near the edge of nothingness that their wild cousins, the coyotes, can keep them awake all night with their yowls to the stars. It was Laddie's opinion that they were a low sort who never put their minds upon the higher things of this life, such as the stage. Lady thought the same as to coyotes and nearly the same as to Raymond Wells, organizer and director of this troupe of strolling players whose offensive against Gen. Frederick S. Strong and his army has been so suddenly and permanently successful.

Lady saw nothing poetic about rehearsals under an umbrella tree, with no walls about and no stage property of any kind. She intimated that she had known Miss Eddy ever since she became a leading woman in moving pictures of first quality and that never had she seen anything so ridiculous as the particular set on which her beloved mistress was now at work.

Nobody else in the company agrees with the two camp pets. They find no inconvenience in the location of their camp and are extremely grateful for the umbrella tree's shade during rehearsals. Francis Powers has been a stage director since the youth of drama in America and he feels that he never got better work out of himself than he is now doing under this sacred tree of desert places. They all agree about their kind of audience, too, and say that it is worth a hundred times the money they do not get to look down on the faces of 1200 of Uncle Sam's huskies five nights out of the week. They do not play Saturday and Sunday nights because that is liberty period for the men and the one chance for a part of the soldiers to get away from camp.

Probably none of the company so much enjoys the audience as Fred Hamer. Fred is your true soldier of fortune, having fought for Uncle Sam in the war with Spain, when he was in the Philippines, and for England against the Boers in that campaign. He created the role of Hohano when Bessie Barriscale starred in "The Bird of Paradise" at the old Belasco, and when pictures came into favor he settled down in the employment office of D. W. Griffith. Tuesday night I saw him in the role of the Mexican roper in "Going Some," and you have my word for it that he is a good actor.

It was the night of the Minnesota regiment to see the play, and, while the good old comedy received the best production I ever witnessed—and I have seen it many, many times—the audience was more interesting even than the play. The orchestra was a band that was not a band. Every member of it was an engineer or mechanic and no member of it belonged to any of the regimental bands. They played good music and played it well, and when they struck "Allah's Holiday" every soldier in the Knights of Columbus Hall either whistled or sang it.

That goes for Father Cull and Father Keating as well. They were as jubilant as schoolboys on a holiday. Probably they were the last men in the house that you would have picked out for chaplains. They not only looked human, but acted it, and no two men in the army at Camp Kearny are more popular than they. Both of them saw a good deal of life before they entered orders, and one boy told me they were more like friends than like priests. It would surprise me to see Mirza Marston give up New Thought and come back a church member, and to hear that Richard Carlyle and Patrick Calhoun were accepting the fever inoculations with Christian fortitude. It is a fact that William H. Brown no longer swears audibly except in his parts. These swearing roles must be a great relief to "Bill," and they are to Gen. Strong, who comes twice a week to hear Will swear in the presence of ladies and brings Mrs. Strong with him.

If the actor ever had a friend in this world that same is Gen. Strong, and he is closely seconded in his efforts to make it comfortable for the volunteer players by Capt. Morgan Vining, Capt. George Shea, his aides; Col. Gulic, his Chief of Staff, and Maj. Matthews, division adjutant.

WARFIELD PROMISED CARRILLO A "THRILL."

Just before the closing of Oliver Morosco's brilliant comedy, "Lombardi, Ltd.," in New York, Leo Carrillo, the star of the piece, and David Warfield were chatting in the Lambs' Club as Californians can who have started at the bottom of the stage ladder and reached the delirious heights of successful stardom.

"Leo," mused Dave, "you've played 302 performances in 'Lombardi, Ltd.' in New York, and any production that can stand such a test will succeed anywhere in the world, excepting in that portion of the globe occupied by the Hun.

"You've every reason to feel proud, Leo, but the happiest moment of your career, perhaps, is in store for you. It'll come when you go back to San Francisco, the city that sent you forth in an humble capacity. You'll never get another thrill like the one that comes when you step out on the stage in your native city as a successful star, with the feeling in your heart that those old friends in front who had faith in you in the long ago will be in a position to see that their faith was not misplaced."

Perhaps that is one of the reasons why Carrillo is looking forward with eagerness for the curtain to rise next Sunday night at the Mason, for he will be back "home" and awaiting the "thrill" that Warfield said would come.

The Vanished Potash Scare.

For nearly four years now the United States has been getting along without German potash, and blue ruin hasn't yet struck the country. It is in the prospect that, taken all round, this year, 1918, will exceed the previous high score year in the matter of food production, and this without a pound of German agricultural potash. It is now practically assured that the winter wheat crop of the United States will be near to 50,000,000 bushels larger than any previous one-year yield of winter wheat.

The hay crop also is likely to be a record-breaker and a score of other standard food crops are up to or beyond the average. As to the missing German potash the United States during the past twelve months has produced a home supply of probably more than ten times as great as the home yield of this farm chemical in 1914. The home supply has come from more than a thousand different sources, a little here, a good deal more there, and, upon the whole, about as much as the farm industries have needed.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LONG BEACH, July 19.—

Orfa darling:

While you are submerged in the lecture campaign and judgeships and things, your Betty is getting her chest irreparably sunburned, her nose most unbecomingly skinned and her temper improved beyond all recognition at restful Hotel Virginia, where the war-weary people seem to come to recuperate. Everything is quite delightfully dolce far niente and siestary, except for a few warning remarks on the menus to the effect that Uncle Sam expects every good patriot to hold off on wheat, economize on sugar and clean up his plate—the latter being quite buoyantly easy. Even the board of directors of the Ebell Club, which decided to hold a meeting here yesterday, looked less intense and ferociously businesslike than is its wont. Mrs. Mathew Robertson and Mrs. Chester Ashley, the incumbent and ex-president, wore sunshiny smiles and an air of general approval, for was not the best war news of the year coming through on the ebullient wires, tingling with triumph, hope and radiant exaltation?

Wasn't the Brunswig garden party for the fatherless children of France a joyous success? Those gardens presented a delightful scene in the long twilight, as the wondrous lighting effects popped into being and the new moon silently co-operated with romantic effect. But, oh, it was a strenuous day. Douglas Fairbanks worked like a Main-street auctioneer selling those elusive paddles that offered a gamble on the fortune wheel and the fabulous wealth of $2.50 for an investment of $1, with Winifred Kingston, in a succession of demoralizing hats, to aid and abet him. Winifred first appeared in a cutey little black hat with a voluminous white tulle veil all over it, and billowing round her neck, to protect her from the saucy and dangerous sunshine. But as the day wore on she appeared in a big pink creation, strictly extra fancy, and still later in another variety of voluptious millinery.

Grace Thomas's exclusive inclosure, 50 cents extra and trust to luck, proved a most profitable arrangement. One had a sense of buying one's way into society with that half a dollar, for she had a contingent of dazzling naval officers doing every kind of a chore, from playing gateman to twirling the wheel of fortune, leading fatalists to the [illegible] of clever palmists and crystal gazers, and keeping the waiting lines in a good humor. Lieut. Farnsworth shouted himself hoarse at the wheel of fortune and did a roaring trade, assisted by Mrs. F. W. Poor, who properly submerged her rampant conscience for the occasion. The cigarette booth, for which Mrs. Jack Richardson had raised $40 for stock, which sold for over $100, kept Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Tufts and a dozen beauteous Spanish-garbed girls busy for eight solid hours. Carolina Winston and Harvie Wallace both looked particularly lovely, and, tell it not in Gath, both are suspected of trembling on the brink of a war romance. Miss Wallace, you know, is the girl who played stenographer at the Liberty Loan office and stuck to her job eight hours a day, for all the world as though she were paid for it.

The Patriotic League girls all looked so piquant, in those very special hazy blue-mauve garden party hats they had made as a badge for the occasion. Doris Collins and Marjory Hines were two of the radiant young beauties, whom everyone turned to admire, and for whose smiles the army and navy competed.

The dinner hour was fraught with tense emotions, for quite a lot of frightfully-important people had to wait their turn like ordinary mortals. Can you imagine a hungry, impatient line, which included the Baron de Ropp, Prince and Princess Troubetskoy, Julian Eltinge, Fred Stone and Ruth St. Denis? They were finally seated at a table that reeked of celebrities, with Mrs. J. B. Lippincott devoting herself to soothing Julian Eltinge, Mrs. Fred Hickok and Mrs. Robert Holmes soothing the Baron and the Prince, and Ruth St. Denis and Fred Stone soothing each other. Mrs. Charles Raymond did her noblest in pacifying the hungry needs of the Princess, and Grace Thomas, who was the hostess, starved valiantly that hospitality might not perish.

The glittering army and navy guests, French and American, received very thorough attention, however, and their fried chicken and concomitants were the envy of all beholders. The French Lieut. Garnereau in his blue-and-gold uniform, was, we suspect, the recipient of numerous fond extras at the hands of an obviously impressed society waitress. Mme. Simone Puget, whose recent accident insisted upon engendering reminiscent pangs, had to walk with a stick, which, however, did nothing to detract from the charms of her fascinating little side "bangs," and her dress a la Grecian. Of course, we all christened Mr. Brunswig Louis Napoleon on the spot, and he looked the part, as he directed affairs with an air of imperial authority. Capt. Charles H. Marlowe played deputy host to the military and saw that the Bastille fell with an all due eclat on the front steps of the mansion. Mary Reed, accompanied by some jolly sailors with a portable organ and voices de luxe, did an itinerant trade, just moving on and giving a concert on a new corner where the crowd looked dollarful. They sang anything anybody wanted sung, and we are all willing to pay for our pet noise.

Mrs. Robert Holmes gave such a jolly houseboat party Thursday on her "ship" at Alamitos Bay, which is anchored out in the middle of a romantic lagoon, and fitted up like a French boudoir. Mrs. Fred Poor took one load down in her brand new machine, which hubby gave her specially for Red Cross work, and which she cherishes like a new babe. We rather wanted Mrs. Poor to fall in the lagoon because, you know, she has such wonderful hair, reaching to the ground, and we thought it would look so picturesquely Undiney floating on the water. But she insisted upon keeping dry. We all sang songs in the twilight and waxed so sentimental as the moon rose o'er the bay and the golden sunset. But the only males on the scene were a distant grouchy fisherman and small boys, so no casualties are reported.

Everybody has fallen in love with Edith Brubaker down here, for she is the darling of the children at Hotel Virginia. She tells them wonderful stories, plays with them, and never, never forgets a birthday. She is credited with a wonderful prowess at castle building and a passionate interest in one's progress at swimming. No one has ever seen her look bored in any company under fifteen years of age. Above that, her interest flags a trifle.

Long Beach is getting so civicly stylish. A new sea wall, a new passion for tidiness, raked beaches, clean walks, positively no litter—everything looks so spruce and trim, like a well-kept ship. Doesn't neatness make a difference to a city? Perhaps that wonderful city service flag with nearly 500 names has something to do with it.

I hear Irving Reynolds has received his call for the navy and leaves for the San Pedro training camp this week. You know he underwent a severe operation in order that he might be accepted. His mother and sister are among the most ardent Red Cross workers at Covina.

Have you met those three chic little New York sisters, the Guildford girls? They had not been at the Alexandria a day, before they were surrounded by military admirers. They were out at the Brunswig garden party and everyone was asking who they were. They are here with their mother for a long stay and are already taking part in all sorts of war relief work. Saw them at the British Ambulance Society on one of Mrs. Ham's attractive Thursdays—and all the uniforms present were at their table. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Kelley gave a delightful musical programme and everyone confused them with the Spencer Kennellys, who have since been invited by all their friends to sing "those fine duets we heard about it."

But the very newest social pet is Prof. Houghton Holborn, an Oxford University man from England, who is giving an English literature course for the university extension here. In appearance he might be any ordinary mortal, except that he wears a loose black silk bow for a tie, but when he talks he mesmerises everyone present and his voice and language are quite enthralling. So, Hoover notwithstanding, hostesses are competing with each other for the honor of feeding him.

So long, cherie, I am still "resting." When I come back I shall feel like conquering the world. But just at present, I shine best at soothing siestas and sea bathing.

Your soporific,

BETTY.

Dr. and Mrs. Sumner J. Quint are entertaining at a house party at their summer home, "Glenn Ranch," in the San Bernardino Mountains. Their guests include Mrs. A. E. Wilson, Mrs. Grusilla Daily Warner, James S. Lucious and Mrs. Wallace Hardison.

Valk-Wilson Wedding.

At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Valk of No. 1942 Orchard avenue, Miss Edith Valk and John Wilson were married last evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Richard Jones was matron-of-honor and Henry Russell Valk, the bride's brother, who is in training at the Presidio, was best man. Little "Dickie" Jones was ring-bearer. The bride wore a gown of white Georgette crepe and carried Bride's roses. She is a graduate of the Girls' Collegeiate School.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. Cecilia White was the recipient of a charming courtesy on Friday afternoon when half a hundred of her friends celebrated her birthday with a surprise party. The affair was arranged by Mrs. W. F. Callender and Miss Della Bates and among the guests were all of Mrs. White's friends, who have traveled in Russia and other foreign countries with her. Instead of bringing flowers, each guest brought a penny for every year of her age, which was turned over to Mrs. White to give to French orphans.

Week-end House Party.

Misses Ruth and Norma Riedeman and Miss Elizabeth Cadman of this city entertained at a house party at Hermosa Beach over the week-end, having as guests Misses Althea Dawson, Weltha Bletcher, Grace Rivers, Gladys Voight, and Messrs. George Sheppard, Cecil Wrisley, Edward Rivers, Lewis Harrold, Allen Brown, Harold Ticque, and Percival Perkins. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Reid chaperoned the young folk, who passed the time at dinner parties and at surf bathing.

ARE WE SOON TO BECOME A RACE OF BALD-HEADED MEN?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN

Bacteriologist, Hair and Scalp Specialist of Chicago Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day. If it falls out he looks anxiously at the falling hair and then promptly forgets it until the next time he uses a comb.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies and when it is nearly gone, and the roots are dead, he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

According to Prof. Austin, there are something like sixty different conditions of the scalp and hair. Some are contagious. Others develop from neglect. Practically all of them are curable in the early stages.

Prof. Autsin says the use of dandruff cures, mange cures and hair tonics is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated.

Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR, and then he tells you what to do for the trouble.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATIONS by the Prof. Austin method of the hair and scalp all this week in private offices on the second floor of Hamburger's. Hours 10 to 12 a.m., and 2 to 4 p.m., daily.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 360 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to this work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert.

PEERLESS PALMER,
AMERICA'S GREATEST PSYCHIC,
50c—READINGS THIS WEEK—50c.

Calls you by name and tells the object of your visit without asking a question. Names enemies and friends. Tells whom and when you will marry; if the one you love loves you; whether wife or sweetheart is true or false; how to influence any one you desire, even though a thousand miles away. Develops personal magnetism; causes speedy and happy marriage with the one of your choice. Gives advice on all matters of business. He gives more satisfaction, more encouragement, more success, more help, more facts than any other Psychic. He is worthy your confidence.

REMOVES EVIL INFLUENCES.

Do you find the one you have bestowed your affection and trust upon acting cool and indifferent? Has a rival or obstacle of any kind crept between you and your future home, or has misfortune assailed the quietude of your happy home? COME TO THIS GIFTED MEDIUM and find help.

THE PROFIT

is life's sunshine, conscious power, magnetism to attract and strength to hold. It's not so much in what I tell you as it is what I do for you by my special influence, that I put forth in your behalf to overcome all your sorrows and troubles so that you can have the power to win your greatest desires. What good is a psychic's advice unless they are able to lift you out of your troubles, worriments and bad luck? None whatever.

I will accept no fee unless you receive perfect satisfaction.

GEO. PALMER, 614 S. HOPE ST.
Hours 10 to 6 DAILY; SUNDAY, 12 to 2.

PERSONAL—
50c MADAM ADAIR 50c
Trance Medium (Ordained)
This Week.

She asks no questions; tells your full name; tells the names of friends and enemies; tells you what you have called for; tells all about your business affairs; tells things you should know. Does another share the love that should belong to you, or is there some one else's love you wish to gain, or have you secret rivals or enemies you wish to overcome? Do you want to get proofs, facts and names in regard to whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false? Do you want success in luck love, marriage, health, business and speculation? Special attention given to the location and discovery of old estates, lost documents, lost or absent friends; in a word, whatever your troubles, suspicions, hopes, fears or desires, you are earnestly invited to call, and you will be rewarded by obtaining a clear insight into the future. Also, if you care to learn the lives and fate of those dear to you. All business sacred and confidential. Evil influences broken. Teaches you how to control the one you love and overcome your enemies.

Come and I will tell you your troubles, and if I can't help you it will not cost you anything, and you will have the benefit of a good reading by a reliable medium free. Is this fair? Hours, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Sunday included.

PERSONAL—

SEE THE SAND GAZER.

DR. MUNDO-DARE, ORDAINED.

DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

SPECIAL READING, THIS WEEK, 50C.

The only member of INDIA'S MYSTIC BROTHERHOOD to ever visit this country. First in America to introduce this MYSTERIOUS ART employed by PROPHETS OF OLDEN TIMES. His remarkable disclosures are pronounced "PHENOMENAL" by thinking people who have consulted him. Any Clairvoyant can tell your name, the past and present. If wives, husbands, sweethearts or friends are true or false, and many other things of more trivial importance. All these things the SAND GAZER tells at a glance. What you want is to be successful and make the most of a life that is passing ALL TOO FAST. To get what your Creator promises, you must know your strongest points. Your future possibilities, physical condition, how to gain the one you desire, how to be magnetic, etc., etc. To acquire these things, you MUST SEE THE SAND GAZER SOONER OR LATER. So COME TODAY. IN HIS DEPARTMENT HE STANDS SUPREME. You need not speak for him to call your name in full, names of those you wish to know or what you came for, how to make business pay, whom you will marry and when, every possible advice regarding love, travel, changes, speculation, divorces, lawsuits, sickness, etc. All of life's active principles are minutely analyzed by THIS WIZARD OF THE SHIFTING SANDS. The Only Psychic who really demonstrates the mysterious power to help you. Come. Test him and be convinced. Hours, 12 to 8 daily, 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays. Maid in attendance. 1920 S. FIGUEROA ST. Take West Washington, University or La Salle ave. cars. Phone 22141. No sign.

PERSONAL—

CLARKE—THE MASTER PSYCHIC—CLARKE.

50C—ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST—50C.

Make no change until you have consulted the master psychic. Prof. Clarke helps you gain back what you wish at once. Almost immediately removes the cause of any bad luck, bad habits, sickness, trouble or failure. He helps you win back the love you have lost.

Every day a stream of people pass in and out of his office on Alvarado street, some go away smiling, others more hopeful than for years, for this marvelous medium who sees all and tells all without asking a solitary question is always able to restore the wavering faith in others and give them back that self-confidence which makes for success.

Thousands of the best people of this city and surrounding country have consulted this master psychic and are amazed at what he is able to tell them. He not only gives you more help, more knowledge and power than any other medium, but more than all other mediums and psychics combined.

All are welcome to his beautiful home, opposite Westlake Park, where they may read all the inspiring books of his large library, whether they wish to have a reading or not. Come and freely enjoy the wonderful atmosphere and vibrations in the home of this master psychic. You will go away with a feeling of confidence and power that you have never experienced before.

Today new opportunities are at hand. You may be able to get a better position, better salary or business, dispose of your property to advantage. The time to do things is now. Call at once. Readings daily and Sunday, 10 to 7. Fee 50c. 556181. 638 S. ALVARADO. WIL. 2956. Take W. 6th or W. 7th-st. car to Alvarado.

PERSONAL—WHAT HE DOES FOR 50 CENTS—50 CENTS—50 CENTS.

I call your name, tell how long you will live, what condition your business is in, how to improve it; I tell you all about wife, husband, sweetheart, how to win the love of those you desire; I tell of journeys, changes, speculations, investments, what to do to obtain best results, whom to trust, whom to shun, whom you will marry, when, what they are like. If you fail, there is a reason. I tell it, and that, too, without asking you a question. When in doubt consult Los Angeles' favorite clairvoyant. Res. 2403 S. GRAND AVE. Hours 10 to 6; Sunday, 10 to 2.

"FIGHTING DEVILS."

Look what our boys did at the Marne! They are "FIGHTING DEVILS!"

A few months ago these same boys were on our farms, in our stores, shops and schools. Now they are fighting our battles. We affectionately call them our "SAMMIES." The enemy calls them "FIGHTING DEVILS"—and they are! Why? Because they were TRAINED to fight. Our government spent precious months systematically training these boys before it would risk their lives and our Nation's future, in battle. Do you catch the importance of this word "TRAINING?" We want you to, because that is our business. In the past fourteen years we have trained over 5000 men. We have trained them systematically, thoroughly, to go out and fight the business battles of life—and WIN. And, we have won success through their successes. Slowly but steadily we have grown to be the largest and best equipped Automobile and Tractor School in the West. The courses we teach cover these lines of business which possess real industrial worth and which offer an attractive future to the successful student. Are YOU interested in bettering your condition? Are you awake to the many opportunities which the automobile and tractor industry are holding out to you? Do you know that one out of every ten people in Los Angeles owns an auto? Do you know that the auto truck is helping to solve the problem of freight car shortage—with the advantage of SERVICE and ECONOMY? Do you know that the Tractor is supplanting horsepower on the farm and that in the Tractor lies America's hope of feeding the starving nations of the world? Do you know that it is only a matter of months until all of our first-class mail will be carried by airplane? Do you realize the value and possibilities of the GAS ENGINE which in a few short years has revolutionized the industrial world? If so you will take advantage of our superior facilities for training YOU for success in one of the following lines:

AUTO REPAIRING AND DRIVING.

AUTO ELECTRICITY.

TRACTIONEERING.

VULCANIZING.

MACHINE SHOP PRACTICE.

OXY-ACETYLENE WELDING.

We want you to visit our school, see our equipment and facilities for teaching, meet our instructors, and talk to our students.

NATIONAL AUTOMOTIVE SCHOOL.

A HAROLD L. ARNOLD USED CAR

is a standard piece of motor merchandise sold by a conservative motor merchant.
There is no gamble about buying
a Harold L. Arnold Used Car.
There is assurance of fair treatment, and the knowledge that you are buying a standard motor car at a low figure.
The same Arnold policy that has sold over ten million dollars worth of motor cars in the past will govern the sale and service policy on your car.
Come in and get acquainted, at any rate.

HUPMOBILES—
AND CHALMERS.
THE ONLY PLACE TO BUY GOOD USED HUPMOBILE AND CHALMERS CARS.
Cars that are rebuilt and refurnished and which in every respect are in A-1 shape; cars that will give as good service as those that are new we will sell at a saving of from 40 to 50 per cent.
Bear in mind that there is to be a further reduction in the output of automobiles. This means the used car market eventually will be combed for cars. It also means that along with new cars the used ones will bring higher prices. Now is the time to buy. In six months used cars will be scarce. See T. W. Taylor, used car dept.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY—

If you are going to purchase a used car, YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to see our stock of over SIXTY USED CARS. You will not be treating yourself right if you take it for granted that the first car you see is the one to buy. Compare our values, compare our GUARANTEE, compare our standing in the automobile industry with others and do not overlook the fact that we are NOT speculators in used cars. Then make your selection.

ALLOW US TO ASSIST YOU FREE.

We have handled all makes of used automobiles for TEN YEARS. We KNOW our business. You are not apt to know it like we do. We want you to know it, too. We want to be of assistance to you in any manner that you will permit us to. We will tell you the value of any car you may be interested in, regardless of who is offering it for sale. We will help you diagnose any trouble you may have with the car you now own and tell you how to repair it.

THIS IS FREE.

WHY?

Because we want to be of real assistance to the public. Because we want to know you and your friends. We want you to know us and we want you to know us as broad-minded business men and to learn that we are not merely a money-making institution. That we have been and will continue to be of real service to the community. When you call for information, you need not fear that this will obligate you, we will not endeavor to sell you a motor car; we will receive you cordially and we will assist you in every way possible.

POULTRY—PET STOCK— Supplies—For Sale, Exchange, Wanted

Poultry and Poultry Supplies.

FOR SALE—GERMAIN'S POULTRY COLUMN.

THIS IS THE LICE SEASON.

Practical poultry raisers are using Conkey's Lice Powder to free their birds of these pests. Lice simply can't live where this powder is used. For mites—use Conkey's Lice Liquid. Paint it on roosts, in nests and in all crevices.

USE CARBOLA FOR VERMIN.

Carbola is a white paint and disinfectant combined. It is twenty times stronger than carbolic acid. It makes everything bright, white and clean; will not flake or peel off; unexcelled for poultry houses—should be used inside and out.

PRESERVE WOOD WITH CARBOLINEUM.

One coating each year should be sufficient to keep wood in good condition. It is a germ killer and wood preserver combined. Use on poultry houses, sheds, garages, etc.

FOR THE MOULT.

Coulson's Condition Powder should be used right now to put fowls in condition for the moult. It tones up the system, regulates the digestive organs and causes fowls to assimilate a greater portion of their food. Feed during moult and GET MORE EGGS WHEN EGGS ARE HIGH.

FRENCH'S POULTRY MUSTARD.

If your hens do not have a high standard of vitality they will not lay eggs. French's Poultry Mustard produces MORE EGGS, and should be fed regularly throughout the year. It increases stamina and FERTILITY.

E Z EGG PRESERVER.
—the fresh egg equal.

Buy a crate of eggs now and preserve them by the E Z method. You can have fresh eggs in December—at half the price you would have to pay then. Eggs preserved by the E Z method can be boiled, poached and the whites beaten, just the same as with a fresh laid egg. This method is economical and simple—and leaves no objectionable odor or taste as is the case with most preservers.

2 VALUABLE BOOKS
For Poultry and Rabbit Raisers.

We are distributors for the famous WESTERN POULTRY BOOK, by Mrs. A. Basley. This is a practical book by a practical woman. It tells you all about the poultry raising business—from start to finish. We have a limited number of copies at 50 cents each. THE WESTERN RABBIT BOOK is the most complete work of its kind ever published. We have the new edition (enlarged and illustrated) for sale now at 50 cents. Get this book and learn how to make the most from your stock. It tells you how to feed, care for, house, prepare skins for market—also all about fur bearing rabbits.

FREE LECTURES ON INTERESTING THEMES.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA OFFERS INSTRUCTION IN AN INTERESTING FORM.

The University of California offers a series of free lectures, beginning tomorrow, at the Friday Morning Club House, No. 940 South Figueroa street, by members of the faculty of the summer session. The programme for the ensuing week will include the following:

Tomorrow, lecture by Morris B. Speare, United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, on "Some Old-fashioned Naval Battles and a Modern Comparison;" Wednesday, "Art and War," by Prof. Dugen Neuhaus.

Free lectures will be given at the summer session of the University of California, in the Los Angeles High School auditorium, as follows:

Tomorrow at 4 o'clock, "Attitude of the Public Toward the Blind," Miss Kate Foley, a blind instructor of the blind; Tuesday, at 11 o'clock, stereoptican lecture, "The Avocado and Other Semi-tropical Fruits in California," Ira J. Condit; 1 o'clock, "Literature and War," Prof. Ernest S. Bates, University of Oregon; 8 o'clock, community singing, led by Arthur Farwell, at Normal Hill Center.

Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, "Prevention of Blindness," Miss Foley; Thursday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, "War Aims of the British and Allied Labor Conferences," William W. Ghent; 2 o'clock, conference in methods of teaching and supervising of the fine and industrial arts in elementary and secondary schools; addresses and discussions, with Prof. H. R. Kniffen as chairman; 3 o'clock, reading of French poetic drama, Prof. Henri C. E. David; Friday, 9 a.m., "Playgrounds and Play Festivals in Rural Life," illustrated lecture by Prof. O. J. Kern; 8 p.m., community singing at Normal Hill Center.

IN BIG RANCH DEAL.

Pasadena Capitalist Sells Three Properties for Two and a Half Millions.

According to word received yesterday from San Francisco, C. D. Hillman, wealthy cattleman, whose home is "The Castle," Pasadena, has sold to Kay McKay of Portland and E. W. Johnson of Seattle, three California ranches, comprising 66,000 acres. The price received was $2,500,000.

The ranches sold are: Mare Island ranch, 7000 acres; La Estrallita ranch, near Paso Robles, 45,000 acres, and a 14,000-acre ranch near Fresno.

Mr. Hillman was stated also to have bought from Johnson and McKay the Long Valley ranch of 14,000 acres in Washoe county, Nev.

SHOCK PROVES FATAL.

Chandelier Maker, Badly Hurt in Fall from Car, Dies Before Recovering from Effect.

Jesse A. Lerch, 33 years old, a chandelier maker of No. 666 Summit avenue, Pasadena, whose legs were mangled by the wheels of a Pacific Electric car at Fourth and Main streets yesterday afternoon, died late last night at the Receiving Hospital from nervous shock.

Lerch, the police say, attempted to board the big red car, lost his balance and fell under the trucks. His left leg was horribly mangled and the right one was twisted and broken. Dr. Andrew S. Loebingier, who was called by the railway company to care for the young man, refused to permit an operation, until the nerve shock had passed, because of the man's low vitality. Death ensued before recovery from the shock.

COAST'S SUGAR SUPPLY IS HELPED BY HAWAI

Islands' Mills Working Day and Nig Transportation is Needed.

WITH the placing in operation of the plan for issuing certificates to manufacturers and large users of sugar, without which they cannot purchase sugar stocks, the question of the sugar supply for the Pacific Coast is of considerable importance. An exceedingly large part of the local sugar consumption is supplied through the beet sugar factories of California, to which is added the output of the Western Sugar Refining Company at Crockett, near San Francisco, where cane sugar from Hawaii is refined in large quantities.

Altogether nearly 500,000 tons of sugar come to mainland refineries from Hawaii every year, and just now every one of the great sugar mills on the islands, Maui, Oahu and Kauai, is working day and night grinding up the millions of tons of sugarcane that an army of over 50,000 men, mostly Japanese, are cutting day by day.

As a matter of fact, if it were not for the Hawaiian Islands there would be a much greater shortage of sugar on the Pacific Coast and in the West than at present; for, although the greater part of the sugar crop from the Territory of the Pacific goes through the Panama Canal and by rail to New York and Philadelphia, something like 100,000 tons is refined in the West, and remains here to help the local supply.

AWAIT TRANSPORTATION.

One fact that will bring home to everybody in these war times the value of the island Territory is that now, at the time we are inaugurating the sugar certificate system of buying, there are approximately 100,000,000 pounds of sugar there awaiting transportation to the Coast.

On one island alone of the namely the island of Hawaii, were recently awaiting 355,373 sacks of sugar, each taining 150 pounds, a total of 305,950 pounds of sugar on the island, where it is reported warehouses and docks at the plantations and at Hilo, the are filled almost to overflowing sugar moving very slowly nearly all the great steamers formerly moved the sugar now doing war work on the In fact, three of the American waiian steamers have been sunk in the war zone.

PINEAPPLE INDU

Another industry of Hawaii is being worked overtime is that of the pineapple for over 1,500,000 cases of ples are reported ordered government for the France and the training this country. Just at this great pineapple fields of on the windward side of of Oahu, and across the Honolulu, are the center of for the pineapples on this the island ripen months in of those in the great Wahiawa, the other side mountains. This enables apple canneries to throughout a large part of One can get a luscious pineapple there for 5 cents the time, while 10 cents the pick of real prize

There has been than once the proposition the raw sugar into Souther nia from Hawaii and utilize beet-sugar refineries for refineries, which could be asserted, with comparatively changes in equipment, keep them busy the entire stead of only for about three

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 20.—For the first time since the Marne battle, French cavalry played a part in the victorious advance. In the Champagne offensive of September, 1915, cavalry patrols were engaged, but their activities were hampered by the barbed wire of trench warfare. In Hindenburg's retreat they did useful service. Thursday they came back into their own, not as dismounted units, as which they have performed such gallant work in every battle since March, but in the true cavalry function, as scouts and skirmishers in the van of the advancing infantry.

At 12:30 the Boche defensive system in the southern part of the Aisne-Ourcq battle sector was so thoroughly mastered that the force of cavalry was able to cross the line. Amidst the cheers of the Poilus they overtook, the horsemen deployed at a sharp trot along the valleys running eastwards from the forest of Villers-Cotterets. On reaching the limit of the advance they spread out in a fan-shaped formation which swept forward irresistibly.

CITY'S STAND ON COPPE WIRE PERILS PROJ

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Lorin Handley, president of the Board of Public Works of Los Angeles, arrived in Washington yesterday to try to break the deadlock in the Capital Issues Committee regarding the Hill-street improvement, the various tunnel improvements and several other Los Angeles projects that are now pending. Practically all the Los Angeles projects are held up either as unnecessary to the winning of the war or for additional information.

One of the complicating features also is the attitude of the city of Los Angeles in not promptly placing at the disposal of the Federal government all the copper wire now in the hands of the city and yet to be delivered on its contracts with the makers. The War Industries Board has ordered a complete investigation, and as things stand now this board will oppose any effort on the part of Los Angeles to undertake municipal improvements when the city shows no inclination to cooperate with alacrity when the Federal government needs copper and copper wire so purposes.

Mr. Handley is gestion of Mayor if he cannot iron difficulties regarding improvements and if the War Industries a less opposing meantime the War Industries Board Angeles and it is Capital Issues quested to continue abeyance until the vestigator is in hand.

FINE WEST SIDE DWELLING SOLD.

LARGE CONSIDERATION PAID FOR KENMORE PLACE. OTHER TRANSFERS.

The Charles C. and S. J. Chapman Company, reports the following transfers in houses and lots.

To C. F. Buchanan, a recently completed sixteen-room, hollow tile residence, at No. 345 South Kenmore avenue, lot 80x150 feet, reported consideration, $45,000; to T. Spellacy, eleven-room residence, at No. 426 South Normandie avenue, $18,500; to W. W. Orcutt, lot of eighty-two feet frontage, southeast corner Fourth street and Normandie avenue, $7500; to Mrs. Nellie Pride, seventy-five-foot lot on Alexandria avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, $6300; to E. Bruce Dunn, seventy-five-foot lot at No. 330 South Kenmore avenue, $5500.

The firm has contracts to build a nine-room, hollow tile residence for Mrs. Pride and an eleven-room, hollow tile house for Mr. Dunn.

FLATS TRANSFERRED.

Two flat buildings at Nos. 1316 to 1330 South Western avenue have been transferred by Mary Werner to Mrs. E. Fried at a given consideration of $20,000. The structures are finished in Colonial style, and contain four five-room suites each. C. J. Hildesheim with W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., acted as agent in the transaction.

FINE APARTMENT CHANGES HANDS.

WESTLAKE DISTRICT HOLDING ACQUIRED BY A WOMAN INVESTOR.

One of the largest realty transactions of the year to date in Los Angeles was closed last week when F. E. Ruben transferred to Mrs. Gertrude Ozmun the Commodore apartment property at No. 341 South Alvarado street for a given consideration of $115,000. The deal was made through the agency of E. P. Bryan of Bryan & Bradford.

The apartment-house, which is to be renamed by the new owner the Ozmun, is a four-story brick structure of the most modern type and contains about 100 rooms. It was completed about ninety days ago and occupies a lot 75x150 feet in size. The property is near Westlake Park.

A small ranch near Long Beach, it is understood, was received by Mr. Ruben as part payment for the holding, the rest of the consideration being in cash. The purchaser recently came to Los Angeles from Santa Ana, signalizing her intention to make this city her home by selling her fine country place near the neighboring city for a reported consideration of $80,000.

No.666 North New Hampshire.

Apartments at No.341 South Alvarado

Represented in July realty transactions.

The Kenmore-avenue place is one of a number recently sold by the Charles C. and S. J. Chapman Company. The fine residence beside it was sold through Ralph O. Williams, with the J. B. Althouse Company. The R. C. Mitchell Company acted as agent in the sale of the Oxford house, while Charles Cooper, with Robert Marsh & Co., handled the transfer of the Victoria-drive home. The Wright-Callender-Andrews Company, represented by H. R. Kells, negotiated the sale of the big New Hampshire-street dwelling. The flats were transferred through C. J. Hildesheim, with W. I. Hollingsworth & Co.; the apartment-house through E. P. Bryan, of Bryan & Bradford.

LARGE MARKET FOR EAST SIDE.

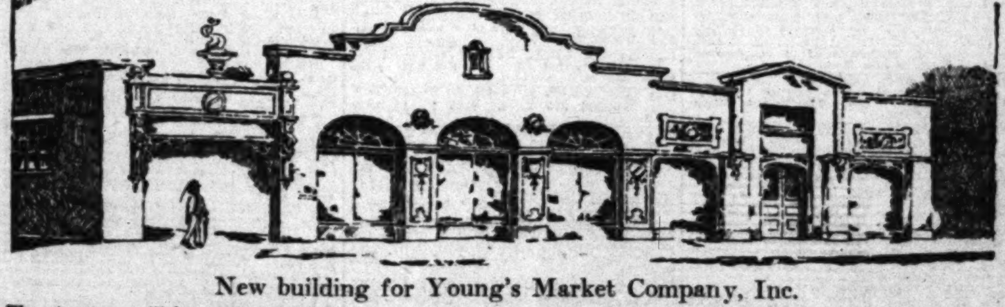
OLD-TIME CONCERN TO GREATLY INCREASE PRESENT FACILITIES.

The Wright - Callender - Andrews Company, through R. T. Merchant of its business leasing department, reports having leased for a syndicate, represented by the Title Insurance and Trust Company to the Young's Market Company, Inc., for a period of fifteen years, the premises at Nos. 447-49 and 51 Gladys avenue. The holding has a frontage of 100 feet and is 110 feet deep to an alley.

The lease calls for the immediate erection of a one-story brick building covering the entire lot and to be occupied by the lessee company as a bakery, fish market, and garage for its own cars. The total consideration involved is given at approximately $40,000.

The Young's Market Company was incorporated in 1906 and the business is being managed by five brothers, W. G. Young being president and P. M. Young secretary-treasurer. The concern has been in business over thirty years in Los Angeles and does a wholesale as well as a retail business. The wholesale business is located on Gladys avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets and adjoins the site of the present lease. The company also has seven stores in different parts of the business district, dealing in lard, lard substitutes, cooking fats, butter, cheese, beef, fresh and cured pork, mutton, poultry, eggs, fish, fruit and vegetables.

In discussing the remarkable growth of the business, P. M. Young states that the firm's wholesale and retail business at this time amounts to $200,000 a month, or, nearly two and a half millions a year.



New building for Young's Market Company, Inc.

The structure will be erected as the result of a lease just closed through the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company, represented by R. T. Merchant of its business leasing department.

ON SOUTH OXFORD.

Former Ohio Woman Buys West Side Residence—Bungalow Sales are Reported.

The R. C. Mitchell Company reports the sale of a ten-room residence, with a lot 60x150 feet in size, at No. 539 South Oxford avenue, for Bishop R. G. Waterhouse of Emory, Va., to Mrs. J. M. Shelley, formerly of Cincinnati. The consideration is given at $12,500, Bishop Waterhouse accepting as part payment a residence property in Cincinnati, the balance being paid in cash.

The same company also reports the sale, through Robert W. Pratt of the house and lot department, of the following properties: For E. H. Hancock to Mrs. Elizabeth Alisky, five-room bungalow at No. 1734 North Berendo lot 50x135 feet, $4000; to David Bruce for George T. Mahanna, six-room bungalow, No. 110 South Mariposa, lot 50x120 feet, $5000; to Mr. Hollingsworth, for M. R. Mason, six-room Swiss chalet, No. 1562 Riverdale drive, Glendale, lot 50x184 feet, $4000.

An Exceptional Value in a White Plaster
WILSHIRE HOME
Reduced from $25,000 to $20,000

Of Italian Renaissance architecture, this beautiful home stands on a high, sightly corner on one of the best streets in the entire Wilshire district. Built by the owner for a home, the above sacrifice price is away below its actual cost when labor and materials were 50 to 100 per cent. cheaper than at present. We cannot adequately describe the delightful features of this house, but without a doubt it is the most artistic and well-arranged home we have ever offered for sale. There are ten rooms, two sleeping porches and three baths. The broad entrance hall, 15x30 feet, opens onto a secluded patio, charming with its open fireplace, potted plants and other greenery. The living-room, 20x25 feet, is finished in selected woods. Splendidly lighted library and study with shelves for innumerable books. A cheery breakfast-room opening onto the patio. Dining-room, 20x20 feet, in old ivory; Butler's pantry, large kitchen, and two rooms with bath for servants, complete the first floor plan. Upstairs are three very pleasant sleeping-rooms, one being exceptionally large; two dressing-rooms, two sleeping porches and two baths, one of which is equipped with shower. Decorated throughout most artistically, and with lighting fixtures which carry out the scheme of decoration. The garden is lovely, terraced to the street and beautifully landscaped. A profusion of choice shrubs and trees. If you want a fine value in a home which is decidedly out of the ordinary, let us show you this. By appointment only.

11-ROOM WHITE PLASTERED RESIDENCE, TILED ROOF, MAHOGANY AND OAK FINISH, 3 BATHS, DOUBLE GARAGE, LOT 60x150.

ABSOLUTELY WORTH $20,000, in the present market, but the owner is a widow having no further use for the house and MUST SELL AT ONCE. The finish in this home is magnificent, and better than in most any $25,000 homes you can find today. Where mahogany has been used it is finest tabasco (furniture mahogany) and has been hand rubbed to a piano finish. The DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY walls are paneled. The wall coverings and lighting fixtures are of exceptional quality and design.

The block in which this property is located is built up solid with elegant homes, and is considered one of the show spots of the exclusive Wilshire district. The street is paved, the sewer in, both paid for. Be prompt to make arrangements to inspect this ideal home place. You will find it exactly as represented.

NEW WILSHIRE MANSION,
$15,000 BELOW VALUE.

FOR $15,000 LESS THAN ACTUAL COST, ONE OF WILSHIRE'S FINEST WHITE PLASTER HOMES. 15 ROOMS. FIVE TILED BATHS. LOT 105x180. ONLY ½ BLOCK NORTH OF WILSHIRE BOULEVARD.

You can imagine that this home has innumerable "features," but chief among them is the spacious center hall and grand stairway. The dining-room walls and ceiling are paneled in finest Tabasco mahogany. Two-story garage, with man's quarters and laundry.

THIS REMARKABLE HOME CAN BE BOUGHT FOR $45,000. ALL OR PART CASH. SHOWN BY APPOINTMENT ONLY UPON PERSONAL APPLICATION TO THE UNDERSIGNED.

U. S. BANKRUPTCY COURT.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

On Thursday, July 25th, at 10:00 a.m., the undersigned will report a sale to the Bankruptcy Court, 832 H. W. Hellman Bldg., of 1637 E. Jefferson street, known as Lot 3, of Tract 1807, Map Book 20, Page 156 of Maps, at a figure to net the estate $1400.00. There is a $1000.00 mortgage on this property that can remain and be assumed as part of the purchase price.

The lot is near the corner of Morgan and Jefferson, and is improved by a small double bungalow. It is very close to the industrial activities in the southeast part of Los Angeles, and also handy for persons employed in the shipyard and other harbor developments.

A conservative figure on this property would be from $1800.00 to $2000.00. The above Return of Sale offers a splendid opportunity for a purchaser to invest a few hundred for the equity and keep the property as an income producer or else to resell at a larger figure on terms.

Address Mr. Sampsell, of my office, if interested in further particulars.

WM. H. MOORE, JR., Trustee.
704 Higgins Bldg. 10112. Main 4622.

FOR SALE—
INVEST YOUR MONEY
WHERE IT IS SAFE.

Buy Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. There is also no safer or more profitable investment now than a home. Especially if it is a home with a bit of land where you can raise your own table supplies. You can have this kind of a home for the same money you pay for rent. Put the money that you give each month to some prosperous landlord back into your own pocket. See one of Los Angeles' most beautiful suburban districts, Sunnyside Garden Acres Addition. Free excursions leave our office every TUESDAY, THURSDAY & SATURDAY at 10 a.m. Here you can buy a cosy, modern home for as little as $2000, small initial payment and $20 a month, which covers interest, insurance, taxes, etc. Don't wait another day—come with us on one of our next excursions and size the proposition up for yourself. EMIL FIRTH, 346 S. Broadway. 60167; Main 2543. Branch office, 129 E. Ocean ave., Long Beach.

FOR EXCHANGE—

HOW TO GET FULL VALUE
FOR YOUR PROPERTY
REGARDLESS OF WHERE LOCATED,
AND YOU PAY NO COMMISSION.

Are you tired chasing rainbow trades? Are you disgusted looking at misrepresented and unreasonably inflated properties? Our proposition will appeal to you. Listen to these facts—The great industrial development of Los Angeles and Los Angeles Harbor is just starting. $100,000,000 to be spent for shipbuilding alone within the next year—which is only one of many new industries. Some people do not see the big things now taking place right before their eyes. Look at the new $10,000,000 terminal district just completed in Los Angeles.

Do you know that a great new boulevard called the Harbor Freight Highway is to be built connecting the terminals in Los Angeles with the harbor? The specifications are for 5 inches of granite and 8 inches of concrete—making it the best-built highway in Southern California, and heavy enough to stand up under the army of auto trucks that will ply between the city and harbor. The crushed granite is already in as far south as Compton.

We have a subdivision between Compton and Los Angeles that fronts for nearly a mile on this great new highway. Within 1 block of our subdivision also runs 3 main lines of the Pacific Electric, being—San Pedro line, Long Beach line, and Newport line. Think what such frequent and rapid electric service means. We also have the Southern Pacific steam road. That's not all—a new avenue has recently been opened connecting the Long Beach Blvd. and Compton Blvd., and crossing the new Harbor Freight Blvd. at our subdivision. Think what such a LOCATION and TRANSPORTATION facilities mean for the future development of our tract. Compare ours with any other subdivision that you know. Look ahead a few years and see what it means. Everything to insure success—boulevards, 3 electric lines and a steam road. Can you beat it?

Our subdivision is divided into acres, half-acres, residence lots, business lots and factory sites. Predevelopment ground floor prices for lots $600 up, half-acres for $1200. All level, high ground, ideal home sites with possibilities of great advance in values. Harbor employees save time and fare by living there. Also only 22 minutes from heart of business district of Los Angeles.

For a limited time we can accept other real estate at its full value, regardless of where located—for part or full payment of any tract or tracts you may select in our subdivision. This is an unusual opportunity to pay with the property that you now own just the same as if you paid cash—for real estate that may increase many times in value.

Write us today a complete description of your real estate, regardless of where it is located. Tell us its fair value and state if clear or incumbered. We will then send you further information and arrange to show you this subdivision. We can build for you if desired, or you may have one of our new bungalows just being completed. Better write right now before you forget it. We charge no commission. THE FARM AND HOME CO., Suite 211-12-13 Long Beach Bank Bldg., Long Beach, Cal.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling with large and expensive machines. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "Square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 feet to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

COTTON RISES, FALLS, RISES; LITTLE DOING.

WEEK-END LASSITUDE WITH CONFLICTING WEATHER REPORTS, CAUSE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—General business in cotton futures was decidedly small this morning, hence prices fluctuated erratically as orders of moderate size appeared on either side. At the outset a slightly firmer feeling prevailed, prices being 2 to 10 points higher, with July at 28.70, October at 25.45, December, 24.83, and January, 24.65. Other deliveries were neglected. This slight rise was ascribed largely to the fact that the official weather map showed no relief for the droughty sections of Texas, the only precipitation reported in that State being .32 inch at San Antonio and .14 at Galveston.

Almost immediately there was an abrupt reversal, prices falling 25 to 50 points in a few minutes. Scattered selling from New Orleans, the South, Liverpool and commission houses found the market without support, athough a little demand was in evidence from local spot and commission firms. Selling was prompted partly by the reports of rainfall in the eastern belt. There were numerous good rains in South Carolina, the heaviest being 2.68 inch at Charleston and 1.02 inch at Columbia. Wilmington, N. C., reported 1.62 inches and there were numerous lighter rains in that State, as well as in Georgia, and some around Memphis.

Although they had been generally expected, the week-end statistics were also a selling stimulus. Cotton brought into sight this week was placed at 35,925 bales against 22,680 last week and 35,650 a year ago. The total this season is 11,816,345 bales, against 12,698,116 in 1917 and 12,593,251 in 1916. Spinners' takings were small, only 104,056 bales, against 112,738 last week and 153,692 a year ago. The season's total is 11,215,046 bales, against 13,219,118 last year and 13,420,445 two years ago. The decrease in the American visible was only 68,131 bales, against 90,058 last week and 118,042 a year ago. This makes the American supply 2,231,115 bales, against 1,173,232 a year ago. The general supply decreased 84,137 bales, against 92,058 last week and 82,042 a year ago. This leaves the general total 3,245,115 bales, against 3,045,232 a year ago.

Following this break there was a rally of 17 at 26 points. October rose from 25.02 to 25.26; December from 24.33 to 24.59, and January from 24.23 to 24.40. Buying was prompted partly by the forecast for fair and warmer weather west of the Mississippi. Fair and warmer weather was also forecast for North Carolina, with partly cloudy and probably showers in South Carolina.

Stocks and Bonds.

SPECIALTIES TAKE BULK OF WEEK-END TURNOVERS.

Steels Irregular and Coppers, Motors and Oils Only Occasionally Quoted.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—Trading in stocks today scarcely warranted extended description, transactions just about totaling 140,000 shares. Of this meager turnover specialties under professional direction contributed more than their usual proportion.

Such speculative issues as Sumatra Tobacco and Industrial Alcohol were lifted 3 to 4 points, Tobacco Products and Distillers, 1 to 1½ and the local transactions about a point each. United States Steel rose the better part of a point at one time, but surrendered all its advantage at the end. Other steels were equally irregular and coppers, motors and oils were only occasionally quoted. Rails were again ignored, except for the moderate strength and activity of which widely divergent issues as New Haven and Atlantic Coast Line and Pacific Mail was the only member of the shipping group to display an imitation at an advance of 1½ points.

The day's news was of the customary week-end character including the more conservative reviews of the mercantile agencies which stressed the dominance of "war business."

Noteworthy changes in the bank statement included a decrease of $178,000,000 in actual loans and discounts, which offset by almost threefold the preceding week's increase, and a further expansion of about $18,000,000 in actual reserves.

Bonds were steady on a minimum of operations. Total sales (par value) aggregated $1,735,000.

United States bonds, old issues, were unchanged on call for the week.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEWS.

War news was the paramount feature in this week's more active securities market, taking precedence over further corporate financing, stiffer money tendencies and related factors.

The brilliant exploits of the American forces in their counter-attacks and the general strengthening of the Allied line along the western front were hailed with lively satisfaction as indicating a turn in the tide.

Pools were prominent in many specialties, their bullish operations being accelerated by reports of the placing of further large government contracts.

United States Steel made a substantial gain, only part of which was retained because of the many rumors current regarding dividend action at the forthcoming meeting of the directors.

Oils, motors, leathers and rubbers were firmer in connection with conferences now in progress with the War Industries Board regarding new price schedules, and shippings moved to higher level under guidance of marine preferred.

Rails were virtually unchanged, that division again being at low ebb. Reductions in the dividends of several minor roads resulted from orders issued by the Washington authorities.

Bank clearings continued to reflect prosperous business conditions and this country's loans to its Allies were increased to almost $6,400,000,000 by further credits to Italy and Belgium.

The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $74,406,620 reserves in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $18,144,150 from last week.

Mercantile paper unchanged. Sterling, unchanged. Bar silver and Mexican dollars, unchanged.

CUDAHY NOTES EXCITE BOND HOUSE INTEREST.

WAR AND WARM WEATHER CAUSES DULLNESS ON THE LOCAL EXCHANGE.

Plenty of the right kind of war news plus an abundance of warm weather that made traders, brokers and investors generally long for a cool spot somewhere away from the asphalt resulted in a dull session on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, few sales of consequence being made during the usual Saturday half-session.

Los Angeles bond houses are preparing to participate in an offering of $10,000,000 five-year 7 per cent. notes to be issued by the Cudahy Packing Company. It is expected that the company will sell the notes to the public at 98 or on a basis of approximately 7½ per cent.

Bonds will be offered at public sale by three school districts tomorrow. The largest, of $20,000, is to be awarded by the Compton High School district. The bonds are of $1000 denomination and bear interest at 5 per cent. The Tierra Bonita district will offer $5000 of 5½s and the Sumerset district will sell $8000 5s in denominations of $500 each.

Bond houses in Los Angeles and San Francisco are taking interest in these offerings, hoping the prices offered will give some indication of the condition of the market.

A letter was received by Southern California chairmen in the Liberty Bond organizations from James K. Lynch, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco, concerning the activities of stock salesmen and promoters in relation to Liberty Bond holders. Mr. Lynch said:

"There has been reported to us a considerable activity by stock salesmen representing companies whose securities are worthless, in efforts to exchange the stocks they are issuing for Liberty Bonds.

"If any such cases come to your notice please notify me promptly."

LIQUIDATION SENDS CORN DOWN; OATS, TOO

WAR NEWS AND PERFECT WEATHER GIVES BEARISH SENTIMENT TO MARKET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 20.—Drastic liquidation sent the corn market down again today until prices were off about 15 cents a bushel compared with the high point before the Franco-American counter-offensive began. The close was nervous, 1 to 2⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, with August 1.50⅝ to 1.50⅞ and September 1 to 1⅝ cents off at 1.51⅞ to 1.52. Oats lost ⅜ to ⅞ cents net. In provisions the outcome ranged from 2 cents decline to 15 cents advance.

Bearish sentiment due to war news received further impetus from the perfect weather prevailing throughout the corn belt and also from continued liberal arrivals at primary centers.

Oats declined with corn, but the selling was of only a scattered character.

Strength in the hog market gave some firmness to provisions. Advances, however, were checked by the bearish action of grain.

Corn smashed down in value this week, influenced to a great extent by news from France. Compared with a week ago, the market this morning was 7¾ to 9¾ cents net lower. Oats were down ⅞ a cent to 1⅝ cents and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to 50 cents advance.

By far the biggest downward sweep of corn prices came after the Allies had successfully demonstrated power to attack on a grand scale. Where, before offerings had been light, general selling by all classes of traders developed and the only reactions were from profit taking by shorts. Soaking rains and big receipts had done much beforehand to undermine the bulls and so likewise had President Wilson's veto of the bill to enhance the price of wheat. The finish of the wheat harvest in the Southwest and the fact that wheat premiums over the government guaranteed minimum were almost a thing of the past tended also to pull down corn.

Wet weather delays to cutting and threshing kept the oats market relatively steady. Bullish crop reports from North Dakota and Canada were also effective in minimizing pressure to sell. Provisions were upheld largely by reports that government orders for supplies soon would be placed on a liberal scale.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Cash sales: Corn, No. 3 yellow, 1.70@1.75; No. 3 yellow, 1.60@1.70; No. 4 yellow, 1.50@1.55. Rye, No. 2, 1.70@1.71. Barley, 1.10@1.15. Timothy, 5.00@7.50. Clover nominal.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Close: Corn, August, 1.50⅝; September, 1.51⅞. Oats, August, 69⅞; September, 68⅝. Pork, July, 45.40; September, 45.45. Lard, July, 26.12; September, 26.20. Ribs, July, 24.45; September, 24.75.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Wheat, spot, steady; No. 2 red, 2.35, track New York, export, to arrive. Corn, spot, easy; fresh shelled, No. 2 yellow, 1.95⅝, and No. 3 yellow, 1.85⅝, cost and freight New York. Oats, spot, weak; standard, 86½@87.

"TENNESSEE" FACTS
The real facts about the great Chloride mine now owned by the SCHUYLKILL MINING COMPANY will open the eyes of the mining world.
"The millheads of all the ore run by the "Tennessee" people in 1917 were over $30 (per ton,) based on our most careful estimate."
Antiquated steam machinery has been replaced with the most modern electrical equipment, and a modern 250-ton mill is to be installed from funds now being provided. Possible dividends will prove exceedingly interesting to those who become stockholders now. Particulars upon request.

THAT DOGGONE CARBURETOR AND ITS VARIOUS TROUBLES.

BY BARNEY OLDFIELD.

"DON'T forget the carburetor," is mighty good working advice, for if you do, rest assured that the interesting little instrument will give you cause to remember it for the rest of your natural life. The trouble with not knowing the carburetor intimately is that when trouble does come, it comes suddenly, without the slightest warning and it certainly leaves you flat on your back.

There are three fundamental causes of carburetion trouble. One is the fuel, the second is the fuel feed and the third is the carburetor. When trouble does occur, it is necessary to find out what the prime cause is and remedy the defect whatever it may be.

Bear in mind that the carburetor is simply an instrument designed to mix a finely sprayed or atomized gasoline mist with air in proportions calculated to give the highest explosive qualities. The modern gasoline engine will handle mixtures ranging from six parts air to one of gasoline, up to fourteen of air to one of gasoline. Naturally, if the carburetor for any reason is not giving a properly-proportioned mixture, the action of the engine is going to be faulty. If the mixture is bad enough, it may even result in stopping the engine completely.

One of the symptoms of carburetor trouble is misfiring, though this may be caused also by ignition failure. In cases of misfiring, a simple adjustment of the carburetor to admit more air or more gas as the case may be, will cure the trouble if it is due to incorrect carburetion. In making adjustments for this trouble, the obvious method is to change the air adjustment, so as to admit more air. If the trouble shows signs of abatement, you are on the right track; if not, try increasing the gasoline contents of the mixture. In cases where there are air leaks around the inlet manifold, most present-day carburetors have a wide enough range of adjustment to compensate even for this.

It frequently happens that adjustments made on the carburetor while the engine is idling, do not work out under actual service conditions. When the engine is called upon to pull, the adjustment is not satisfactory, and a fresh adjustment must be made. Also after an adjustment has been made, it should be given a fair chance to prove itself before being discarded as inefficient. In nonadjustable carburetors conditions of this sort are caused by outside conditions. Some carburetors are designed with high and low speed adjustments and in this case the high speed adjustment should be made when the engine is turning over fast, even though the car is not in motion. All adjustments should be made while the engine is hot, to allow for the expansion of metal when it is heated, as it always is when the car is running. The correct adjustment for the carburetor has been found in the one that permits the fastest engine speed at a given throttle opening. If the throttle is open one fifth of its maximum opening, the carburetor should be adjusted until it reaches the maximum speed possible without further opening of the throttle.

The chief characteristic by which carburetion trouble may be identified is the fact that it attacks all the cylinders or any of them without discrimination. Ignition trouble, on the other hand, will be confined to one or two cylinders to the exclusion of the others.

In cars employing the pressure system of fuel feed, any difference from the correct normal pressure will produce misfiring. When the float of the vacuum system sticks or is punctured, the same condition is produced. Obstructions in the fuel line that prevent the gasoline's reaching the float bowl of the carburetor, naturally produce missing and similar ills. The strainers that are included in the fuel line of practically all systems today, are frequent sources of this trouble. They should be taken out and cleared at intervals, so that no obstruction of the fuel flow may be caused by collections of foreign matter in the screen meshes.

In the older cars, where the inlet manifolds were commonly built long, there was much trouble for condensation of the fuel on its way from the carburetor to the cylinder. The fuel mixture striking cold walls of the long, exposed manifold, condensed before it reached the cylinder. The owner investigating the trouble found the liquid gasoline dropping from the manifold and thought that the carburetor was leaking. There are still many of the vintage of cars with those old-type manifolds in service, so that mention of this fact may be helpful to owners of vehicles of that sort. Another cause of misfiring is found in the cover of the float bowl, which may be loose.

Most car owners will not have to be told that carburetion troubles are always worse in cold weather. They know that motor fuel, containing what is a type of oil, is heavier in cold weather than in warm, just as molasses is. Being heavier, the vacuum in the cylinders finds difficulty in lifting the fuel to the combustion chamber. The usual cure is to make the mixture richer than usual for starting purposes, in the hope that enough of the volatile elements of the mixture will get to the combustion chamber to cause an explosion and turn the engine over. This is the reason for the usual procedure of shutting off the air at the start and priming the cylinders with raw gasoline directly administered through the petcocks. After the engine has started the choker, the valve controlling the air supply should be left on only for a few minutes, until the engine has taken hold and is running smoothly, when it should be opened by degrees. Incidentally where the car is being operated in a cold climate, the owner should always install some device for heating the air, so that the carburetor is supplied with warmed air for conversion into the fuel mixture. In cars where there is no provision made for shutting off the cold air intake, some method of closing off the cold air inrush, should be fitted. Satisfactory operation in cold weather with our present grade of gasoline, cannot be obtained without using heated or warmed air instead of the arctic ozone of our winter season.

Whenever carburetion trouble develops the car owner should start at one end of the system and work along to the other end methodically, until by process of elimination he discovers the cause of the trouble. Begin with the tank and make sure that there is fuel in it. Next try the vacuum tank and the carburetor. In the vacuum tank open the drain. In the carburetor pull up the float control. If the fuel flows, it may be assumed that there is no actual stoppage. Then the engine should be started and investigation should proceed as suggested above.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Barney Oldfield—I am having trouble with my Maxwell.

In filling my battery I find that three cells to the left take twice as much water as the other three. All six cells show the same gravity of around 1250. What is the cause of this?

My brakes are very loose when no one is on the back seat, but when I tighten up the brakes and put a load on the rear they drag. If I leave them loose, with a load they are about right. What is the remedy for this?

I am averaging only fourteen to fifteen miles per gallon of gas, whereas last summer I got twenty-four, while some other owners got thirty. My carburetor seems wet with gasoline all the time, but does not leak enough to drop off. My car runs better this year than last; the engine does not heat; the compression is good; valves recently reground and engine clean. I had trouble with my carburetor flooding and took it apart, grinding the valve and lowering the float. Do you think that if I would open the door of the hot-air stove and let in cold air with the hot it would help?

C. M., Parkesburg, Pa.

There is nothing wrong when three of the cells require more water than the others.

Take up your brakes at the fork at the brake drums, instead of on the brake rods, and your trouble will vanish.

Yes. Give it all the cold air you can now. That will help, but I imagine that you are losing a lot of gas through leakage, and maladjustment of the float.

Barney Oldfield: I have a Ford which has been running O.K. until recently. Whenever I take out the plugs I find them oily and the engine occasionally skips. I got new valves. I recently removed the cylinder head for grinding the valves and cleaning carbon. It took six hours to grind three valves and then they were not all smooth. Please advise if valves will seat properly if there is a shiny, thread-like ring around them in the center and also how long should it take to grind a Ford valve.

Can an amateur put new piston rings on? Please advise me on the subject. Also what is the best leak-proof ring on the market?

INTERESTED READER, Buffalo.

The length of time required to properly grind a set of valves depends on the condition of the valve seats and face and how fast you work. Four hours is good time. When starting use a coarse compound and finish with a fine compound. Both seat and face must have an even gray color with no black spots or rings.

It takes an experienced man to properly fit rings. The ring is slipped over the piston in three skids made of an old saw blade. The ring must be lapped on a level plate, sprinkled with emery dust and oil, in case it is too wide for the groove. The ring must fit the groove perfectly and have no up and down play. The end of the ring must have about 1-32 clearance when in the cylinder.

I cannot pick out any one ring as the best on the market. There are many good rings, such as the Burd, Leak-proof, Splitdorf, etc.

If you can get some one to properly fit ordinary diagonally split rings you will not have any trouble, but under any conditions you will notice an improvement with one patent ring per piston.

JOE PIPAL TO HELP WIN WAR.

Joe Pipal, former Occidental coach and with the Oregon Aggies for several seasons past, has decided to stay with the physical training division of the Y.M.C.A. for the duration of the war. Pipal originally signed up to give one summer of instruction at Camp Kearny, but feels that the type of work which he is engaged in is so useful that it is his plain duty to throw up his job with Oregon Agricultural College. He will handle football at Camp Kearny next season.

"I have decided to stay in the 'Big Game' to the finish," Pipal said in a letter received here yesterday. "I would feel like a slacker to hie myself back to Corvallis and draw a good salary for handling about fifty men when in the Y. work directly or indirectly I have a chance to serve 25,000 or 30,000 men."

A Most Marvelous Success.

EXPERT'S VIEW OF THE LIBERTY MOTOR AND THE LIBERTY PLANE.

The Motor is Without Any Question the Greatest Thing of Its Kind Ever Devised, and the Plane is Faster than European Scouts.

BY E. LEROY PELLETIER,
In the Detroit "Motor News."

WHEN I hear people loosely discussing what are so popularly called nowadays "nonessential industries," I confess I become impatient almost to the point of anger. Such people cannot have any conception of the tremendous work the automobile industry is doing for your Uncle Sam in the making of munitions, guns, tractors, trucks and airplanes, not to mention the thousand and one other things. No other industry in America is doing so much outside its regular sphere as is the automobile industry.

Why, our shipbuilding programme would be impossible without the assistance of the automobile factories. If the data could be gathered together, the volume of business being done by the automobile industry in war work would almost equal that of its own legitimate line of manufacturing automobiles. I would assume, of course, that there would be included in that category makers of parts and accessories who are now bending every energy to make such munitions and war necessaries as their plants are adapted to do.

The aircraft programme would be absolutely impossible but for the experience gained by automobile engineers and the highly-specialized equipment that has been developed in this industry. And while there has been a lot of criticism by people who do not know, I want to assure you, as one who does know, that our aircraft programme is not only immense, but that it is also well under way.

Having had exceptional opportunities to investigate this on my own hook; knowing, as I do, and intimately, all the engineers who were engaged in the design and almost all those who have charge of the production; having spent a good deal of time going into the matter, although I started in a spirit of skepticism and frank criticism, I finished 100 per cent. enthusiast on the Liberty airplane and the entire programme. Having seen the motor from the original designs to the perfected machine and having seen the airplane built from the ground up and then gone in it myself from the ground up to some 15,000 feet, I am here to say that it is the greatest airplane ever built.

Of course, some mistakes were made in the beginning. Of course, some changes had to be made in the designs. But, when you consider that a change of a specification of one-thousandth of an inch does call for a new blueprint, it is not so amazing that the total of those changes ran into the hundreds. Such a statement is amazing only to the tyro. To anyone who has been around automobile designing rooms for several years, the matter carries little of significance.

Of course, there have been delays, too—in a matter so serious as this it was to be anticipated that there would be differences of opinion among the engineers and that some of those differences could only be settled by actual experiment and test. But the big outstanding fact is that, while we are behind time about ninety days, according to our own estimates, we are a year ahead of any estimate that any European engineers could or did lay down for us.

One criticism that has been freely made is that we should have made by hand a number of types of European airplanes that were already in use. Well, the answer is—we did. A number of factories in this country have, for a year ar two past, been making engines and other parts of several types of airplanes—Rolls-Royce, Gnome, Hispano-Suiza, Fiats, etc., etc. I am informed that all magnetos for all the twelve-cylinder Fiats are made in America.

But all the criticism that our own programme should have included any such expediency as hand-made stuff will not hold water for a minute. Not that we have not as many skilled machinists in this country as in any other. I think a canvass would show that we have as many as England and Germany put together. But we do not depend upon skilled machinists in this country, but on skilled machines. We use the skilled machinist to make the skilled machine and thereby multiply his own efficiency by hundreds of thousands.

The time it took to "tool up" for this job to test out the job and to perfect it to the point where it now is was time well spent and in four months from today we will be vastly farther ahead than we could possibly have been by any other method. I am not permitted to state how many are being shipped per day now, but if I could you would feel easy about the aircraft programme.

And Detroit is just beginning to do her part. We have been making the motors here, but we have just now begun manufacturing and assembling airplanes and testing them out. Within a few weeks you will see the air full of airplanes over Detroit and you will realize that someone has been working, and working mighty fast, during the very time that some of the rest of us were busying ourselves mostly with criticism! I was one of the latter, so I ought to know.

Now, just a few facts about the Liberty airplane. The motor develops more than 100 horse power more than any other motor in the world. It has a longer life of service, notwithstanding the fact that it is the lightest motor in the world in proportion to its power. At 1650 revolutions per minute it has developed more than 450 horse power—and it weighs 802 pounds. When you consider that the best German motor, the Mercedes (from which, by the way, the most important part of this motor was derived,) weighs six pounds per horse power, and that the average French, English and Italian motors weigh three to four pounds per horse power, you will realize what an amazing advance has been made by American engineers to produce this motor, which weighs something like one and three-fourths pounds per horse power only.

The Liberty airplane is the most practical of all forms because it is a two-seated combination battle plane, reconnaissance plane and bombing plane. It carries two men, four machine guns, ten bombs, wireless outfit and photographic outfit. And with this load it is still as fast as any of the single-seated fighting machines about which you hear so much in the newspapers, but which are, in fact, the most inefficient of all types.

The single-seated plane can do no valuable reconnaissance work, can shoot only through fixed guns, and therefore must point itself at the object in order to be effective, can take no photographs, and if the operator is seriously wounded he is certain to be lost, together with $5000 worth of machine. The single-seater was devised for the purpose of giving police protection to the slower battle and bombing planes made in Europe.

It must be remembered that European engineers stated it was impossible to build two-seated planes faster than they had, because it was impracticable to build motors of greater power than they were building. Well, we did just that. We built a motor of 100 horse power more, and therefore a plane of such speed that TWENTY THOUSAND owners call it a perfected mechanism—the Packard Twin Six power plant.

TWIN SIX QUALITY is revealed when you lift the hood. Clean, symmetrical lines give a true picture of simple and sound design. That outward beauty of Packard workmanship is a symbol of intrinsic worth. Every detail a hall-mark of Packard performance—smoothness of action, range of ability, economy of tires and low cost of upkeep.

Owners call the Twin Six the embodiment of eager power under perfect control. Its war-time utility is expressed in terms of transportation—first-class travel over any road. Its war-time economy proved by its successful use of distillate as a fuel.

Automobile Men See Tough Luck Ahead for Kaiser Bill in Future.

Painful.

KAISER HAS A SHADY FUTURE.

Motor Men are Very Hot on His Shadow.

Liberty Motor a Hit Everywhere Shown.

Big Plants Break Record in War Work.

"America certainly is going to make it hot for the Kaiser," says O. B. Henderson, Los Angeles branch manager for the Willys-Overland Pacific Company, who has just returned from a tour of eastern automobile munitions and airplane manufacturing centers.

On account of his official connection with the automobile industry, Mr. Henderson was able to obtain much first-hand information regarding the progress of that part of the government's war preparation which is being done by automobile manufacturers. Henderson had access to some twenty or thirty of the largest factories making munitions, airplane motors, etc. As a result, he is most optimistic regarding the ultimate outcome of the war.

"The Liberty motor," says Henderson, "is an unqualified success. It has been thoroughly tested and approved by British and French engineers, who declare it to be superior to the best German airplane motors. The British and French governments have placed large contracts for Liberty motors with the American firms. One automobile company has already delivered to the United States government over 1200 Liberty motors. Seven or eight other companies are also building Liberty motors and have now speeded up the production to a quantity basis. One company is now turning out fifty of these motors a day. The Curtiss plant, of which John H. Willys is president, delivered its first order of 3000 training motors to the government a month ahead of contract time. In the Willys-Overland Toledo, Elmira, Buffalo and Toronto plants, $50,000,000 worth of government contracts are being rushed to completion. All of this work is being done under close government supervision.

"Many women are now being employed in the factories. The Willys-Overland Company now has on its pay roll about 1500 women who are doing mechanical work. They wear bloomer overalls and work right along with the men, but are not called upon to perform heavy operations. The women are being employed to take the places of men who have enlisted in the fighting forces of Uncle Sam.

"A large shell factory is now being constructed in the midst of other Willys-Overland buildings. The plant will be strictly on a government footing and every possible precaution is being taken to prevent admission of spies or suspicious characters to any of the buildings in which war contracts are being filled."

ENCLOSED MODEL MAKES REAL HIT.

When W. D. Dunham, the Ford agent on West Seventh street, sold a Ford sedan to an enthusiastic sedan prospect recently there was nothing to indicate that it would prove at all out of the ordinary. It did prove so, however, in this way, that this satisfied customer has brought in four different Ford owners whom he had converted to the feasability of the sedan for all-year and all-round use and who in turn became owners of inclosed cars.

Roads are Splendid.

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK NOT DIFFICULT TO REACH.

RECENT improvements to the roads have made Sequoia Park, a locality noted for its big trees and wonderful scenery, more accessible to motorists than ever before. The improvements have been made in the vicinity of Three Rivers in Tulare county and a party of Los Angeles motorists who returned from there a few days ago after making the trip in a Chandler Six touring car stated that the journey is far less difficult than the Yosemite Valley trip and the reward equally as worth while from the standpoint of admirers of nature.

Visalia is the gateway city to the park. At Visalia the motorist leaves the State highway, but is hardly aware of the fact, for Tulare county has plunged into the solution of its roads problem on an extensive scale, and is constructing paved concrete highways in every direction. A ten-mile stretch of highway leads to Exeter. From that point the run to the park is over a good dirt road via Lemon Cove, Three Rivers, Kaweah postoffice and the Giant Forest road entrance to the park.

The Chandler party reports there are three different roads leading into Sequoia National Park—namely, the Mineral King road, the Elk Park road and the Giant Forest road. It is the last-named that comprises the tour of greatest interest and pleasure for motorists and is highly recommended to all travelers.

From Visalia to Giant Forest is sixty-three miles, the last twenty of which are within the park boundaries, and make up the most interesting part of the drive into the great national domain. Several roaring mountain streams that crash over huge granite boulders are crossed, and thees are compared by the Chandler motorists to the streams in the far Northwest. There is a checking station within the park, and it is necessary to register and obtain an automobile permit upon the payment of $2.50.

MOTOR DEVICES WILL BE SHOWN.

AUTO CAMPING BED AND NEW SAFETY SIGNAL ARE TO BE SEEN.

The automobile accessory department at Hamburger's will have on exhibition this week two products of more than passing interest to motorists. Demonstrations will be given of the Fisher auto bed, new camping device, and the Drektor electric signal. The bed will be shown on a Willys-Knight touring car.

This bed is really a wonderful contrivance, being about the most compact thing of its kind ever seen, and being especially good because it raises the sleeper far from the ground and the bugs that crawl thereon. The Brektor is a Los Angeles contrivance which signals right, left and stop, according to the will of the driver, thereby saving the possibility of accidents.

BUSHING REMOVAL.

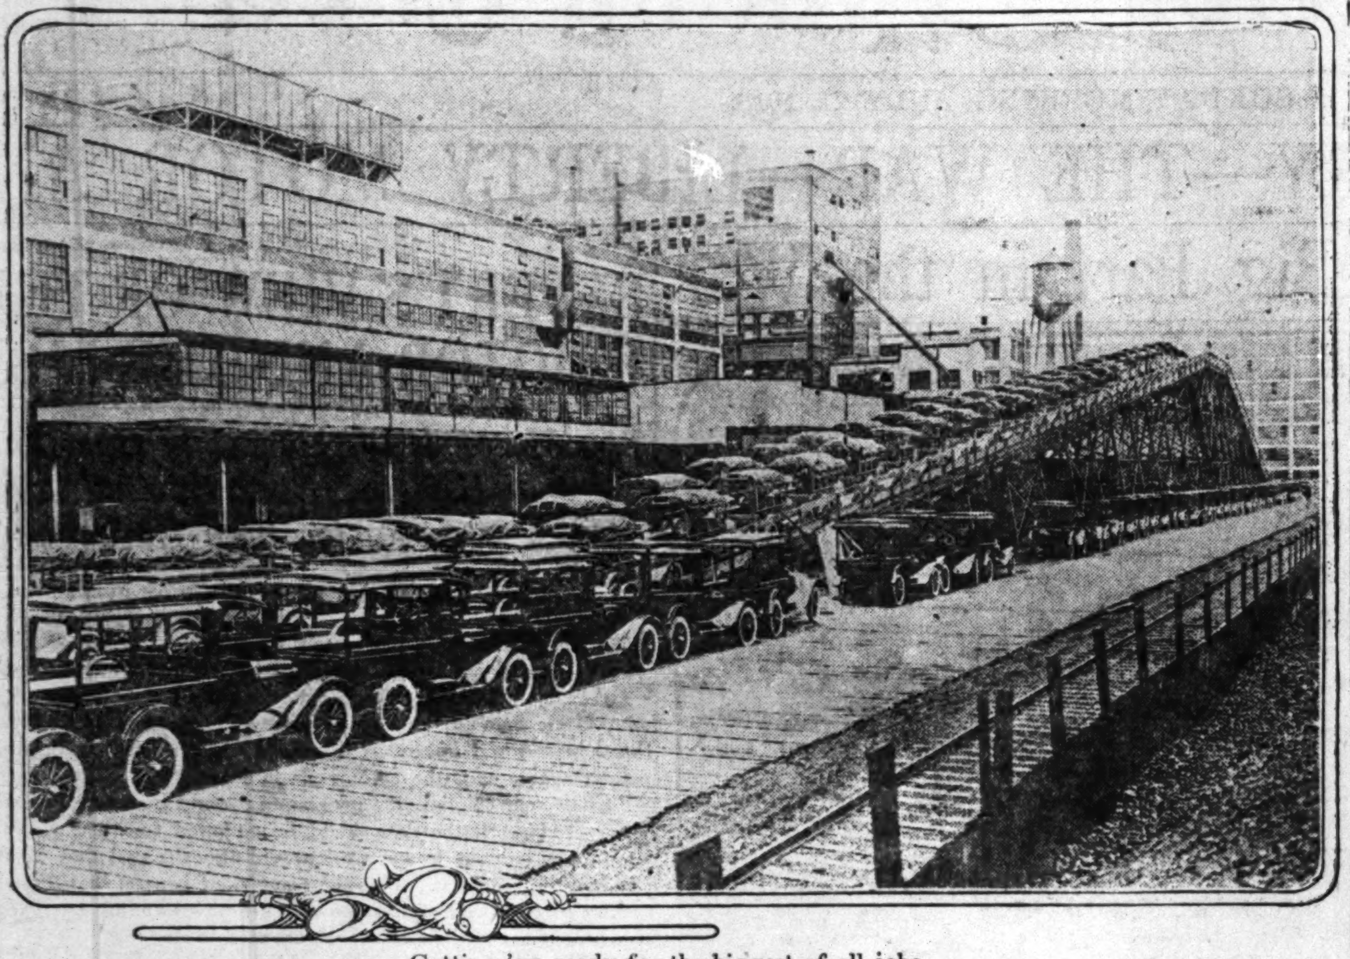
The ordinary way of removing old bushings from spindle arms, etc., is by hack saw or punch. Here is a simpler method of doing the trick. Place the part to be operated on in a vise and give a hand tap of the size that will thread a hole in the bushing a few turns in. If a rod or bolt is now pushed in from the other end the tap may be driven out without difficulty and the old bushing will come with it.

EMERGENCY WRENCH.

A socket wrench may be made for any special job by taking a piece of pipe about the same size as the nut to be operated on, heating it and hammering the end to fit the nut. After this improvised tool has been cooled in water, it makes a wholly acceptable socket wrench, in connection with a pipe wrench, or holes may be drilled for a rod to be used as a handle.

IN VULCANIZING TUBES.

In vulcanizing inner tubes a bit of the fabric known as Holland cloth makes a good substitute for the commonly used newspaper. It is difficult to get the paper off after the job is done, while the cloth pulls off very easily. The cloth should be trimmed so that it just covers the vulcanizing plate and will not catch fire and burn the rubber. It serves quite as well as the paper to prevent the plate sticking, and has the advantage of coming away easily afterwards.



Getting 'em ready for the biggest of all jobs.

Here are fifty Dodge Bros.' light trucks purchased by the United States Quartermaster's Department, awaiting shipment outside the Dodge factory in Detroit. They, like the bigger army trucks, are all driven overland to the seaports and then shipped to France.

They're All Doing It.

OVERHAULING MACHINES FAST BECOMING POPULAR.

"AS LONG as the old boat goes all right, I should worry," is a popular expression among motorists. But it is poor wartime doctrine when conservation is necessitated in all lines. Many a car is running "all right" apparently, that is wasting the money of the owner because being neglected mechanically.

"We are having cars come into our place every day that should have received attention long ago," said George R. Bentel, head of the shops bearing his name in Grand avenue. "The money that the cars have wasted would more than have paid for the overhauling.

"There are so many factors entering into motor-car efficiency that the average owner cares nothing about. The motorist is careless about carbon, worn valves, loose piston rings, leaky manifolds, bad carburetion and an endless list of things that cut down power and efficiency.

"It is wartime economy to have the car overhauled. That is straight advice which should go to every motorist. Many cars are being kept in service now instead of being traded in on new ones. These old cars have worlds of good service in them yet if properly overhauled.

"Family cars are being made new in appearance and I will warrant that they will give just as good service the next year as they did when nearly new. When a car is made right in the first place it shows very small wear after two or three years. We have found this to be true in replacements of some parts. Naturally our paint shop is busier now than ever before."

VERY DIFFICULT TO SECURE PARTS.

DEALERS NOT HAVING A BIG STOCK ON HAND UP AGAINST IT.

"A serious situation is rapidly developing in regard to automobile parts," stated Mr. Harry Lord, of the Lord Motor Car Company, yesterday. "We received a wire from the Velie factory a few days ago stating that they were unable to obtain rims in the East and would be unable to ship us any more cars unless we could supply the rims locally, and requesting us to ship them every rim we could obtain not necessary for our own use. Having a considerable number of car orders on hand for delivery in the near future we immediately wired up and down the Coast to ascertain just how many rims we could secure and after thoroughly combing the market we succeeded in locating fifteen sets.

"A few days ago we sent over to one of the wholesale houses in the city for a piece of steel tubing three and a half inches in diameter and our man returned with the report that unless we could furnish an affidavit that the tubing was for a commercial car we could not be supplied."

MANY MOTORISTS COMING HERE.

FEAR OF FUELLESS DAYS TO BRING US LOTS OF TOURISTS.

"I believe Southern California will have this winter a greater influx of tourists than it has ever had, and that means that many will use our roads for touring. My reason for this is based on what I learned on my recent eastern trip to Racine and other points," stated Roy R. Meads, president and general manager of the Pacific Rubber Company, Coast distributor of horseshoe tires.

"As we all know, the lack of fuel last winter caused no end of discomfort to many, poor and rich alike, and although strenuous efforts are being made to have a sufficient supply on hand for the coming winter, there are many in the East who don't want to take any chances and who intend to hie themselves to Southern California for the season."

VANDALS RUIN DESERT WELLS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BLYTHE, July 18.—Somebody has been ruining wells along the highway between Mecca and Blythe, on the main road that spans Los Angeles and Phoenix, and complaints have been filed with the County Supervisors and with the State officials. At one point forty miles from Blythe, the pump was burned maliciously, the water defiled, and other damage done. Malicious mischief has been reported from other points along the road.

This road is traveled by many auto parties, some coming from distant parts. The well system along the highway is designed to meet all the needs of the autoists, some of the wells, however, being a trifle off the main highway.

Most of the traveling is done at night and in the early, cool hours.

PASSENGER CARS BURN DISTILLATE.

YOSEMITE ECONOMY WINNER IS BUILT TO HANDLE LOW GRADE FUEL.

That distillate as a fuel for motor cars is becoming more popular with motorists is the belief of O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, which distributes the Stephens Six in Southern California and Southern Nevada. "Refiners and those who sell motor fuels will testify that such is the case," said Fuller.

"The Stephens, which made such a remarkable record, winning two cups in the recent economy run to Camp Curry in the Yosemite, is a passenger car engine specially constructed, from cover plate to oil pan, for the burning of low grade fuels. In this engine, which is of the perfected overhead valve type, the intake manifold is placed inside the cylinder head and above the firing chambers, where it is constantly surrounded by heat. The hot manifold keeps the gas from condensing again and so it enters the cylinders in the form of a dry gas that is completely burned."

BE CAREFUL ABOUT USE OF KEROSENE.

The use of kerosene as a substitute for gasoline when cleaning a motor car or parts was suggested as a conservation for saving gasoline. It is pointed out by J. B. Wood of the J. B. Wood Tire Company, distributor of Century-Plainfield tires and tubes, that while kerosene may be all right for cleansing the car one must be careful not to permit it to come in contact with the tires. Water alone is best for washing tires, says Mr. Wood. Soap may be used in the water provided it is thoroughly rinsed afterward and wiped dry. It is advisable to clean tires thoroughly after a car has been driven over a freshly oiled road. When kerosene is used it should be diluted with water and none permitted to soak into the rubber.

OFFICIAL CAR IN YOSEMITE RUN GETS LONG DISTANCE RECOMMENDATION.

"If that new car is here, I'd like to take a look at it," said a visitor to the local branch of Apperson Bros. Auto Company, a few days ago. The salesman who greeted him asked if he referred to the anniversary model.

"I don't know what you call it, but my son wrote me from Fresno that he saw an Apperson car up there that was on the way to the Yosemite and he said it was the finest looking automobile he ever had seen. He told me to come in and see it, so I have come all the way from Riverside for that reason."

It was explained by the salesman that the son must have referred to the anniversary model, which was driven by Manager Harris Hanshue to the valley as an official car. He invited the Riverside man to take a ride in the car and see if his opinion was the same as the son's. And it was.

BAKER GETS A NEW POSITION.

Fred L. Baker, president of the Automobile Club of Southern California, has accepted the post of consul for Southern California of the Lincoln Highway Association.

This appointment, considered as one of the highest honors that can be conferred by the officials of the Highway Association, establishes a connection between that organization and the Automobile Club of Southern California which is highly desirable. At present one of the auto club's crews is signing the Lincoln Highway as far east as Kansas City.

LIGHT TRUCKS A HELP ON RANCH.

WOMEN BECOMING PROFICIENT AT OPERATION OF THE SMALLER CARS.

The increasing use of motor trucks in rural communities is cited as evidence of the response of the producers to the call for conservation of horse and man power and the substitution of mechanics. More light, economical trucks are now being placed in the hands of ranchers and others actually engaged in production than ever has been known before, according to reports received by the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company, distributers for the Smith Form-a-Truck.

P. J. Weisel of Anaheim, the subdealer there, was in Los Angeles a few days ago to place a substantial order for attachments. He declared the growers in his community have realized the benefits from quick delivery. Wm. Wurtzburger, the Lancaster dealer, has been placing a number of trucks among the orchardists of his community. J. E. Sloan of San Jose, is another who has observed the increasing demand. The Sacramento Valley Tractor Company, dealers at the capital, have ordered a carload shipment. In several instances reported here women are being used as truck drivers and are doing the work very capably.

EAST WANTS STEEL FROM LOCAL PLANT.

"Steel is fast becoming more precious than fine gold, if we may judge by the reports which we are getting from the eastern milling points," said J. B. Rauen, secretary and treasurer of the United States Spring Company. "Before they will even give consideration to an order they must know just about what it is to be used for. We have been receiving requests for material from Middle West points, but we have decided to turn down all such orders, as our local needs come first."

account for the popularity this car has achieved with the motor purchasing public. It is the same story everywhere as well as in Southern California.

There can be no question that the now famous Chalmers devices, the "Ram's Horn" manifold and the "Hot Spot," make for this efficiency and economy. Thousands have demonstrated this.

These two devices have been so perfected that low-grade fuels, such as distillate and kerosene, are made to give maximum results—and they cut your fuel bills almost in two without in any way impairing the engine. Let us demonstrate this to your satisfaction. Become a satisfied Chalmers owner while we are able to make prompt deliveries.

MR. TRUCK PROSPECT—

Do You Know That Radius Rods Lend Added Strength and Life to Truck Equipment?

THE MORELAND DISTILLATE-BURNING TRUCK IS ONE OF A VERY FEW THAT IS EQUIPPED WITH RADIUS RODS.

IT IS ESSENTIAL THAT EVERY TRUCK USED FOR HAULING IN THE WEST BE CONSTRUCTED WITH RADIUS RODS.

THE REASON MORELAND OWNERS HAVE LITTLE SPRING TROUBLE AND HAVE LESS BREAKDOWNS IS BECAUSE THE RADIUS RODS ARE SO HUSKY. FOR INSTANCE, ON THE 2½-TON MODEL THE RADIUS ROD IS 31 INCHES LONG, 2-8 OF AN INCH THICK AND 1½ INCHES WIDE. ON THE FOUR-TON JOB, THE RADIUS ROD IS 30 INCHES LONG, 3-16 OF AN INCH THICK AND 2⅛ INCHES WIDE.

RADIUS RODS PROTECT AXLE ALIGNMENT, THUS SAVING TIRES. EVERY FEATURE THAT WORKS FOR ECONOMY AND SERVICEABILITY FOR THE TRUCK OWNER IS TO BE FOUND ON THE MORELAND.

DOUBLE STRESS ON SPRINGS IS ELIMINATED BY THE USE OF RADIUS RODS, AND THUS THE SPRINGS ARE ALLOWED TO PERFORM WITH MULTIPLIED RESILIENCY AND SATISFACTION.

WHEN YOU PURCHASE A MORELAND, YOU GET THE MOST POWERFUL TRUCK ON THE MARKET.

Doing Their Bit.

WOMEN SAVING COUNTRY FROM A LABOR SHORTAGE.

"FUEL, labor and material are the three important factors in the manufacture of a motor car and right today the automobile manufacturers are kept on the jump to anywhere near meet the great demands that are made upon them," is the way Al G. Faulkner, distributor of Marmons, put it upon his return from a recent visit to the Nordyke and Marmon factory.

"The factory is especially fortunate in that it has a considerable store of material on hand. It has also enlarged its plant so that it is now manufacturing small parts and even some accessories that were heretofore purchased in the open market. This fact relieves it of any shortage in these respects. There is no doubt that the fuel situation is one that must be carefully watched by the administration to prevent another shortage this winter.

"It is wonderful how women are adapting themselves to work in the plants. There are hundreds of them in the airplane and automobile plants of the Nordyke and Marmon company and they are being added to the force daily. The women are first schooled and then gradually inducted into different grades of work as they become more and more proficient. Superintendents are astonished at the degree of proficiency they attain. Let me tell you this: If it were not for the women this country would certainly be up against it in the matter of labor."

Conclusive Proof.

FIGURES SHOW INDUSTRY ON A VERY SOUND BASIS.

"AN INTERESTING article in the current issue of Printers' Ink, the trade paper of advertising men, contained a table giving the results of a study made at Yale of the relative advertising expense of different trades. Nine different lines of industry were studied, and of these, the automobile industry showed the lowest average percentage of advertising expense of all save one, that of building materials," said J. H. Kindel, manager of the Hudson sales department of Harold L. Arnold, last week.

"The average expense of the nine automobile manufacturers studied proved to be 3.3 per cent. of the amount of their gross sales. Food products showed an expenditure of 4.6; paints and varnishes of 4 per cent.; office supplies of 5.1 per cent., and optical goods ran as high as 7.3 per cent.

"This should effectively answer the criticism that you sometimes hear voiced to the effect that 'automobile factories spend too much money advertising and not enough on the car.' That is not true, nor has it ever been true of any company in the industry. The successful automobile companies have been conservative in their advertising and sales expenses, and have been content with moderate profits. Indeed, it is very difficult to find any other industry that operates on such a small margin of profit as does the automobile industry.

"It is very difficult to understand how the automobile industry could have attained such immense proportions in such a short space of time by the use of such moderate advertising expense, if it is indeed, as some of our friends allege, a 'non-essential' industry. Food products would probably be classed as essentials by most people, yet it required a heavier proportionate advertising expense to sell them. To 'put across' a 'non-essential' product with such a small advertising expense was nothing short of remarkable."

REAR SPRINGS ARE MADE TO DO SHARE.

TORQUE AND DRIVE TAKEN UP BY THEM ON THIS MAKE OF TRUCK.

Taking torque and drive through rear springs is not new or radical, but is indicated with the construction used on three-ton omnibusses both in London and New York, says W. D. Wright of the Wright Motor Car Company, in explaining the construction on the Selden truck for which he is distributor. This omnibus service is particular severe, due to the fact that the vehicles have to start and stop very often.

This drive is known as the English Hotchkiss drive, and has been in use since 1902. The use of this type of drive eliminates the use of a great many parts, viz., the radius rods and the brackets and bolts and nuts, all of which are liable to break, and all of which need to be lubricated; but this is not of as great an advantage as the cushioning effect of the springs which makes a marked difference in the tire mileage. The springs, by taking the torque and drive, protect not only the rear axle, but the whole car from the shocks which would come to it from being run by an inexperienced and ignorant driver.

VISITOR TO GIVE HOT INFORMATION.

MAN WHO TESTIFIED BEFORE CONGRESS WILL GIVE US THE DOPE.

According to word from Detroit received by H. C. McVey, the Oakland car dealer, F. W. A. Vesper, president, and E. E. Peake, executive secretary of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, are now en route to Los Angeles and other Coast points. Upon their arrival the Los Angeles dealers and motor public will receive first-hand information upon matters of vital importance to the trade and automobile owners.

Mr. Vesper recently appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of Congress when a discussion of proposed motor taxes was under way and Mr. McVey has received a copy of the report of that meeting. The committee is said to have listened to his statement with more interest and attention than has been shown any other representative of the automobile business who has appeared because he more nearly represented the consuming public than do the manufacturers.

TIRE REBUILDING AN ART IN ITSELF.

MEN WHO DO IT SHOULD KNOW WHEN CASINGS HAVE DISINTEGRATED.

In order to give real service to motorists, it is just as necessary for a tire man to know when not to attempt to rebuild a tire as it is for him to know how to do the work, according to Mr. B. F. Wade of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, distributors for the All-Red Tyrian tire.

A motorist comes to a tire shop for advice and it is only fair for the tire man to back up his work and if he does rebuild the tire then let him give the motorist a guarantee of mileage just the same as a tire manufacturer gives with a new tire, and an expert tire man will do this because it shows confidence in his own judgment and work. "We have been doing this for some time," says Mr. Wade, "and because of the guarantee we give, we are naturally careful of the tires we do rebuild."

WILL BE HARD TO GET MOTORS SOON.

Henry Ford is utilizing so much of his factory for war work that in the next two or three months there will be an acute shortage of Ford cars, says J. B. Fahy of Fahy-Atterbury Company, who is now in the East looking over the situation. This letter in which the above statement was made was received the last week and it shows the real condition of the siutation in the East.

POWER

Entirely within its "loafing" range of power, the Peerless Eight will romp through the average day's work.

Operating steadily and smoothly on half rations, it is exceptionally sparing in its consumption of fuel. Its eight-cylinder eighty horsepower motor will shame many a lesser powered six—even many a four—in a test for fuel economy.

No Inconvenience.

CLOSED-CAR TOURING IS JUST THE STUFF FOR HIM.

SECURITY against unpleasant weather conditions such as are to be had when using a closed automobile for touring is one of the chief requisites to an enjoyable cross-country trip, according to J. M. Waterman, of No. 724 South Spring street, who recently completed an extensive tour in a Franklin sedan. Mr. Waterman experienced both extremes from a hail storm to a dust typhoon and in a letter to Ralph Hamlin, the Franklin distributer, he says he was made to realize acutely the advantages of the closed car as the result.

Mr. Waterman said in his letter: I shipped the car to Salt Lake, then in company with my cousin, E. J. Waterman, who did the expert driving while I did the expert criticising, we left Salt Lake and drove to Evaston, Wy., leaving there the next morning, going over the worst roads I had ever been over all the way through Wyoming and arriving in Denver just three days after leaving Salt Lake.

We found the roads in Colorado in pretty good shape, but on leaving Colorado through New Mexico we found stretches of very bad road—chuckhole after chuckhole, hidden by dust, where at times for several miles we could not go faster than five miles an hour and simply had to stay in low gear.

In Arizona, it wasn't much better—in fact, on account of being hotter we found the going a little worse, but finally landed in glorious California and believe me, when we struck the pavement in Cajon Pass, we felt as if we wanted to get out and kiss it.

But, what I particularly wanted to say to you about the trip, is that the car behaved beautifully; that we never suffered any inconveniences whatever; that we brought our California air in the tires back with us, being troubled by only one puncture and that near Victorville. We averaged about eighteen miles to the gallon of gasoline and notwithstanding the hot weather used very little oil, no more than we use here.

People who are used to traveling in touring cars, as I myself always was, do not realize how very much more comfortable a closed car is for touring and I would certainly advise anyone who wishes to go on a long trip to take a closed car if they wish to enjoy solid comfort. It has always been my opinion that most people use a closed car in town and a touring car for outside touring, but I have reversed this proposition. I most always use my sedan for my touring and my touring car for running around town with. In justice to the Franklin, I must say it is a great satisfaction to have a car which is easy riding and economical in fuel and repairs as my Franklin cars have been.

REAL PROSPERITY HEADED THIS WAY.

SHIPBUILDING BOOM WILL BE PARALLELED IN OTHER LINES.

"The great activity at the harbor is reflected in general business conditions and although we can only trace in a small way that we have received direct benefits, I am convinced the influence is to be felt in nearly every line of local endeavor," stated J. B. Magee, district manager for United States Rubber Company, manufacturer of United States tires, who has recently returned from an extended business trip through Arizona.

"It is the big pay rolls that make any city. I have heard it said that there is a great demand for rental property in residence sections in all parts of the city and its suburbs. There is no doubt that much of this is due to increased activity along the water front. Of course we manufacture things of rubber beside tires and we trace some large orders to this source. And ours, of course, is but one small incident of many others."

KEEP OUT OF THE RUTS, SAVE TIRES.

"One of the surest ways to shorten the life of a tire is the continual driving in deep ruts," according to C. K. Whittaker, sales manager, Weinstock-Nichols, Federal distributors. "Ruts grind into the side wall of the tire, where they do not have the heavy protective covering of the tread. This driving results in rapid wearing down on the sides. In this way the fabric is torn and the carcass soon worn down. There is another practice the results of which are often brought to our attention. That is driving in the street-car tracks. This should be done only where positively necessary, as this also has a tendency to bring all of the wear on one spot in the tire where the tread cannot protect it.

Army and Navy.

RADIO CLASSES HERE TO TRAIN MEN FOR SERVICE.

UNCLE SAM needs at least 25,000 additional radio telegraph operators for service in the army and navy. In order to procure them boards of education throughout the land have been requested by the government to aid in preparing men for this department. In compliance with the appeal of the government, the Los Angeles city school authorities have organized radio classes in the McKinley-avenue Intermediate, the Boyle Heights Intermediate and the Polytechnic High School.

Although all men and women, irrespective of age, are welcome to attend these classes, they have been designed primarily for men who are an enlisted or drafted man who, upon being inducted into the service, shows a proficiency in sending and receiving a minimum of fifteen words per minute receives a wage rating of $50 per month.

The difference between a private's pay of $30 monthly and this rating is sufficiently marked to make the opportunity for radio study attractive, and it will doubtless be eagerly grasped by many of the selectives, it is believed. If the responses to the board's invitation are sufficiently numerous classes will be established in various parts of the city.

Meetings of those interested will be held in the Boyle Heights and McKinley-avenue Intermediate schools Tuesday, July 23, at 7:30 p.m. Recently drafted men in class 1 of districts near these schools are especially urged to enroll for the new classes.

How Tire Prices Battle War Costs

HERE is new light on tire prices, old and new. War has sent all prices higher, tire prices with the rest.

But Goodrich Tires have responded least to the rise.

A glance at Goodrich tire prices for nine years reveals a pleasing surprise to tire users.

Goodrich tires are not costly for war times, or any other time.

This year's increase of Goodrich tire prices is far below general price increases.

You can buy Goodrich tires 35 per cent less than you paid for tires nine years ago.

And remember with Goodrich prices you get the sure, full value service of GOODRICH SERVICE VALUE TIRES.

That is, the maximum of easy riding comfort, gasoline economy, and prolonged mileage—in service on your car and on the road.

It is good war economy to buy—

TRADESMEN TO ENJOY OUTING.

Convention Plans are for Big Programme.

Rim o' the World Tour will be Enjoyed.

San Bernardino will Act as Entertainer.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 20.—Arrangements are completed for the entertainment of about 250 delegates and members of the California Automobile Trades Association in this city on July 25 and 26, when the southern section of the tradesmen's organization will convene. The business sessions on the opening day at the Elks' clubhouse will be followed in the evening by a banquet and dance at the beautiful Arrowhead Hotel in the foothills. A motor ride through the moonlight will be one of the features of this event.

By far the most important part of the arrangements is the trip to the "Rim o' the World" drive on the next day, Friday, July 26. Automobiles will whisk the visitors off the floor of the valley from the city zone into the ozone, and after a few hours' ride on the entrancing crest drive the big party will be deposited at Little Bear Lake for a revelry of fishing, swimming and boating, not to mention an open-air barbecue of juicy beef steaks and all the fixin's.

Many matters of importance to the men engaged in the various crafts pertaining to the automobile industry will be discussed at the business sessions at the Elks' Club. The meeting will mark the installation of the new officers of the State association, of which B. W. Sinclair of San Diego is president and Robert W. Martland of Oakland secretary.

San Bernardino is making preparations to entertain royally, and one of the most largely-attended meetings in many months is expected. Many of the men attending will bring their wives, for the banquet and dance at Arrowhead Hotel as well as the mountain trip, will be open to the ladies. Return to San Bernardino will be in time for all visitors to catch trains and to drive back to their homes by Saturday morning.

OUR SOLDIERS ARE MUCH TOO BASHFUL.

WOULDN'T ASK FOR RIDES, BUT PRINTED INVITATIONS ARE HELPFUL.

According to R. W. Sheldon, vice-president of the Cambria Spring Company, the printed invitation to soldiers and sailors pasted on the local motor cars seems to have been made necessary because of a peculiar psychology manifested in our local fighting lads that is not found elsewhere. Their modesty has cheated them out of a good many free rides because in many cases they were not asked to "hop in." Mr. Sheldon says that in the East Sammy has no hesitancy in asking for a ride and is always accommodated by the passing autoists whether he has a full car or not. It appears that there the driver's absent-mindedness in not inviting Mr. Soldier or Sailor is no bar to their riding.

ROAD SIGNS WILL BE PUT IN SHAPE.

Don Doig, head of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, is checking over the entire Southern California sign system of that organization, taking notes for renewals and noting spots now in need of the club placards.

180 miles of road around Riverside, Colton, San Bernardino and the Cajon Pass have been surveyed, with the result that seventy-two new signs will be placed in that territory within the next two weeks. Doig has also completed arrangements to place a number of signs on roads leading to Camp Kearny.

BLUE BOOK BOSS SEES AUTO CLUB.

Among the easterners who visited the Auto Club of Southern California's headquarters last week was John P. Dods, associated with the publishers of the automobile Blue Book. Mr. Dods, who is familiar with the working of the Auto Club, states that he has often told eastern motorists to come out here if they wish to see a real live organization, devoted to the interests of the car owner and motor travel.

EXECUTIVE JOB NOW FOR MOW MITCHELL.

Secretary Standish Mitchell of the Automobile Club of Southern California is in receipt of a cablegram from Rome stating that his brother Mowatt has been assigned to an executive position in the aviation service for an indefinite period, and will have headquarters at the Hotel Royal. "Mow," as he is known to his many friends here, has been flying in Italy for several months. Before entering the service he was employed as special representative of the Auto Club.

AD MAN KEEPS LOG ON HIS MOTOR CAR.

ARRIVES HOME FROM THE BAY CITY CONVENTION AND KNOWS THE COST.

In making the trip to the convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World, which was held recently in San Francisco, Mr. C. F. Crank, a local advertising man, kept an accurate log on his Liberty touring car and was more than pleased at the outcome.

Speaking of his trip to Lynn C. Buxton, Mr. Crank said that he covered 1116 miles, used only one gallon of lubricating oil, less than a gallon of water, and that he averaged 21.3 miles per gallon of gasoline, which, taking into consideration the mileage in running around San Francisco, was an extremely creditable showing, though it simply verified what he knew he had been doing in and around Los Angeles.

PROPER FASTENING OF LUGS HELPFUL.

CARE IN PUTTING RIM ON IS SURE TO INCREASE LIFE OF THE CASINGS.

The careless and improper method of fastening the rim back on the wheel when a tire is changed, getting the lugs on one side too tight and making it impossible to screw the lugs down properly on the opposite side, causes the same wear on a tire as improper alignment.

Mr. F. H. Osler, distributor for the Racine Multi-Mile cord and the Racine Country Road tire, gives the following advice: "When the rim and tire are placed back on the wheel, tighten up all the lugs first by hand and then go around the wheel four or five times, giving each lug the same twist with the wrench, thus making sure that every part of the rim is fitted on equally with the rest."

TIRES AND TUBES STAND HARD TRIP.

RUN TO SAN FRANCISCO AND RETURN WITHOUT TROUBLE.

There were many motor cars leaving Los Angeles last week carrying delegates to the convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World in San Francisco. One machine equipped with Palmer tubes left Los Angeles at 6:30 and seventeen hours and twenty-five minutes later was in San Francisco. Along the route sixty-two machines were stopped with tire trouble.

When it is considered that it is 422 miles between the two cities and that the heat in San Joaquin Valley at this time of the year is intense this record is remarkable. But not content with such a good record on the going trip the party, after running over 250 miles in San Francisco, over cobblestone streets and steep hills, reached Los Angeles via the bad coast road with the same air in them as when they left Los Angeles and the test of the air pressure on their arrival here showed that they contained the same amount of air as when the trip started.

PLENTY OF CARS FOR THE PRESENT.

BUT FUTURE WILL NOT BRING AS MANY FROM THE FACTORY.

P. W. Wisdom of Wisdom & Co., distributor of the Lexington, leaves this week on an extended business trip to the East, and while there he will visit the factories operated by the Lexington Motor Car Company. "I am advised that the factory is now devoting about 60 per cent. of its energy in the manufacture of ambulances and other war munitions. Under normal conditions the Lexington output is about 1800 or 2000 cars per month. Under the existing schedule the output will be reduced to between 700 and 800 cars each month," said Wisdom. "We were fortunate in having a large number of cars on hand and so have been able to make prompt deliveries and will be able to for the immediate present. If the present demand holds up, however, some prospective Lexington purchasers may be compelled to wait their turn."

FRICTIONS COST A PILE OF MONEY.

Automobilists yearly pay a heavy toll to friction, which, if figured out in dollars and cents, would amount to millions. And this tax, say experts, can be reduced to a fraction of its present amount by proper attention to lubrication. The Joseph Dixon Graphite Crucible Company has offered a series of graphite automobile lubricants which they claim solve the problem by providing a permanent film of graphite which effectually separates the two surfaces.

AIRPLANE MOTOR PART OF NEW CAR'S FEATUR

A NEW arrival along auto row and one that is attracting no end of interest among motorists generally is the new Nelson, the car with the airplane motor, for which F. E. Nelson, at No. 823 South Flower street, has the distribution for Southern California.

This car is the product of the mechanical genius of one of the best-known engineers in the automobile world, Mr. E. A. Nelson of Detroit, formerly chief engineer of the Hupmobile factory, but for the past three years developing and perfecting the airplane motor for practical use in automobiles.

DON'T CLUTTER UP CAMPING GROUNDS.

The Automobile Club of Southern California is receiving numerous complaints from touring parties regarding the unsightly condition of camping spots in Southern California. With the summer season in full blast the thoughtless pest who leaves a trail of papers, tin cans, pie plates and other refuse behind him is busy again.

Since the various camping spots come under the jurisdiction of different towns and counties, the real remedy seems to lie in an appeal to the good sportsmanship of the motorist. If the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county agreed to declare the cluttering of public camping spots a misdemeanor, local conditions would be improved materially.

In of 1917 the head of this the motor numbers of Fords just assembled and be delivered to owners in of Washington. He then to Oregon and applied licenses in his own name, motor numbers secured in Washington although at that time he was not in possession of a single car.

After securing the license plates the gang began an orgy of stealing which baffled detectives for several months. Touring cars were converted into roadsters and vice versa, the motor numbers erased with an emery wheel and acid and one of the eight Washington motor numbers engraved in the place of the obliterated one. After going through the process cars were driven off to small towns by members of the gang and quick sales effected at a low price. At the time of his apprehension the head of this outfit was in possession of a small fortune with his entire stock in trade consisting of but eight license plates, a set of dies, some acid and an emery wheel.

KEEP THOSE TIRES PUMPED UP TIGHT.

HOT WEATHER ALL THE MORE REASON FOR PLENTY OF PRESSURE.

"It is wrong to believe that the tire pressure should be decreased in the summer time to overcome heat from the sun and pavement," asserts W. R. Cain, general manager of the local Norwalk tire and tube service station at Pico and Hope streets. "Although it is possibly true that an underinflated tire in the summer time will increase in air pressure, the heat from the pavements or sun has nothing to do with it, rather it is the heat within the tire. Underinflation increases the heat within the tire. This is brought about by a greater bending action of the tire as it flattens out when under load and returns to its round normal shape when the wheel revolves and the load is lifted from that particular section. The constant working action of the side walls generates a certain amount of heat which must be absorbed by the tire, accordingly increasing its pressure. Eliminate this bending action by properly inflating the tire so that the casing is always round directly underneath the wheel, and you have eliminated the possibility of increased air pressure."

TO CLEAN PARTS.

It is often necessary to clean small parts of the car, and washing in kerosene is the accepted method. The usual practice is to throw such parts in a pail of kerosene and let them lie in the muck which collects at the bottom. A better way is to get a wire basket, which will fit part way down in the vessel used to hold the kerosene, place the parts in this basket, dip them in the oil and allow the dirt to be loosened and sink to the bottom, while the parts come out perfectly clean and ready for use.

PROTECTING THE BREATHER.

While the accepted function of the breather is to allow excess pressure to escape from the crankcase and also to offer an opening for the insertion of lubricating oil, this device also permits the entrance of a considerable amount of dirt and grit, which has free access to the bearings. It is a good plan to cover the breather with a piece of fine brass screen, which will exclude most of the foreign matter.

PIPE REPAIR.

It is perfectly possible to repair a broken pipe line, such as that which carries the fuel, simply by reaming out one side, and filing down the other, after the edges have been evened off, and then thrusting the smaller end into the larger. Wrapping a repair of this kind with tape and then with fine wire will hold the junction for an indefinite period.

The new boss is on the job.

Here we have M. D. Bixby, newly-appointed branch manager in Los Angeles for the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company. He is examining a long-mileage safety tread casing.

NEW BRANCH MANAGER FOR RUBBER COMPANY ON JOB.

Recently Mr. F. R. Carroll, district manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, with headquarters in San Francisco, made an announcement which is of great interest to the automobile trade in Los Angeles.

This is to the effect that Mr. M. D. Bixby, who has been in the Los Angeles branch as assistant manager for the past eighteen months, has been made branch manager in Los Angeles, covering all of Southern California and Arizona.

Mr. Bixby has been with the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company since May, 1914, and previous to this time was with the Diamond Rubber Company in Chicago since 1902. He is an "old head" in the rubber industry, having started in Chicago with the old Chicago Rubber Works in 1895.

Since being located in Los Angeles Mr. Bixby has given his whole-hearted endeavors to boosting Goodrich sales, with such success that Mr. Carroll, quick to recognize his ability, determined to place more responsibility on his shoulders, and his appointment to his new position has just been announced.

Mr. Bixby will make a special endeavor to become personally acquainted not only with the dealers who are handling Goodrich tires (who have greatly increased in number during the past year,) but also is anxious to meet individual users of Goodrich tires on all occasions. As he puts it: "The door to my office is always open and I hope I may be favored with the same generous support which was given Mr. Carroll during his long term as manager of the Los Angeles branch."

Mr. Bixby has collected a staff of capable assistants in the selling end as well as on other departments, and announces the following department heads:

L. E. Nollan, district superintendent of operations; Z. G. Ketchum, manager mechanical sales; M. B. McKinsey, manager, pneumatic tire sales; E. W. Perry, manager of truck tire sales; G. M. Gay, charge of service department; L. R. Uhlenhart, manager of advertising department; J. F. Howard, manager credit department; B. Schuttere, charge of traffic department, and E. Hegerling, charge of stock department.

WATCH CARBURETOR AND SAVE GASOLINE.

"Conservation is the word most used today, and, while we have fuel administrators who are doing their best to make the public see the necessity of preventing waste, yet there is enough fuel wasted daily that would go a long way toward supplying our wants and those of our allies in the war zone. The amount one motorist will waste daily may not seem much, but that one multiplied almost indefinitely makes a huge total," said C. G. Harness, president and general manager for the Master Carburetor Company.

VALVE REMOVAL.

In engines having demountable heads and valves in the head the removal of valves is a matter of difficulty, unless one has found out just the proper trick. The head should be laid on the bench, right side up, and the compressor slipped on, after which a wire should be fastened about the handle of the compressor and then be anchored to the leg of the bench or table. Next lift up on the handle; this presses the spring down, the lock may be removed from the stem very easily, and the job is done.

The National Tennis Women's War Relief Association has been incorporated under the laws of New York. New York women lawn tennis players are back of the movement and every one of the more than 2000 women who tried for a national ranking in 1916 is to be enrolled in the organization. Tourneys, chiefly one-day competitions, will be promoted in all sections of the country. Membership books, each providing for 100 registrations at $1 are in the hands of hundreds of the managers and it is hoped to secure a membership of 100,000.

The New York fire department boasts of one of the finest handball courts in this country. It is located on Blackwell's Island. It measures 25x35 feet and has the unique distinction of having been built of wood taken from the cabins of the seized German steamship Vaterland. The ship was recently dismantled of all its finery to be used by the United States government as a transport.

Lawson Robertson, athletic coach of the University of Pennsylvania, recently visited Ottawa, Can., to visit the officers' training camp and study the Canadian and English bayonet practice and military athletics systems. Robertson was accompanied by W. J. Cromie, assistant gymnasium instructor. Pennsylvania will institute a four-year course in military science starting next fall.

LOUD YELL AT PROPOSED TAX.

Would Make More Burden for Truck Owners,

Who are Already Burdened by Heavy Levies.

Everybody Taking a Swing at Automobiles.

Owners of motor trucks used in the transportation of merchandise and general freight and express are wondering how the various councils of Southern California towns are going to reconcile their license fees for the operation of motor trucks in their various municipalities with the strongly expressed desire of the National Council of Defense to remove all regulations that would tend to restrict or discourage the use of motor trucks.

At the present time the motor vehicle is carrying a larger taxation burden than any other kind of personal property and that in spite of the fact that its services are considered highly essential in winning the war.

There is a Federal tax on all new motor vehicles; to this there has been practically no objection since the rate was made lower than the rather exorbitant one at first proposed. Then comes a State registration tax to which the public has become accustomed and recognizes as a good measure as it produces much of the revenue for the betterments of roads.

To these are added a county property tax and a city property tax and now the Los Angeles City Council proposes to tack on another one for the use of the city streets so that a deficit in the street department funds may be met.

A general wheel tax on all vehicles is also proposed but pending a decision of the City Attorney as to the legality of imposing such a tax that measure is held up, but two of the City Councilmen at a recent meeting expressed themselves strongly in favor of passing the ordinance for taxing motor trucks and delivery cars and wagons as proposed and raising additional revenue from passenger cars.

A number of representatives of various civic organizations were present at the meeting to protest at the distribution of the tax, but all expressed themselves as willing to pay a tax as an emergency measure if it could be evenly distributed.

They set up the claim that motor delivery is for the benefit of the public and was not a revenue producing department of any business house. It is a matter of service that the public is accustomed to and that as delivery is furnished at cost or less the public should maintain the streets for that service and not the merchants who operated the trucks.

Of the representatives of the motor car dealers who attended the meeting of the Council held to hear the protests on the proposed tax only one firm had a spokesman. This was H. A. Sperl, sales manager of Packard lines for Earle C. Anthony, Inc. He called the attention of the Council to the fact that such a tax as proposed would restrict and discourage the use of motor trucks which was in direct opposition to the expressed wishes of the Council of Defense. He also pointed out that additional burdens thrown on the motor car industry would be harmful as most of the dealers are trying to keep open during the period of the war and keep their organizations intact without the hope of making a profit.

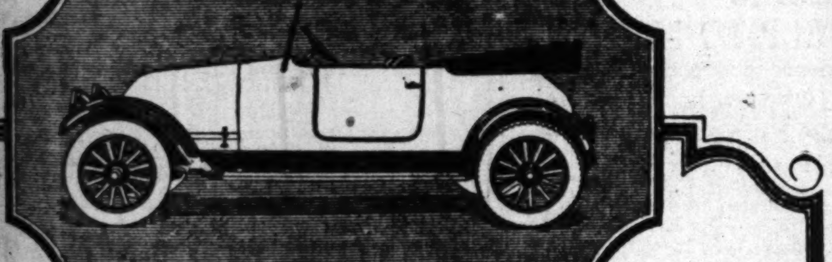
"It seems that every time somebody wants more money," said Sperl in discussing the situation, "that they pick on the motor car industry or motor car owners first. Public officials seem obsessed with the idea that every man who has a motor vehicle must be a multi-millionaire and legitimate prey. One Councilman even went so far as to say that he considered passenger cars a luxury. This to us sounded ridiculous as we know that less than 10 per cent. of the passenger cars are used for pleasure primarily and even then it is a less expensive type of pleasure than many others we could name which are displaced by healthful, educational motor trips.

"Our firm will sell just as many motor cars and trucks as we can get during the period of the war, as there is a shortage, and in spite of such legislation as proposed they must be used as there is nothing else to fill the gap left in our transportation system. They are saving thousands of freight cars for Uncle Sam to use in handling war supplies. Yet we feel that we should do what we can as an organization to protect our customers and to us it seems an unequal distribution of the burden to put an additional tax on motor vehicles and leave untaxed any lines that should help and would be willing to help as an emergency measure."

INSIDE DOPE ON SAVING CASINGS.

FOLLOW THIS RULE ABOUT AIR PRESSURE AND TIRES WILL LAST.

Most motorists are right up to economy on tires. It is very seldom we see a rim-cut tire any more, due to underinflation, also stone or fabric bruise caused by underinflation, Edward Harris, secretary of the Tire Construction Company, says: "Buy a gauge and keep your tires inflated to twenty pounds to the square inch, viz.: 30x3½ tires, taking the last figure, 3½ inches at twenty pounds is seventy pounds necessary for that size tire. If the tire has run 3000 miles or over, reduce to eighteen pounds to the square inch. This way of keeping up the air insures the user he may have the tire retreaded as it will wear evenly, provided the wheels are aligned and brakes move smoothly and do not grip. Wheels out of line will ruin a new tire in a few weeks."



THE FRANKLIN

A Different

Four-Passenger Roadster

FOUR-PASSENGER ROADSTERS fill a distinct motoring need. But the average car of this type has just one objection. We have in mind the usual cramping, crowding, pushing and shoving—the very things you don't want in what is supposed to be a convenience-car.

The Franklin Four-Passenger Roadster is different. Thought and experience went to its designing. In appearance it is trim, fine and graceful. The kind of car that draws a second look in the street.

And above all, it's comfortable. Franklin patented design makes it so—comfortable to get into, and comfortable to ride in. The seating arrangement gives everyone in the car a real seat—not a makeshift.

The khaki top and gypsy rear curtains give just the right atmosphere to the Franklin Four-Passenger Roadster. Its owner has the satisfaction of having a car that is not only fine looking, but also economical. For the regular Franklin performance of 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 10,000 miles to the set of tires is the response of the Franklin to the need of war-time economy.

We have a Four-Passenger Roadster here now. Come in and try it.

STEPHENS Salient Six

Burns Distillate

The problem of satisfactorily burning low grade fuels, such as distillate, has been met with the designing of the perfected overhead-valve engine of the Stephens Salient Six. Especially constructed from fan to fly-wheel for the purpose, it handles distillate just the same as it does high-test gasoline—burning cleanly and completely and delivering the maximum of power with flexibility and economy.

Fifty-seven horsepower from low grade fuel with only 3¼x4¼ bore and stroke is the daily record of the Stephens' perfected overhead-valve design. The engine of the Stephens is exceptionally silent while light reciprocating parts and a naturally balanced three-bearing crankshaft eliminate all vibration.

In the Second Annual Economy run to Camp Curry, Yosemite, the Stephens established a wonderful record for economy when it captured two trophies. The run was under A.A.A. supervision—the highest recognized authority in the world of motor cars.

Optimistic.

BIG BUSINESS PROMISED NOW.

Dealers Look Forward to a Banner Year.

All Call for Big Allotment of Machines.

Location of Factory is Big Help, They Say.

The automobile industry in the West can look for the biggest twelve months' business it has ever recorded during the next year!

That is expert opinion in a nutshell, following the big annual Chevrolet dealers and district managers convention during the past week, where reports and statistics from all over the Pacific Coast were made and discussed. With but a single exception, every section in the territory was reported as having plenty of money and brilliant agricultural, mining and industrial prospects; the lone exception was accounted for by a poor wheat crop due to long drought, and even this adverse condition may right itself before the harvest is turned into cash.

The Chevrolet convention was held at the big factory at Oakland, and was attended by Manager J. V. Hough of the local retail branch, who returned to his desk here yesterday confident that Chevrolet business in this section would show a wonderful increase during the year. This prediction was based not only on the optimistic note sounded at the conclave, but also on the fact that last month's sales here established a record which is already being thrown into the shade by the July registrations of new Chevrolet owners in Los Angeles and vicinity.

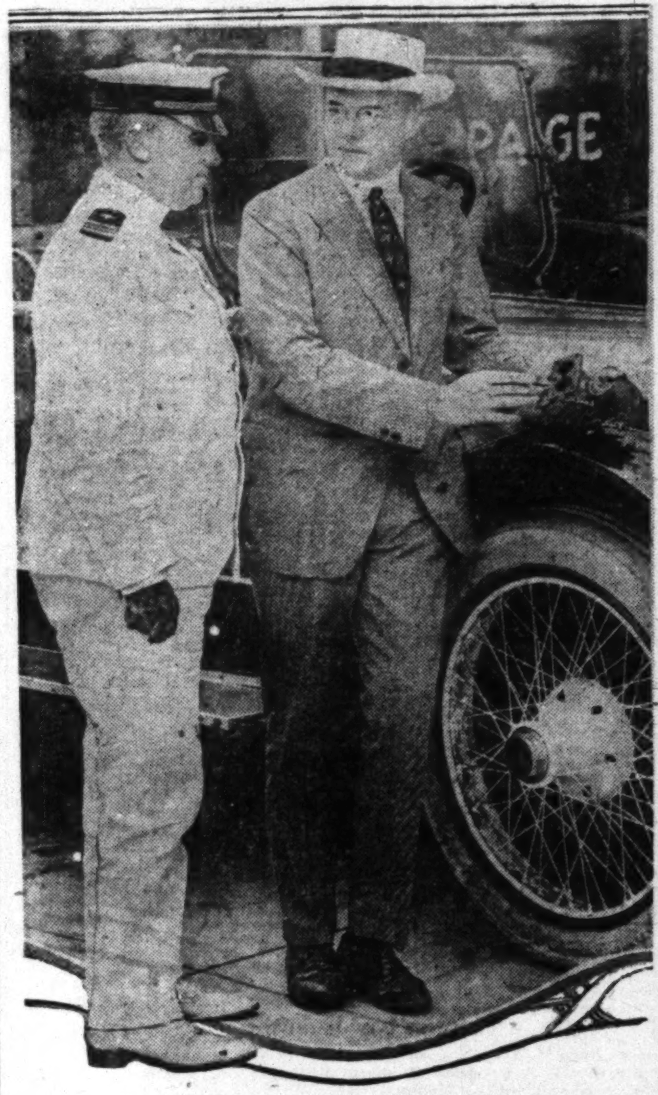
Immediately on his return Manager Hough announced that the price of the popular Chevrolt "490" model would be advanced $50 on August 1. The Chevrolet Motor Company of California has been one of the last to fall in line with the general price raising, but advanced costs of labor and materials finally forced the increase.

Vice-President R. C. Durant presided over the Oakland meetings and in his report laid a large measure of the marvelous Chevrolet growth on the Pacific Coast to the fact that the Chevrolet factory was located in California and caters exclusively to the needs of western users. Railway congestion, labor shortages, adverse weather and other causes which sometimes affect eastern factories and dealers are never felt out here, he said, and the Oakland plant is able to deliver full output every working day in the year. The plant has been made wonderfully efficient and now ranks with any factory in the country in point of equipment and working advantages.

One result of a "home" factory is the feeling that Chevrolet owners have about service, an important feature in automobile business, declared the Chevrolet executive. They all feel that no matter what the condition of the railroads, they can always get any parts that are needed within a few hours, and are correspondingly confident in their choice of a machine. The Chevrolet service policy has developed until now it occupies a premier place in the motor-car world.

Manager Hough was enthusiastic over business conditions and predicted that not only Chevrolet, but all lines of motor cars, delivery vehicles and tractors would feel the propsperous condition. Los Angeles and the Southland have recorded bumper crops, and the shipbuilding industry and its high wages have both accounted for many new possible motor owners. Automobiles have outgrown the luxury class and are now a vital necessity, and the local chief feels they will be more and more in demand as business increases.

According to announcement, there will be no change in the design or lines of the present "490" model Chevrolet.



Explaining the dual-power range.

Lieutenant-Commander E. A. Salisbury and Stanley Smith, the latter explaining the dual-power range of the Peerless and showing the carburetor which does the work.

DUAL-POWER RANGE IS A BIG HELP TO MOTOR.

"ALTHOUGH power rather than economy is more associated with cars of the eight-cylinder type, everything considered, this type is as economical, if not more so, in my opinion, than cars of lesser cylinders," stated Stanley W. Smith of Smith Bros., distributors of the Peerless Eight. "Of course, economy is the watchword today, but it should also include efficiency and the amount of service rendered in proportion to initial expenditure and consequent upkeep cost.

"What is known as the 'dual-power range' of the Peerless is an economical factor which is prominent in its construction, and there are many who do not understand what this particular function is. It is a simple method of carburetion which permits of the use of a minimum amount of fuel for ordinary speeds and for almost instant acceleration until eighty horse power are in action.

"Controlled by throttle action, double poppets are opened, and instead of a small ration of fuel, a full allowance and through two larger openings is fed the engine, and you are off as fast as you care to go. From the seat you have positive control at all times of your fuel allowance. This particular feature makes for economy and full efficiency at all times, such as was demonstrated in the economy run to the Yosemite, when the Peerless easily led all other competitors in the high-price car class. On that run, under A.A.A. supervision, the Peerless used only twenty-three gallons of gasoline in doing 382 miles."

TO CLEAN MUFFLER.

There are many methods of cleaning the muffler, from beating on it with a hammer to blowing out the carbon with air. Here is a very effective way of cleaning a muffler badly choked with soot and carbon. Remove the muffler and plug up one end with a wooden plug. Pour in the other end a solution made up of half a pint of concentrated lye to half a gallon of boiling water. Shake the muffler vigorously, pour out the solution and rinse with boiling water. This lye solution burns the hands or clothes, when it touches them, so be careful of it.

ANTI-BLACK-HANDS.

For the man who does the work about his own car and yet does not care to have hands like a garage mechanic's, the following is valuable: Four ounces of grain alcohol, three ounces of glycerin and three ounces of water, shaken up in a bottle. If this liquid is applied to the hands before beginning work, a good washing with soap and water afterward removes all traces of the labor.

BENT PLIERS.

For use in certain conditions the ordinary type of straight pliers are inefficient. It is possible to heat an ordinary pair of pliers and bend them just below the jaws and above the pivot. After they have been retempered again, you have a useful tool for getting at nuts, bolts or anything else in an inaccessible location.

BATTERY BOX PAINT.

Black Asphaltum paint is an excellent medium to use on the battery box, as it prevents the eating away of the box by solution that may be spilled. The box should be given a heavy coat of this paint several times a year. Incidentally washing soda or ammonia solution will neutralize the effect of battery acid while it is still wet.

elpful Hints and Information for All Owners of Automobiles.

A Patriotic Duty.

ARN TO TAKE CARE OF OUR MACHINE YOURSELF.

"All the many thousands automobile dealers of the country asked to discontinual service hours so competent mechanics may be for war work, the time is for the owner of the motor car to take unto himself a new obligation which is this: Learn to know car so that you may, as far as keep it in repair yourself," H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, distributors of Hupmobile and Chalmers cars.

"It has been estimated that motor owners can by doing much of their repair work on their release for government war in the neighborhood of thirty of men and possibly more. And that number of men can do much to speed up work at home and abroad. There are too many owners who everywhere rely upon service stations to find some trivial trouble or squeak and adjust it. It it this class of service that takes what is now more than ever the valued time of many men.

"Of course garage and repair shops must be kept open but by eliminating much work which is really unnecessary there is no doubt the working force can be cut down appreciably. We have always tried to aid Hupmobile and Chalmers owners to understand their cars and get the best of them but we will make a special effort in this direction because we consider it a duty to the government and the cause it is fighting for."

He'll tell 'em all about it.

Here we have Mark Erwin, who is traveling all over Southern California in his Chalmers in the interest of motor touring to our national parks during the summer.

WILL PROMOTE MOTORING TO OUR NATIONAL PARKS.

TO PREACH the gospel of traveling by automobile over our highways to the national parks in the State, and which the government desires the people to visit for healthy recreation, Mark A. Erwin, local representative of Camp Curry in the Yosemite, left last week in his Chalmers car to visit the larger cities and towns of Southern California.

Erwin will carry with him films showing the natural wonders of the Yosemite and other points in the high Sierras. In his addresses in theaters and before chambers of commerce he will advocate that motorists make use of the State's highways to visit the national parks.

"Many motorists consider a trip from Southern California to the Yosemite, the Tahoe country and other points, of almost equal interest in the Sierras, is something to be feared and should be tackled by only the most experienced drivers. Those who have made the trip know that such is not the case. I expect to be away about six weeks and shall go as far south as the Imperial Valley and as far north as Bakersfield in my Chalmers. This car has been into the Yosemite twice and is now in perfect condition. It is trips of that kind that limber up a car," said Irwin.

"Undoubtedly motorists—or many of them—have not visited the Yosemite and other national parks for the very reasons assigned by Mr. Erwin. To visit them in motor cars is an education geographically and one of the best means I know of to secure healthy recreation. It also offers added experience in driving, and teaches a driver how to best handle his car. Now that traveling by train has been curtailed and may be still more, for all we know, the motor car is relied upon more than ever before as a means for transportation, even on long trips," said P. H. Greer of Greer-Robbins, distributor of the Chalmers.

Too Much Class.

AMERICAN TRUCKS ARE SUPREME AT THE FRONT.

WORD has reached here telling of the supremacy of American-built trucks over foreign makes, which are now in use near and about the first-line trenches. The important part now being played by the trucks in furnishing means of transportation was further ascertained.

According to a communication received from his brother, who is now in the thick of the fighting, Percival Corwin, assistant test foreman of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, stated that for the execution of real heavy work the American constructed trucks have far outdone the foreign-made types. Since writing this letter, Corwin has been wounded in the arm.

It is a known fact that Moreland trucks are daily enacting duties right at the "front." Only the most powerful and reliable transporters are assigned to work in the first-line zone, where roads are anything but city boulevards.

There is no possible way of telling the number of trucks now in the combined Allied war service, but it is safe to state, judging from recent reports, the product of Yankee engineering brains is far superior to all others. In other words, the Liberty truck, of which there are three different sizes, and which was designed by the best-known automotive engineers of the United States, has proven a big success. Watt L. Moreland, general manager of the Moreland Truck Company, acted in the capacity of consulting engineer in designing the Liberty truck motor.

"Corwin's letter telling of the prowess of the Moreland equipment over in France is a confirmation of the great praise showered on this typical western product, when it ranked first with the two other trucks in the Mexican free-for-all truck try-out. This was conducted when 'Black Jack' Pershing was pursuing Villa," declared Roy D. Heartz, general sales manager of the Moreland company.

WRIST PIN BUSHING.

To tighten a loose wrist pin bushing when it is located in the connecting rod, take a piece of tubing that will just slip over the bushing on one side of the connecting rod. Next get a piece of metal a little smaller than the bushing to put against it. Put these in a vise and press the bushing out. Now give the bushing about a quarter turn and thrust it back in the connecting rod and you will find the piston pin tight enough to run for some time before it will be necessary to renew the bushings.

FINDING BROKEN WIRE.

It is a difficult matter to locate a broken wire in an ignition cable, unless one knows how. Here is how: Draw each individual wire out somewhere along the cable. Hold a compass within a half inch of the wire. If the current is flowing through the wire, the compass will be deflected from its normal position in one way or the other. A broken wire will have no effect on the instrument, which thereby acts as detective.

Olive Street Loses Another.

NEW LOCATION DEMANDED BY INCREASED BUSINESS.

ANOTHER step toward the disintegration of Olive street as the Automobile Row of Los Angeles will be observed tomorrow when the Irving Motor Car Company, distributers for Cole and Elgin cars open to the public the doors to their new home at the northeast corner of Flower and Eleventh streets. The Cole agency had been housed in the building at No. 842 South Olive street ever since its establishment in this city and is one of the last of the "old timers" to forsake that thoroughfare.

The 1911 model Cole motor car was displayed in the same structure that has seen the recent appearance of the new Aero eight. The Cole had come to be looked upon as an Olive-street fixture and the building with that name on the side was regarded as a landmark. During the period of transition, the car has progressed from the four-cylinder type to the present eight-cylinder engine, which is recognized as one of the most noteworthy achievements of recent years in automobile engineering.

When asked what influenced the change in location, James L. Irving, president of the Irving Motor Car Company, said: "We simply had to have more room than the old location provided. Since the eight-cylinder Cole was put on the market there has been an increase in business that has surpassed all its previous history. Recently we took on the distribution of the Elgin six and the demand for this car ever since has been ahead of the supply. The old building did not have facilities for properly stocking the cars. Both the Cole and Elgin are built in a number of different models and we had to have a larger and better adapted showroom for their fitting display."

STOPPING CRACKS.

The small cracks that frequently make their appearance on the edge of the fender or other sheet metal parts will rapidly become big breaks unless they are nipped in the bud. Drill a small hole in the metal and through the crack, near its outer end. Slip a rivet through and run on a burr and then rivet the head firmly. This prevents vibration of the edges of the crack, which is the trouble that induces the spreading of the crack. A brushful of paint will make this repair invisible.

TIGHTENING BUSHINGS.

It sometimes occurs that after a bushing has been pressed into place, it is found to be loose, so that it cannot be reamed out, because it turns as you try to work on it. In these circumstances take the bushing out and run a coating of solder over the outside of it. There is no need to file this solder down even, because any irregularities will be pushed off as the bushing is pressed home.

REMOVING RIM RUST.

To remove rust from the rims of a car, jack up the rear wheels and start the engine running in high. The wheels will spin and emery paper is applied to the rim with a block and the rust will be eaten off in short order. By removing the fenders and running a band from a rear to a front wheel, the same process may be repeated with the front wheels.

Science Never Stops

GATES HALF SOLE TIRES
Here is Its Latest Product

CHARLES C. GATES, E. M.
The Puncture-Proof Tire
To advance the art of tire building, it was first necessary to discover a new principle in the science of tire construction.
Charles C. Gates discovered that principle, and applied it when he built the first Gates Half-Sole Tire. Today Gates Half-Sole Tires are revolutionizing the whole tire industry. 300,000 car-owners—the largest business firms in the country have adopted them as regular equipment; and by doing so they have cut tire expense in half.
Gates achieved a scientific triumph in the Half-Sole Tire.
First, he succeeded in relieving the fabric carcass from the double strain of inflation pressure and road impact. He protected the fabric carcass from stone bruise and the shocks of the road. He protected it from the moisture which ordinarily soaks to the fabric through tiny cuts and nail holes, and rots it.
Second, he enabled every motorist to enjoy the security of puncture-proof tires, and save money while doing so.
Motorists thought that the rubber tread determined the life of a tire; but Gates proved that a tire will last as long as the fabric carcass is preserved, sound and whole.
Such is the achievement of the Gates Half-Sole Tire.
The result is that you can get 5,000 to 15,000 additional miles of service from the same tire you have been throwing away merely because the tread was worn; and the great factory at Denver has been doubled and redoubled to take care of the demand.
Gates Half-Sole Tires are puncture proof—guaranteed so by the maker—and yet they cost only one-half as much as other guaranteed tires.
Investigate before you buy another tire.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CLEVELAND (O.) July 20.—President James C. Dunn of the Cleveland American League club, today sent the following message to Cleveland from Chicago:

"We will play a double-header with Philadelphia tomorrow and will then close our ball park for the balance of season. It is our desire to comply promptly with Secretary Baker's ruling on baseball."

NATIONAL LEAGUE CONFERENCE CALLED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—A special meeting of National League club owners was called today by President Tener, to be held in this city to discuss the ruling of Secretary Baker, holding baseball in the non-essential industry class, for Wednesday.

FAMOUS WOMAN GOLFER COMING.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

The far-famed woman golfer, Mrs. W. A. Gavin, metropolitan and Eastern States champion, will arrive in Los Angeles on Monday. She has made a tour of the States playing exhibition golf matches for the benefit of the Red Cross and bears a charmed reputation, for she has actually licked Jerome Travers, and given many of our foremost male champions a joyous fight for their laurels. She is as well known in British and French golf realms as in this country.

By her golf she has helped to raise such sizable funds for the benefit of wounded soldiers that numerous units and ambulance corps have been provided by this means, notably the Drake Section Sanitaire, founded by Miss Ethel Drake of Boston, which is attached to the Sixth French Army Corps, and the ambulance dedicated to her brother, Capt. Dudley Ryder, a prisoner in Germany.

Her first match in Los Angeles will take place next Sunday, the 28th, at the Los Angeles Country Club, a two-ball foursome, in which A. D. S. Johnstone will be her partner against R. J. Cash, Jr., and Miss Doreen Kavanagh. Cash is Southern California champion. Mrs. Gavin is as good-looking as she is clever—and her golf is said to be a joy to watch, a lesson in grace, form and exquisite poise.

TENNIS WORLD ALL EXCITED.

Annual Championships Soon to be Played.

Courts of Virginia Hotel will be Used.

Record List of Entries is Predicted.

The tennis world is fairly breathless over the coming Annual Southern California championships to be played on the Hotel Virginia courts at Long Beach during the week beginning July 29. Simpson Sinsabaugh, major domo of the grand affair, and Frank Winne, assistant master of arrangements have hardly slept a wink for the past ten days. The strain is terrific. Sinsabaugh remembers nothing like it since he and De Witt Van Court had their famous duel with a sabertooth tiger in the vicinity of what is now Central Park.

Men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, mixed doubles, ladies special singles and junior events are on the bill of fare for the week's swatfest. With many of the old standbys manning machine guns and helping to aim torpedoes the young bloods figure that they have an excellent chance of lapping up a title or two before curfew sounds on the last night of play.

The official registration of entries will commence tomorrow and it is expected that despite the inroads of war the roll will be as long as ever. Prominent among the women players to compete is Mrs. Adelaide Jaeger, runner-up for the national clay court title, and Miss Hilda Blatz, a high school player of great promise.

Last year the singles title was won by Winnie Mace, who is now with the Grizzlies. The men's doubles title went to Frank Winne and Harvey Snodgrass. Since the latter is now with the Coast Artillery, Nat Browne will back Winne up in the doubles this year.

EXPERT VIEW OF LIBERTY MOTOR.

it does not need the convoy of a single-seater. The man in the second seat does the photographing, makes notes, drops bombs and, in case of accident to the pilot, takes hold of the extra set of controls and brings the wounded man and the machine back to safety.

In my own flight we left the ground in seventy feet and passed through a cloud at about 6000 feet altitude in a fraction over three minutes. I saw 130 miles an hour on the level, and on the day we were up there was a thirty-mile, very choppy gale blowing. They tell me she has made 144 miles per hour, and I have every reason to believe it. I saw her do loops, Immelman turns, nose dives, spirals and every other maneuver of which a single-seater or any other type of plane is capable and she seemed so staunch and easily controlled I felt that I could handle her myself with the usual fifteen-minute instructions that we give a new automobile owner. She has climbed 10,000 feet in seven minutes and twelve seconds, whereas the previous American altitude record was 16,000 feet in three hours. She has made 21,300 feet in fifty minutes.

Also she uses a standard grade of gasoline. Our engineers contended that it was useless to manufacture airplanes in quantities unless we could also ship over quantities of standard cylinder oils and gasoline.

In this regard I am told that not more than 20 per cent. of all the gasoline we have sent to Europe has been used, because the European aviator and his motor are so temperamental that unless he gets his own particular little red can of "essence" and his own mixture of cylinder and castor oil he cannot go up. We can ship a tankload of each and the American machine will use this or any other grade that may be handiest.

SPLIT EVEN.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Philadelphia defeated Cleveland, 10 to 4, in the first game of today's double-header, while the second contest was awarded to the visitors by the score of 9 to 0 when the crowd surged on the field and stood along the foul lines in the second half of the ninth inning. There were no police on the ground. Cleveland was leading, 9 to 1, when Umpire Nallin took action. The scores:

NOTES AND PROBLEMS.

PUBLICATIONS IN THE REALM OF CHECKERS.

BY JOHN DOUGHERTY.

July 21, 1918.

Chess and Checker Headquarters, No. 714 Higgins Building. All chess and checker players invited to join. For further information, see or write the secretary, D. H. Bowes, at the clubrooms.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to John Dougherty, No. 4026 Dalton avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

AMONG THE FANS.

M. L. Davis, a former member of the local club, writes from National City that he has been so busy the past few months that he has had no time for any cross-board play, so would like to take on one or two of the Los Angeles players in a series of correspondence games.

D. C. Whitehill, who recently returned from Uniontown, Pa., has been at the club several times lately and is rapidly rounding into his old-time form.

So many of the prominent checker players have enlisted in the army that checker tournaments are not as numerous as in times of peace. We would like to keep our readers posted on their whereabouts, but they change around so much that it is impossible to keep track of them. From the way the Huns have been moving backwards lately, we surmise that a goodly number of them are "over there."

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 569.
"Denny," 10-14, 24-19.

The following four games were played between Drouillard and Hopewell in the recent city tournament.

Black—Drouillard.			White—Hopewell.
10-14	30-26	10-19	27-23	20-24
24-19	9-13	24-15	11-16	28-19

28-24	6-13	25-22	13-22	17-13
16-20	32-28	2- 7c	26-17	30-26
22-17	11-16	22-18	19-26	14- 9
4- 8	19-15	7-11	31-22	W. wins

a—6-10, as played in the following game, is stronger.
b—Now into the Bristol Cross.
c—This loses. 3-7, 22-18, 7-11, 27-23, 11-16, 31-27, 2-7, 18-14, 7-11, 14-9, 11-18, 23-14, 8-12, is the "book" draw.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 570.
"Denny," 10-14, 24-19.

Black—Hopewell.			White—Drouillard.
10-14	8-11	10-15	6-10	26-23
24-19	24-20	26-23d	28-22	6- 9
6-10	11-15	1- 6	10-14	23-18

9-13	8-11	10-26	25-30
18- 9	19-16	30-23	6- 2
5-14b	13-19	2- 6e	30-26
29-25	23-16	31-26	2- 6

a—22-17 is more commonly played and is strong for White.
b—Now the same as an Edinburgh brought up thus: 9-13, 24-19, 11-15, 28-24, 6-9, 22-18, 15-22, 25-18, 9-14, 18-9, 5-14. c—Weak; 19-16 is regular.
d—No hope after this; 22-17 looks good for a draw.
e—After this White cannot even find a decent way to lose.

18- 9	15-19	26-22	3- 7	19-24
6-13	22-18g	23-26j	9- 5	26-31m
27-20	1- 5	1- 6	7-10	Drawn
4- 8	25-21	26-30	5- 1

a—Being two games down, Drouillard is trying to mix things.
b—And being two games up, Hopewell switches it to a regular Second Double Corner.
c—This is known as "Searight's Variation," a favorite with Hopewell.
d—Battersby drew against Ferris in a Scotch tourney by playing 21-17 at this stage.
e—Better than 22-18, which gives Black a strong game by 13-17.
f—Hopewell once played 25-21 here against the editor and came to grief. He has never repeated the offense. Here is the continuation of the game mentioned:

25-21	26-23	32-27	20-16	27-24
24-28	5- 9*	28-32	32-27	11- 8
31-27	23-18	27-23	27-31	24-20
1- 5	14-23	2- 6*	18-15	14-10
14-10	27-11	22-18	31-27	20-16
7-14	9-14	6- 9	23-19	B. wins

g—White would still come to grief with 25-21. It will interest the amateur to discover how.
h—Drouillard is still playing to the score. 3-8, 26-23, 19-26, 28-19, 26-30, 31-26, is a published draw.
i—From here the ending becomes highly critical for Black.
j—11-15 would lose here, as the White king gets back first.
k—If 10-15, Black draws neatly by 3-7, 15-8, 22-15, 8-3*, 15-10, 3-8 (if 12-8 Black about wins by 10-15,) 10-15 drawn.
l—It is obvious that if White moves 1-6, Black draws by 14-17, 21-14, 22-25, 31-22, 25-2.
m—An interesting and well played game.

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 573.
"Laird and Lady."

About two weeks ago we sent the prisoners in the County Jail a copy of the "Home Checker Companion." As there was some doubt among them as to who should claim ownership to it, a tourney was decided on to settle the mooted question. The following game was the deciding one. The score and notes are by the winner, Fred W. Smith.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Club owners of the American Association will meet in Chicago tomorrow to decide what action that league will take regarding Secretary Baker's interpretation of the work-or-fight order as it affects baseball.

MARPLE WINS.

R. S. Marple galloped away with the golf sweepstakes at the San Gabriel Country Club yesterday afternoon, his ample handicap of sixteen strokes cutting his score of 90 into the skimpy total of 74.

ELEVENTH-HOUR PEPPER BRINGS GAME TO ANGELS

BY EDWIN F. O'MALLEY.

ANGELS, 2; Vernon, 1, but oh, boys, what an eleventh-hour battle! The Tigers—has their equal ever been run up with for ninth inning rallies? Never are they beaten until the last Bengal has curled himself up in the dust. The Angels went to the field in the last part of the ninth canto with the score 2 to 0 in their favor and Bill Pertica pitching airtight ball. It looked all over but the shrieking, especially as Old Reliable Pete Daley, the first Vernon man up in the ninth, popped to Butler.

Then it was that Fighting Bill Essick called on DeVormer to smash her out and De was there with rattles. He shot one past Butler that would have torn Johnny's hands off had he attempted to stop it. Vernon rooters rose to a man and joined with Essick in the call to arms. Wisterzil rifled a dandy to left for one sack, sending DeVormer to second. The air pealed with Vernon hilarity. Hosp popped to Downs amid groans. Roy Mitchell, one of the best pinch hitters on the Coast, was sent in to bat for Fromme. Roy, to the delight of hundreds of Tiger rooters, delivered, singling infield and filling the bases.

ON THE JOB.

Johnny Mitchell, at the plate, nodded to Essick that he was there. The first ball pitched, amid breathless silence, rambled into Johnny's ribs, and he was sent to first, scoring DeVormer. Alcock ambled to the plate. Immortal fame awaited him in case he could slash out a single. Visions of his home town with a brass band awaiting his victorious arrival danced across his mind. A hit meant a victory and the putting of Vernon on even terms with the Angels. On the third ball pitched, Scotty shot every fiber of his body into his biceps, and my, how he did hit that ball! It sailed far out to Rube Ellis's bailiwick, but Rube killjoyed it and sent Essick's hopes glimmering.

Pertica heaved well until the ninth when he grew wobbly and was touched up for three hits. Chech, when it is taken into consideration that he is [illegible] day pitcher, did very well. [illegible] just a shade weak in the [illegible] The Tigers failed to give [illegible] a fact that would discourage [illegible] of twirlers. The series [illegible] Angels, 3; Vernon, 1. [illegible]

Mrs. John N. Klepinger, a young matron of Great Falls, Mont., who has been a summer guest at the Maryland, is spending a few weeks at Coronado. Mr. Klepinger is a mining man.

A patriotic dance, given at the Knights of Columbus Hall, by the members of the Young Ladies' Institute and attended by soldiers from Arcadia, was such a success that the affair is to be held monthly. The grand march was led by Miss Grace Hickey, president of the Y.L.I. and M. C. Donovan, grand knight Among the special guests of the evening were Mrs. Cecilia Greenbaum and Miss Marion Greenbaum of Los Angeles, and Miss Elsie Schou of San Francisco, a grand officer of the institute. Miss Ellen Bickley headed the committee in charge of arrangements. Miss Hickey and Miss Irene Gerheart attended the State convention of the Y.L.I., held on Saturday at San Jose.

A musicale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Fortune, was favored by Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond, a life-long friend of Mrs. Fortune, and composer of "A Perfect Day." Father Datin, a French priest; Arthur Dodsworth, Mrs. Henly Bussing, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Stoneman of Phoenix, Ariz., and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Titcomb were among those present.

Santa Barbara.

LA CHIQUITA, the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis T. Underhill, was the scene of a brilliant gathering of society and professional people on Tuesday, assembled at the bronze exhibit made by Prince Troubetskoy. About the grounds most costly art works were displayed, the out-of-doors, with palms, ferns, grass, flowers and trees enhancing, very decidedly, the work of the noted Russian artist. The exhibit was given as a benefit for the American Red Cross Society, and proved financially as great a success as it was notable as a society gathering. The week has teemed with war relief benefits, the close of the week's activities coming with a great street fair Friday for St. Vincent Orphanage. The fair was managed by Mrs. P. H. Rice and Mrs. E. W. Stow. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Price Knott of Montecito and other notables have assisted in the success of the affair.

A moonlight musicale soiree is to be given Friday of the coming week at "El Furiedes," the Italian villa of J. Waldron Gillespie, in Montecito. Mrs. Isaac R. Baxley and Mrs. George Whitelaw have charge of the decorations.

Mrs. Manning, Miss Harlett Passmore and Roy Rhodes will sing. The programme is to be given as a benefit for the Fatherless Children of France.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Paramore motored to San Pedro yesterday to visit with their sons, James and Edward, who are in training at the naval station. They expect to be absent through the week.

A brilliant dance and dinner for the younger set was enjoyed Thursday at the Santa Barbara Country Club by Mrs. John P. Jefferson, in honor of her niece, Miss Alice Wetmore. About fifty young folks participated. Previous to the dance Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson were hosts at a dinner given in honor of a group of their older friends.

Miss Laura Kaime was hostess at a luncheon given Monday at the Country Club in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Macondray Moore.

Mrs. Frank King of San Francisco, who is spending the summer at Miramar, entertained with a luncheon on Saturday at El Mirasol. Covers were laid for six.

Lieutenant-Commander Van Antwert of New York, head of the government secret service for the Pacific Coast, and one of the "dollar a year" men, arrived yesterday from San Francisco with Walter Filer, to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Filer at their Montecito residence. The coming of the Filers is a society event, and much brilliant entertaining is anticipated.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Spaulding entertained a little group of friends at their Montecito home on Tuesday with a splendidly appointed dinner.

Mrs. Samuel K. Dowell was guest of honor at an informal luncheon given Tuesday by her daughter, Mrs. John Tanner at El Mirasol.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bliss entertained about twenty friends at their Montecito home the fore part of the week with an organ recital.

Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Baxley of Montecito were hosts Wednesday evening at a dinner given in honor of Mrs. William Miller Graham, who has just returned from a long residence in New York and Washington. Many little social affairs are being planned in honor of Mrs. Graham, who has been a leader in Montecito society for a number of years.

Montebello.

MISS MARIE BRIGGS and Miss Mabel Smith enjoyed a delightful week-end outing at the Los Angeles playgrounds in San Dimas Canyon, whither they went Friday afternoon, in company with about forty teachers and students from the U.S.C. summer school.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Schaack of Washington avenue left Thursday for Chicago, where they will spend the next two months visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Morris have returned from Manzanar, where they went a few weeks ago on a vacation camping trip.

Mrs. E. A. Martin had as guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pearson and family of Garden Grove, and Mr. Charles Risinger and family of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Sharpless of Perris, are guests this week at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Burt Vorce of Whittier boulevard.

Miss Ada Taylor of Fresno was the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Taylor, the past week.

Mrs. C. A. Sampson and two young sons and Mrs. Louis Noble and children joined some friends Saturday in a pleasant day's outing at Long Beach.

Beaumont.

MISS A. M. BOULTON and Miss Bethune Shipp of Mesa Miravilla were called to San Diego the first of the week by the serious illness of the former's aunt, Miss Jane Street, whose home is with the Boulton family on the mesa, and who has orchard interests here.

Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Keith and their daughters, Misses Alma and Mary, of San Francisco have been visiting with their daughter, Mrs. Ivan Keith, for the past week. Lieut. Keith left for Fort Riley recently.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Crowther motored to Idylwild in the San Jacinto mountains over Sunday.

Mr. George Ivy and his sister, Miss Virginia Ivy of North Carolina, nephew and niece of A. T. Gantt, whose guests they have been for several weeks, left the latter part of the week for the East. Mr. Ivy was called back to enter an officers training camp until designated from his college.

Mrs. Kate Wray left on Tuesday for a month's trip and will spend most of the time at the beaches of the south coast.

Mrs. N. A. Jeffries, who has been away for several months visiting friends returned the first of the week and will be here for the balance of the summer.

The many friends of Prof. and Mrs. G. W. Green of our schools are rejoicing with them over the news that has reached here that a little girl has come to their home. The family is spending the summer at San Jacinto.

Duarte.

ONE of the pleasant patriotic social functions of the week was the dancing party given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waterman, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Munro at the Duarte home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Rives, in compliment of the officers and their wives of the Arcadia Balloon School. Los Rios Rancho, so often the scene of gaiety, was beautiful in its midsummer array of blossoms and the pavilion was gay with flags and Japanese lanterns. Among the guests other than the officers were a number of ladies and gentlemen from Monrovia, Arcadia and Duarte.

George Brewer of Fullerton was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. Pro Elliott

Mrs. Kenneth Carter entertained informally Sunday afternoon and evening in honor of her husband, the anniversary of whose natal day fell on that date. The affair was in the nature of a garden party and supper was served at half after 7 o'clock. During the evening Mr. Carter was the recipient of many good wishes and congratulations. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Benedict Schupp, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jarvis, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Millard and Wayland Smith of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. William McShane and Mrs. G. H. Weaver of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waterman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Dekuatel, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bienecke, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Spinks, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Woolridge, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Munro, Mrs. Worden, Col. Monny, Lieuts. Howard Verback, Kelley and Hallbeck, Lieut. and Mrs. C. K. Sherman, Miss Dorothy Brown and Arthur Combs.

Mrs. H. F. Carlander was hostess on Wednesday to the ladies of the W.C.T.U. It was a pleasant gathering socially and from a philanthropic standpoint, a great success, as work was completed for the Belgian relief. Over 100 garments have been completed, comfort kits for soldiers made and a large number of linen medicine covers finished.

The ladies of the Jolly Five Hundred Club are doing their patriotic duty during the summer by meeting every fortnight in the auditorium of the Duarte School to sew and knit. Work for the French relief is now under way. At noon a picnic lunch is enjoyed.

Mrs. J. A. Maddock and daughters are pleasantly located at Hermosa Beach for the summer.

William Brunner and daughter, Miss Dorothy, of Delano, have been enjoying a week at the ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brunner in Duarte.

A party of six Duarte folks enjoyed a week-end house party at Newport Beach. The members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Radabaugh and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine.

A delightful social evening was enjoyed by the young people of the Epworth League Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Charlton assisted in entertaining.

Mrs. Samuel B. Elliott, Mrs. William Parsons and Mrs. Clarence Charlton spent several days this week in Santa Ana.

George Marvin Wicks left Tuesday for Fort McDowell to enter military service.

Monrovia.

MISS THERESA STEINER was hostess to the members of the Cackle Club Tuesday evening. The time was spent with knitting. Members present included Mrs. Edward Laughren, Mrs. C. H. Anson, Mrs. L. N. Burdett, Mrs. Merle Mosher, Mrs. E. D. Brewer and the Misses Mildred Wardell, Marie and Rose Maxwell.

Miss Irma Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Brown of West Orange avenue, left the first of the week for St. Louis, Mo., where she will visit her grandparents for several months. From St. Louis she will go to Carthage, Mo., where she will resume the study of music under the direction of Miss Lucille Barnes, a former Monrovia girl. Miss Brown will also enter the High School at Carthage.

Mrs. Joseph H. Byrnes and little daughter, Winifred of Des Moines, Iowa, have arrived in Monrovia for a three-months' visit at the home of Mrs. Byrne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Davies of West White Oak avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. William Reed of Elmwood, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith of Glendale, Cal., were callers Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Caverly of North Myrtle avenue. Mrs. T. C. Radbone of Los Angeles, who has been visiting in Monrovia for the past week, accompanied them home.

Mrs. S. E. Earl and daughter, Velma, of Quincy, Ill., are spending two months at the home of Mrs. Earl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Rood of Grand avenue.

Members of the Domestic Science Club were delightfully entertained at the home of Miss Louise Hutchins on Thursday. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock, for which California products were used, the menu of which was strictly in accordance with laws of the United States Food Administration. An oriental bouquet of summer flowers formed a beautiful centerpiece for the table, at which covers were laid for fourteen. The party adjourned to the veranda for the afternoon, where the time was spent with knitting for the Red Cross.

A. P. Whitmore of Omaha, Neb., arrived in Monrovia on Friday for a few weeks' visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Y. Whitmore of Wild Rose avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Bryant and children, Bruce and Helen, returned on Friday evening from a delightful two-weeks' motor trip in the Yosemite National Park.

C. A. Sargent entertained with a stag party at his home on East Lime avenue on Friday evening, having a round table assemblage of an even dozen. Invited guests included Messrs. Arthur Seymoure, Dr. H. G. Brownfield, Dr. S. E. Salisbury, E. E. Rives, M. J. Conway, Henry S. Gierlich, C. O. Banks, John P. Dunn, Walter F. Dunn, H. J. Evans, George O. Monroe. Whist was the diversion of the evening with refreshments served at the close of the game.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Rives, Los Rios Rancho, was the scene, on Saturday evening, of the smartest social event of the week, when H. Waterman and J. Allen Munro entertained in compliment to Lieut.-Col. W. N. Hensley, Jr., and his staff of officers and their wives, from Arcadia balloon school. Dancing in the pavilion furnished entertainment with music by Casey's Orchestra, and throughout the evening punch was served in the gardens. The hosts were assisted by their wives, Mrs. Waterman and Mrs. Munro. Guests other than the officers numbered about thirty.

In celebration of the eighty-sixth birthday anniversary of her mother, Mrs. Jane Smith, Mrs. W. A. Chess entertained on Thursday with a 1 o'clock luncheon at her home on West White Oak avenue. A patriotic color scheme was noted in the table decorations, the centerpiece being of flowers in red, white and blue. A pleasing feature of the luncheon was the presentation to the guest of honor of a birthday cake decorated with candles of the national colors and small American flags. The guest list was made up of the guest of honor, Mrs. Smith; Mmes. Stephen Bowerman, C. P. Carpenter, T. R. Crandall, Jane Barnes, Rachel Benham, Louise M. Butts, Hannah Newman, G. A. Lawrence, Jennie R. Slosson, Anna Slosson and Mrs. H. W. Ellis of Mohamet, Ill., a sister of Mrs. Smith.

The Diamond Situation

For many years the market price of perfect diamonds has shown a constant and definite upward tendency, due to conditions of supply and demand.

Since the war this tendency has been greatly accentuated by various factors, not the least of which, however, is the growing scarcity of perfect stones.

Authorities express the opinion that no element can intervene to check the upward tendency of price, for while perfect stones are becoming scarcer and scarcer the demand is growing greater and greater.

Feagans & Co. present this situation, not with the motive of unduly influencing the purchase of diamonds, but that patrons may possess the facts and possibly profit thereby.

The Feagans & Co. diamond stocks are especially notable for unusual gems in the larger sizes in round, square, nauvette and pear shapes, weighing up to 4 carats.

At $25.00, $50.00, $75.00, $100.00

MRS. FRANKLIN RIGGS, wife of Col. Franklin Riggs, one of the pioneer mining men of the Mojave desert, has returned to her home here after a 400-mile automobile trip to visit the Alta Sister mine at Riggs. Mrs. Riggs, with her chauffeur and maid, traveled entirely at night, but despite the heat enjoyed the trip and found excellent progress being made on the big new mill being built. Mrs. Riggs says that the women of the mining camps are knitting and doing their bit in Red Cross work.

Mrs. C. M. Brown, Miss Lena Dague and Mrs. A. P. Dunn, who represented the local Y.W.C.A. at the meeting in Los Angeles when Miss Vena Phillips, executive secretary of the organization, explained the plan for the forming of a women's association similar to the National Chamber of Commerce, have made a report on the meeting to the women here. Great interest has been aroused among the club women over the proposed organization.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney V. Horton, Jr., who have just returned from an automobile trip through Southern California on their honeymoon, were surprised at their new home on Linda place last evening, when about fifty of their friends called for a house-warming. They brought many beautiful gifts for the bride.

Miss Norma Niblack of Glendale is the guest of Mrs. William Shepherd at the Shepherd camp in Mountain Home Canyon. Thursday night fifteen young people drove to the camp from this city in automobiles and surprised Miss Niblack. The evening was spent in dancing.

Alhambra.

WORD has been received in this city of the marriage recently in San Mateo of Miss Claire Soule, daughter of Mrs. W. L. G. Soule, No. 924 North Curtis avenue, and Lieut. Welford D. Seay of Camp Lewis. Because of Lieut. Seay's departure overseas the young couple met at the home of friends in San Mateo. The service was read in the Episcopal church, followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Glossbeck. The bride wore a gown of white georgette crepe trimmed with rose point lace and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia rose sand gardenias. Miss Mardaline Soule was maid of honor and Lieut. Seay's best man was a brother officer. Mrs. Seay is head of the English department of Pasadena High School and Lieut. Seay is also a member of the faculty and athletic coach.

A surprise wedding took place last week in San Francisco when Sarah E. Boone of Los Angeles became the bride of Glen C. Wallace, a well-known resident of Alhambra. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace are touring the northern part of the State and will be at home to their friends after August 1 at the Wallace home on Granada.

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Reed W. Rogers gave opportunity to a company of friends to greet each other informally. The affair complimented Mrs. N. Sharp, who recently arrived here to make her permanent home. The hours were spent at various kinds of needle work and knitting, and the hostess served ices and coffee. Those who enjoyed the afternoon together with the hostess and honor guest were Mrs. D. E. Corfield, Mrs. C. S. Huff, Mrs. E. L. Farmer, Mrs. J. B. Hoover, Mrs. J. T. Save Sugar—Save Flour

Yet Serve Luscious Fruit Desserts

Facts to Know

In these times every housewife should know Jiffy-Jell. It means rich, fruity desserts, instantly made, without the addition of sugar.

It means supreme desserts, without the use of flour or sugar, at half the cost of pastry.

It means a way to serve fresh fruit, mixed in jell, to save many ounces of sugar.

It means zestful salads made with vegetable left-overs, and jellied meat loaves made with scraps. All delightful products.

Sugar is needed now for canning. Your supply is restricted. Wastes must be utilized, flour must be conserved. So we make these offers to let every woman see how Jiffy-Jell can serve her.

We urge you, for your own sake, to learn how folks enjoy it.

Jiffy-Jell

For Quick, Fruity Desserts and Salads

Fruit-Juice Flavors Sealed in Glass

No Sugar Need Be Added

Jiffy-Jell is the only product which serves these uses well. It is the only gelatine dainty with true-fruit flavors, highly concentrated, sealed in glass vials.

These bottled flavors do not lose their freshness. They give to Jiffy-Jell a wealth of fresh-fruit taste. Thus Jiffy-Jell desserts and salads taste like fruit-made dainties.

You make Jiffy-Jell by simply adding boiling water, then the flavor from the vial. One package makes dessert for six. If you whip the jell it serves twelve.

To serve fresh fruit, preserved fruit or pastry for six requires 8 to 12 ounces of sugar. Pastry requires flour in addition. The average cost is at least twice the cost of Jiffy-Jell.

Or you can mix fresh fruit in Jiffy-Jell, without adding sugar, and have a double-fruit dessert.

With Lime or Mint Jiffy-Jell you can make delicious salads, zestful and green. Use left-overs in cooked vegetables. Or use fresh vegetables.

Mix in meat scraps with these flavors and you have a jellied meat loaf. This is a delightful way to save waste.

Millions now use Jiffy-Jell as a conservation dainty. They get fruity desserts and salads of the finest sort, at trifling cost, without using sugar or flour.

We want you to know what it means to you. See how it differs from old-style gelatine products. Buy two packages to try, then send us the coupon, and we will send you molds worth more than you pay for Jiffy-Jell.

Accept this offer, for it means a test at really no cost at all.

MR. AND MRS. LORENZ SCHMIDT of No. 7918 Bell avenue returned Saturday evening from Catalina, where four days had been spent in a bit of a vacation.

G. F. Foster, also of Bell avenue, spent his ten-day vacation at home with his family, who enjoyed several automobile trips to beaches, canyons and parks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Norton of Bisbee, Ariz., left Saturday a week, after a three-weeks' visit with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Anderson of No. 1912 East Seventy-seventh street.

Robert Becker, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Becker of Morton avenue, returned last Sunday from San Diego, where he spent a week at the home of his aunt and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Badwin.

During the week spent at the home of her sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Reed, Pasadena avenue, Long Beach, Mary Foster of Bell avenue and chum, Ethel Stout of Seventy-sixth street, were guests at a soiree given in their honor. They returned home last Sunday evening.

Santa Ana.

EDWIN MAIER, fireman in the navy stationed at Balboa Park, San Diego, was tendered a surprise party Tuesday night while on furlough at the home of his parents on Seventeenth street. Those joining in the pleasures of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Maier, Mrs. and Mrs. S. S. Vogt, Mr. and Mrs. H. Maier, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schroeder, Misses Helen Kubitz, Esther Boose, Rose and Alma Schroeder, Elsie and Mabel Gackstetter, Edna Kuechel, Viola Sauermann, Lovina Opp, Ethel Maier, and the Messrs. Harold and Homer Holzgrafe, Ezra Sauermann, Herbert Boose, Arthur Kubitz, Albert Kuechel, and George Yankee.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stark were hosts at a pleasantly appointed informal dinner party Tuesday evening, covers being laid, besides the family, for Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Holt and two daughters of Santa Cruz, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Holt and daughter of Garden Grove, and J. W. Johnson.

Robert Lee Hill, who enters hospital work at Mare Island, and Herbert Battermann of Orange, who has joined the navy, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Hill and Miss Ardis Burns at a matinee and dinner party one day recently at Los Angeles.

Carl Fraser, formerly of Anaheim and recently piano instructor here, was the honor guest at a farewell party Monday night at the A. T. Armstrong home, hostesses being Miss Ruth Armstrong and Miss Leila Ritner. Fraser has enlisted as an army musician and left the past week for Camp Kearny. Those present at the farewell besides the hostesses and guest of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Babbitt, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Garroway, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Miles, Mrs. Russell Coleman, A. J. Gluck, Miss Hart, and Mr. Brown, the two latter of Los Angeles.

Another farewell affair was that tendered Harold Van Patten, recently enlisted in the Naval Reserve, at his home when a number of friends called to wish him godspeed in his new work.

Palomar.

MR. AND MRS. W. D. HENDRY and family exchanged Palomar for Hollywood residence, having sold their home on Tenth street to Mr. and Mrs. J. Roberts of Springdale, who, with their three children will soon be located here.

Mrs. Lavina Carr is spending the summer with her daughter and family in Michigan, having left recently on her eastern trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Keiffer of Tenth street are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a son, who has been christened Oliver, Jr.

Among those to spend a recent day at San Pedro were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jett, Mrs. A. Ferris and children and former residents of Palomar, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn King and son, Arthur, of Melvin avenue, Watts.

Glendale.

MRS. ELLA RICHARDSON has entertained with a series of week-end house parties for soldiers and sailors at her home, No. 805 South Central avenue, for the past few weeks, following the several large dances she gave during the weeks of rifle range practice when she kept open house for the boys of the several companies at work on the range. Privates Raymond Mason and Cecil Harmon, both of Co. B, Coast Artillery, were house guests this past week, while the previous week four sailor lads were the honor guests, being: Earl C. Nost, Harry E. Patterson, Frank A. Prouty and Charles A. Harrison. Several college girls were guests at the same time and many others of the young people of Glendale and their older friends came in for the informal dances on Saturday evenings and the dinners served under the trees on Sundays.

Mrs. J. G. Hunchberger entertained with a pink luncheon at her home, No. 344 South Central avenue, on Friday, as a final gathering for a little group of friends who are soon to leave for various points for summer vacations. Those present besides the hostess were: Mmes. Emil Tholen, Harry Goodwin, Walter Stamps, Lawrence Ellis, Benjamin Logan and W. E. Evans.

A farewell shower was given on Thursday afternoon for Mrs. T. F. McCrea, formerly of Glendale, who will leave in August for China with Mr. McCrea, who is now stationed at Camp Kearny in Y.M.C.A. work. Needles and pins and other notions difficult to get in far-off China were the articles featured in the shower which was held at the Baptist Church.

A quiet home wedding was celebrated on Sunday evening when Miss Laura Sturges, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Sturges of No. 213 Jackson street, was married to Merle Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Martin of Escondido, Elder H. G. Lucas officiating. About twenty of the immediate relatives of the young couple were present. Mr. Martin will leave on Monday for Camp Lewis, after a brief wedding trip in San Diego. Mrs. Martin plans to join him soon, and expects to make her home in Tacoma.

Mrs. Lawrence Ellis, of No. 537 South Kenwood street, who is to leave Glendale next week for her new home in Seattle, has been the honor guest at several affairs during the past week. On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. W. E. Evans was hostess at her home, No. 113 Orange street, at a card party given to compliment Mrs. Ellis, who was the winner of the special guest prize. Refreshments were served following the cards. Those present were: Mmes. Laurence Ellis, W. L. Weaver, J. J. Hunchberger, Warren Roberts, Walter Stamps, Pauline Russell, Harry Lockwood, Harry Goodwin, Emil Tholen, Genevieve Goss, Benjamin Logan and W. E. Evans.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Ellis was again honored when Mrs. H. E. Bartlett entertained at her home, No. 101 South Brand boulevard, with a tea by way of farewell for Mrs. Ellis, attended by a large number of Glendale and Los Angeles women.

Miss Grace Crampton entertained on Wednesday evening with a little dancing party at her home, No. 1011 Chestnut street, at which three Coast Artillery boys of Co. C were the special guests. They were: John Barrett, Clarence Hamilton and Claude James, all of the Fifty-fifth Ammunition Train, San Pedro. Miss Crampton was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. T. Crampton and by the Misses Violet and Alma Turner.

The engagement of Miss Carrie Stone to Cadet W. H. Johnson of the Royal Air Forces, Canada, has been announced with a party given by her mother, Mrs. J. A. Stone, to a number of Miss Stone's girl friends, at her home, No. 865 Glendale avenue. Mr. Johnson is expected here on a furlough during the month of August, when arrangements for the wedding will be completed.

Dr. and Mrs. A. A. MacIntyre entertained with a dinner at their home, No. 142 South Central avenue, on Thursday when Dr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Thornton of San Diego were special guests. Dr. and Mrs. Thornton are on a vacation motor trip which takes them to Camp Baldy this week.

San Gabriel.

A MERRY company of young folks were entertained at a lawn party on Monday evening given by Mary Dequine and Mary Hardwick at the home of the former. The eighteen guests who enjoyed the games, dancing and refreshments were: Louise Byng, Jeannette Durand, Pearl Long, Elma Valandingham, Joy Johnson, Loraine Kolinsky, Florence McIntyre, Harold Clark, Jean Durand, Marion Miller, Carl Nelson, Jack Foote, Edgar Strickland, Charles Riddle and Lois McIntyre.

Sergt. Jack Ely, who is in the aviation section of the Signal Corps, and who is stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, O., arrived Wednesday in Van Nuys. His furlough extends to the 25th of this month.

Mrs. William Ford and daughter, Miss Beulah Dinsmort, left Monday for Pittsburgh, Pa., where they will visit relatives and friends.

Miss Marselle Augden of Los Angeles spent Sunday in Van Nuys visiting Miss Violet Hepburn.

Mrs. J. T. Kile of Reno, Nev., and Miss Gertrude Keck of Butler, Pa., were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Keffer.

Garden Grove.

A MARRIAGE of interest to the people of this community was that of Miss Edith Simmons and John Hudson, reecntly at Santa Ana.

The Red Cross Society has been benefited to the extent of nearly $100 by affairs given under the auspices of the girl students of Garden Grove High School in this city, and by Messrs. Clemons and Donaldson at Cordinez, the latter affair being a dancing party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Price have returned from a pleasurable seaside stay, Laguna Beach having been the rendezvous for them, their daughter, Mrs. S. Valle and her son, Robert, and a number of friends who joined them later in their stay at the shore. The group was entertained at the cottage of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Price who, with their family are spending their vacation at Laguna. Others in the party were Mrs. M. V. Knott and Mrs. M. Preston of Azusa and the John Preston family of Cypress.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Dungan have returned from a delightful month's stay at Grant's Park, the Yosemite Valley and other interesting points. They are the first contingent to return of a party that journeyed north together recently. The others were Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Cloyes and Harris Cloyes of this city, and they were still at Yosemite when the Dungans left there.

Miss Goldie Mayhew has returned from a sojourn in Los Angeles where she spent two months at the Bible Institute, engaged in teacher training work. Her friends gave her a warm welcome on her return here as she was much missed during her absence.

Ontario.

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. James K. Salling, No. 726 South Vine avenue, was the scene of a happy gathering Wednesday evening, when a merry party of friends assembled to partake of a dinner marking the silver wedding anniversary of the hosts. White carnations and asparagus plumosis fern were used with artistic effect in decoration. Dinner was announced at 7 o'clock and was served in five courses. The bride and groom of twenty-five years ago were the recipients of many beautiful and costly pieces of silverware. Covers at the dinner table were marked for Mr. and Mrs. N. Holen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. John Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Johnson, Miss Alice Holen, Miss Elsie Peterson, Miss Helen Salling, Miss Elsie Salling, Miss Ethel Salling, Ralph Salling, Samuel Salling, Alfred Salling and Mr. and Mrs. James K. Salling.

Complimenting Mrs. Nella Smith of Pasadena, her house guest and Mrs. Harold Hubert Knox, who left later in the week to make her home in Eureka, Mrs. H. William Kendrick entertained Monday afternoon with a charmingly informal tea, at her home, No. 701 East E street. Roses and fernery were used in decoration. The early portion of the afternoon was devoted to needlework and chat, and a tempting collation followed. Present were: Mrs. Nella Smith, Mrs. Harold Hubert Knox, Mrs. Frank C. Burlingame, Mrs. Walter A. Lewis, Mrs. William H. Gorbett, Mrs. Albert Schaefer, Mrs. Etta Feax, Mrs. James E. Douglas, Mrs. Charles Goodchild, Mrs. William H. Fowler, Mrs. Rush Grange, Mrs. Earl Beck, Miss Clara Smith and Mrs. H. William Kendrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hubert Knox were honored Monday evening when members of the World-Wide Guild and the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church, in both of which Mrs. Knox has been an active member, entertained with a farewell reception in the Sunday-school auditorium of the church, which was decorated for the occasion in huge hydrangeas and flags. Contributing to the programme of the evening were Mrs. Leonard Baugh Fowler, Bruce Moore, Robert Bates and Herman J. Powell. Refreshments were served by members of the Philathea Sunday-school Class, of which Mrs. Knox has been the teacher for some time past. About 100 attended the reception.

Florence.

MR. AND MRS. A. SEYMOUR SCOTT of No. 1730 East Florence avenue spent last week-end in San Diego, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Irving E. Benson. Plans are made to leave by motor next Saturday for Santa Barbara to spend a week or ten days, the remainder of Mr. Scott's two-weeks' vacation to be spent at Catalina.

Wednesday Evening Whist Club members were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fleming of No. 7426 Walnut drive. First prizes were awarded the hostess and E. J. Lloyd, the second being carried off by Mrs. J. F. Graves and the host.

Complimentary to her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Linn of Harrisburg, Pa., who left the following Friday after a three weeks' visit at the homes of their mother and brother, Mrs. J. A. Linn and J. W. Linn of No. 2017 East Seventy-seventh street; sisters, Mrs. E. E. Green of No. 1917 Nadeau avenue, and Mrs. John Heck, No. 1904 East Seventy-eighth street. Mrs. Heck entertained Sunday with a family dinner of ten covers.

As a courtesy to Mrs. Clara Allen, chairman of the local Red Cross auxiliary, Mrs. M. E. Lindrot was hostess at a prettily-appointed luncheon of eight covers Tuesday at her home, No. 2016 Kennebeck street. Music, needlework and social chat occupied the time most pleasantly for Mrs. E. J. Lloyd, secretary of the Red Cross; Mrs. J. A. Fleming, chairman of the surgical department; Mrs. Thomas Lewis, instructor in the surgical work; Mrs. M. A. Steves, Mrs. William Hey, Miss Eleanor Bayne, Mrs. Allen and the hostess.

Graham.

THE Graham-Russell American Red Cross auxiliary will hold a grand auction sale at headquarters, No. 1735 East Manchester avenue, next Saturday from noon until sundown, when a cafeteria supper will be served and a musical treat given until 10 in the evening. Mrs. J. C. Ginn, chairman, assisted by a committee composed of Mrs. J. S. Nolan, Mrs. D. Syson, Mrs. D. Henwood, Mrs. J. F. Stienberg, Mrs. H. Evans, Mrs. E. Rork, Mrs. E. G. Bond, Mrs. George Hineman and Mrs. C. L. Kirk, will assist. W. T. Moxley, well-known auctioneer, will have charge of the sale. The members plan to sell home-made cakes, pies, household articles, canned goods, second-hand clothing, quilts and rag rugs, which have been donated by the auxiliary. A special programme has been arranged for the evening, when several unique numbers will be given.

Eight mutual friends, who have been in the habit of meeting at their respective homes alternate weeks, were delightfully entertained Friday at the home of Mrs. R. C. Morrison, No. 1722 Greenwood avenue, who served a prettily-appointed luncheon at noon. Covers were placed for Mrs. H. M. DeTemple, Mrs. A. J. Gottschalk, Mrs. A. Osner, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Mrs. O. M. Bourland, Mrs. R. G. Raymer and the hostess. Dainty needlework and social chat occupied the afternoon.

Sixteen covers were laid at the basket luncheon Thursday in the parlors of Congregational Church, when the Ladies' Aid held its regular all-day meeting. Red Cross work filled the hours following the noon-day spread, and members present included Mrs. R. C. Lewis, Mrs. Nellie Hoffner, Mrs. Ellis Jones, Mrs. William Carr, Mrs. C. Everett, Mrs. John and Jacob Heldorn, Mrs. Warner Hahn, Mrs. John Van Valkenberg, Mrs. J. Sweeny, Mrs. H. Gardena.

MRS. WILLIAM ROBERTS entertained Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Tully of Eagle Rock, last Sunday.

Mrs. A. F. Kadock and daughters, Helen and Anita, of Los Angeles were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wills. On Wednesday Mrs. Wills made up a picnic party, taking their guests to Hermosa Beach for the day. Mrs. William Gretten and daughter, Mildred, Mrs. A. A. Bamford and Mrs. George Burke also enjoyed the day at Hermosa Beach on Wednesday.

Mrs. Edith Abbott has for several days been nursing a broken arm. When she and a friend, Mrs. Will S. Fawcett of El Centro were about starting for an automobile drive, Mrs. Abbott found the electric starter would not work, and attempted to crank the machine, with the resultant injury.

The Magnolia Centinela Club met Monday at the home of Mrs. W. M. Gray, where they were delightfully entertained.

Rev. Irvine Engle, wife and two sons, are spending the week at Huntington Beach. Other Gardena people there are Miss Marguerite Stone, Miss Margaret Lawler and Mrs. Charles Sergison.

Mrs. J. A. McMillan recently entertained her sister, Mrs. H. S. Bunth of Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. George Myers are at Nevada Springs for a week's outing.

The following party are at Bear Valley for a week: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Neubert, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Paull, Mrs. J. H. Bowen, Harry Bowen, Miss Anna May Elliston, Mrs. May McLaughlin, Kenneth McLaughlin.

Moneta.

MRS. CARL DUNN, accompanied by guests, Mrs. John Young of Fillmore, and the Misses May and Edith Quandt of Redlands, motored to San Pedro Saturday, visiting the Naval Reserve there. On Sunday Mrs. Dunn drove the party to Santa Paula and Fillmore, Mrs. Young returning to her home at the latter place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Brown, with Miss Lillian and Richard, spent Sunday at Seal Beach.

Mrs. T. H. Bateman and two sons, Paul and George, are in Denver for a month's visit with Mrs. Bateman's mother, Mrs. E. A. Summons, of that city.

Misses Esther and Ruth Hale, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hale of Western avenue, entertained last week two young friends from Covina, the Misses Mildred and Maxime Roscoe.

Mr. and Mrs. William Darnell, Miss Frances Darnell and Miss Lillian Brown made a recent two-day trip to San Diego, motoring on Saturday to Camp Kearny, where they found several Gardena Valley boys, among them being Messrs. Theodore Lacey, Kenneth Pickerts and William Manlove.

The newly-organized Red Cross Society is planning for a street sale on Saturday of fruits, vegetables and cooked foods. The location of the street booth is the Riverside-Redondo boulevard, just west of Western avenue.

Whittier.

MRS. LUCY Guirado Forster entertained at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Guirado of No. 427 North Greenleaf avenue, during the week, complimentary to Miss Louise Sanchez, who is to wed Einas H. Hoff, Wednesday, July 24. The affair was a linen shower for the bride-elect. Mrs. Joseph Waldapel assisted the young hostess in serving. Miss Zenobia Sanchez, a sister of the bride-elect, sang a couple of numbers. Miss Sanchez comes from one of the old Spanish families of Southern California, and is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Rollins Sanchez of Los Nietos. The guests included the honoree and the entertaining hostesses, Mrs. F. A. Sanchez, the mother, Miss Zenobia and Miss Lucy Sanchez, sisters; the Mmes. Mary Bable, Joseph E. Waldapfel, Walter Key, Amelia Bickel, F. Krone, Elizabeth Gales, Sam Perkins, F. F. Pellissier, J. Allen, C. A. Gale, Juan Sanchez, E. Bayha, all of the Whittier district; Mrs. D. The Red Cross work of the Whittier Woman's Club was successfully started Tuesday of this week with the cutting of fifty-nine garments. Wednesday a battery of eight sewing machines began work on these garments. Tuesday will be regular cutting day, and Wednesday and Thursday will be sewing days. Mrs. A. L. Coffman is chairman of the Red Cross auxiliary of the Woman's Club.

A Whittier couple were married at Santa Ana Friday, the parties being Miss Hazel Cole, who came to Whittier about a year ago from Bakersfield, and Rollo Forsythe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Forsythe of South Comstock avenue. The groom is employed by the Standard Oil Company. The young folks will make their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Horine returned to Victorville this week after a short visit at the parental Rev. Horine home.

Mrs. E. J. Hummell and small daughter spent the week with Mr. Hummell's parents at Huntington Beach. Prof. Hummell is spending the summer in special work at Berkeley.

Forest Home has been the Mecca this week for a group of Whittier families, who are finding it congenial to take their vacation together. The party includes the families of J. B. Montgomery, L. C. Stanley, Gordon Saunders and Carl Trueblood.

Rialto.

LURED by the cooler atmosphere of canyon and beach resorts, society affairs of the current week have been mostly the usual exodus to mountain camps and seaside. Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Will Needham, Mrs. Anna Gillis, little Zella Gillis and Ruth Boatman motored to Lytle Creek, where a pleasant camp was established near Glenn Ranch. Tuesday the party was joined by little June Tibbot.

Ocean Park claimed Mrs. Earl Downing, daughter Dorothy, and grandmother, Mrs. Isabelle Gelston. Mrs. J. R. McKinley is the guest of relatives at Long Beach. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ehrhorn and son, Charles, have returned to their cottage at Balboa. Others at the same beach are Mrs. E. M. Lash and sons, Mrs. C. N. Johnson and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. MacRae and children. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Dunlap, daughters, Mrs. J. O. Jones, Jr., of Racine, Wis., Mrs. S. L. Soden and little nephew, Dunlap Allison of San Bernardino, motored to Balboa to enjoy a month.

Mrs. B. Homer Logue, Mr. and Mrs. George Clinton Kingman, daughter, Jean, and house guest, Miss Leona Parrish, composed an automobile party to Chula Vista and La Jolla, where they have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kingman, Mmes. Warren Frisbie and Alvin Tolle.

With Ault, Colo., as an objective, Mr. and Mrs. Willouby McKinley and children left Saturday by automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hergoyen and daughter, Grace, of Fullerton, have been house guests of Mrs. C. S. Head during the week. On French Independce Day the little daughter celebrated her birthday and being of French ancestry the occasion was noted with a birthday feast, Mrs. Head being hostess for the occasion. The festivities were enjoyed at Fairmount Park, Riverside.

Mrs. Harry Mull and daughter, Jenet, of No. 616 West Vernon street, were dinner guests Monday at the home of Mrs. H. Preston, No. 7714 Whitsett avenue.

After spending the past year on a ranch near Fallbrook, Wilfred Hughes renewed friends and acquaintances here for a week, returning to the ranch last Saturday.

Mrs. Ellen Aimes and sister, Miss Jessabel Hitchcock, left recently for their home at Winslow, Ariz., after several weeks spent with relatives and friends. Mrs. Aimes, whose husband is in France, will soon return to their home in San Mircial, N. M.

Mrs. H. S. White of Sixty-ninth street and McKee avenue is chaperoning a party of girls, who are vacationing in the apricot orchards somewhere north of Los Angeles.

Covina.

MRS. W. T. HAYNES returned Sunday from an eastern trip. She was gone seven weeks, going as far as Pennsylvania to visit her father, who was ill. She also visited friends and relatives in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ford and baby of Glendale are guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Gall and daughter.

Miss Dorotha Hovell of Los Angeles spent Tuesday with Mrs. W. K. Potter.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Griffiths and daughter, Elleane, spent last week-end at Long Beach.

The Young Men's class of the Brethren Church was the host at a wienie bake held in the San Dimas Canyon, Monday evening, in honor of Mr. Ray Hershey, one of their members, who is leaving for active service in the war. Among those who attended were Misses Gladys and Vinnie Johnson, Mabel and Esther Funk, Rinda Motter, Ruth Shaver, May Hepner, Anna and Jessie Hamilton, Ruth Callender, Isabel Eby and Messrs. Walter and Henry Hepner, Jesse and Bennie Hepner, Roland and Stanley Shaver, Elmer Overholtzer, Elmer Boots, Ralph Pollard, Charles Zug, Herbert Zug and the guest of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Finch and Mrs. J. W. Keefer were the guests at supper of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Lehmer of Ramona Acres, last Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Rose S. Porter, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. A. P. Kerckhoff, has returned to her ranch in San Luis Obispo.

Long Beach.

BETWEEN four and five thousand people, believed to be the largest crowd that ever attended a dance in this city, jammed the glass-inclosed Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle studios Wednesday evening. All the proceeds were turned over to the Red Cross. Mr. Arbuckle and Fannie Ward, well-known movie celebrities, led the grand march. Many other screen notables were in attendance. The event was staged under the auspices of the Liberty Girls Red Cross Auxiliary. Al St. John, "Fatty" Arbuckle's funny partner, presided over the soft drink sales. The Naval Reserve jazz orchestra furnished the music for the dancing.

Gov. Gardner, of Missouri, has arrived in Long Beach for the summer, leasing the Burbank home, where he has been domiciled during the hot months for the past three years. Gov. Gardner is a great golf enthusiast and spends a great deal of his spare time pursuing the elusive pellet over the links of the Virginia Country Club. The Governor's two sons are en route from Jefferson City, Mo., by automobile.

Police Sergeant and Mrs. G. A. Llewellyn, of No. 327 Lime avenue, pleasantly surprised Mr. Llewellyn's nephew, Palmer C. Dunwiddie, who recently enlisted in the radio division of the United States Navy, Tuesday. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Usler, Elsie Davis, Nellie Cunningham, Doris Thompson, Evelyn Yeomans, Gus Fox, Herbert Baker and Gerard Wilson.

Miss Mattie Paine, former Long Beach Polytechnic High School teacher, has arrived home from Honolulu, where she has been teaching for the past year.

Redond Beach.

MISS MILDRED LANG entertained at dinner at the Benita apartments on Tuesday evening the Misses Ruby Farnsworth and Hazel, Marjory and Elsie Tyler, all of Glendale. Following the report the young ladies were joined by Corps. Harry Thompson, Earl Strum, Berk Moore and Audel Cota, all members of Co. B, stationed at Fort MacArthur. A dancing party at the Redondo Beach pavilion was enjoyed during the evening. The same party also enjoyed a day's picnic at Eagle Rock Park last Sunday.

A group of officers of the First District California Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. W. A. Galentine Tuesday. Those comprising the party were Mrs. C. S. Thompson of Bellflower, Mrs. E. H. Noe of Los Angeles, Mrs. Allen Durand of San Gabriel, Mrs. J. B. Torkeer of Santa Monica and Mrs. J. Scheiffle of Artesia.

Tustin.

A PARTY of Tustin society people were recent guests at the lovely Santa Ana home of Mrs. A. F. Zaiser, given in compliment of Mrs. John Melcher of San Bernardino, who is visiting the Zaiser and Boyer families of Tustin. The affair was in the nature of a dinner party and the spacious dining-room was decorated in lavender and pink, dainty sweet peas carrying out the color motif. Besides the hostess and honored guest, places were marked for Mmes. Samuel Nau, C. P. Boyer, Jasper Leck, John Melcher and John, Jr., Mary E. Zaiser, Misses Margaret Schaff, Zena Leck and Converse Nau.

A house party at the beautiful Balboa Island home of Samuel Tustin, comprised the following: Mr. and Mrs. James S. Rice, Mrs. Edwards and Miss Katherine Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Ben E. Turner, Dr. J. P. Boyd, Miss Rosa Boyd of Santa Ana, and Miss Pauline Davis of Los Angeles. Mr. Tustin, who is an ideal host, has for many years entertained this group of friends at his romantic seaside home, all being prominent in social circles of Tustin, Santa Ana and Los Angeles.

Orange.

MISS DELLA FRANZEN very delightfully entertained the girls of the N.U.T. Club recently at her home. The affair took place in the afternoon and a feature of the event was the revival of the once all-popular game of croquet, which was played during the afternoon. A simple but delicious repast was later served by the hostess. Those enjoying Miss Franzen's hospitality were: Misses Marie Grecht, Vilma Benson, Gertrude Klaner, Margaret Squires, Erna Bandick, Lucile Hornstra, Della Franzen, Elsie Gackstetter, Helen Hoenshel and Alma Dierker.

Miss Esther Weaver, who was assistant in the kindergarten department at the Lemon-street School, during the past year, and who has been named director for the coming year, will be married in the near future to a Mr. Cox, stationed at Camp Kearny. The interesting event is slated for the 25th of this month and the bride and groom will reside at La Jolla until the beginning of the school year.

Herbert Battermann, who recently enlisted and was accepted in the Naval Reserve Corps, left Saturday for San Francisco. He will be greatly missed from Orange, where he enjoys much popularity.

Another departure for the Naval Reserve Corps was that of Gerald Oakes, who reported for duty at San Pedro on the eighteenth of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Perry left recently on an automobile trip for San Francisco, where they visited their son, Maurice Perry, who is in the officers' training camp at the Presidio.

Peg o' Los Angeles goes buying

Going to the beach? Then, why risk the fogs? You can have your hair permanently waved by that expert, Mrs. Atkin, who has credentials of merit and city references. Her method is not the quickest, but is absolutely harmless. She curls gray hair successfully and makes lovely schoolgirl curls! 8 for $5. Jarvis-Koehler Hair Shop, 736 W. 7th.

So original! Polly Primrose frocks and rompers! Miss Hendee of Beeman & Hendee makes them to order. She also shows exceptional designs in draperies. Plain curtains made up free. 948 S. Hill.

Why be fat? Take it off where you wish and have the figure of a Hebe without effort, diet or drugs! Cures constipation and improves circulation. Weight Reducing Co., 618 Brockman Bldg.

Have you noticed the Bulgarian yarn work, or the chain-stitch in colors, which is used so much on hats? It may be used on your dress if you like—and is very smart on either. Hemstitching or plaiting is especially good for organdy dresses. The Elite Button Co., 603 Title Guarantee Bldg., do all of these things especially well.

Cotton braid and old-fashioned rick-rack is very smart on gingham and calico frocks.

Well, I have never used anything about the house which served so many purposes! My silverware is just beautiful since I used "Nonolio," and it does equally as well for the kitchenware, such as aluminum and enamel. You know it polishes and cleans at the same time, not marring highly-polished surfaces—of piano or tables. Ask your grocer for "Nonolio."

If one stays downtown for a show an especially convenient place to dine is the Boston Lunch Room. Their home-cooked 50-cent dinners are a real treat. You have choice of hot or cold meats each evening, and on Thursday fried Belgian hare. They serve most excellent war pastry, muffins and other good things at 709 South Hope.

The straight hanging accordion-plaited skirt of satin or serge will be much worn.

Some very smart gingham and voile dresses are being made at the Van Court Shop, Brack-Shops, at special prices—$18 to $25.

I saw a beautiful head of hair the other day, which had been permanently waved by Mrs. Hudgen. The hair was soft and in large waves. She has had seven years' experience and is the only woman in the city with a diploma. Each curl receives her personal attention—eight for $5. Prom. 9, Brack-Shops. 14417.

Crepe de chine and tussur are used for sleeveless jackets.

Why not be young again? You can feel so, at least, and do twice the amount of Red Cross work if you take the Brockman Health Baths! Rheumatism is cured and a general toning up of the entire system is the result. You can have electric baths, salt glow, violet ray, massage at reasonable cost. 416 Brockman Bldg. 62646.

Do you realize that you can begin your summer school work at any time at the Willis-Woodbury Business College, which is one of the largest and most successful schools on the Coast? They specialize in the Gregg system of shorthand and, as a result, turn out experts. The cool, pleasant rooms on the fifth floor, Hamburger Bldg., afford an excellent place for study.

One of the indefinable charms held in fond memory is that something caused by a clear, beautiful complexion. Are you giving a thought picture your loved ones will cherish? If in doubt use Fletcher's Bleach Paste.

Knitted wool sport suits are all the rage at eastern resorts.

The small hat holds sway at present—one very quaint turban in Biege was adorned with a large ostrich tip. I saw many "Tam" crowns among the new hats at Robinson's. The most adorable, however, were those of maline with ostrich feather brims. A very effective model was made entirely of black fringe held in place by maline.

Reduce your weight! You may have a beautiful figure by using the Reiss System, which will reduce your weight and improve your health in an easy and fascinating way. No drugs, no starvation. 802 Title Guarantee Bldg., 5th and Broadway. 67815.

Why not have a war-time suit, which acts as suit, tailored dress or afternoon dress, as you wish?

"Heart to Heart."

A FEW CONFESSIONS FROM ALLA NAZIMOVA.

SOME ten years ago the first performance of "Salome" created no ordinary scandal. Further productions were forbidden by the police, and the beauty and color of Oscar Wilde's play was lost to Broadway. Today nobody interferes with the production, now running along merrily in New York. And Mme. Alla Nazimova, recently interviewed in a twilight talk, confessed that she had always longed to play the pale, enamored tigress of Wilde's poem.

"It is like a picture by Beardsley," says the star, "and the richness and beauty of the setting is like a sparkling, shining mirror. I would love to play Salome in such a setting. You know a beautiful setting always helps the actress. She feels the environment, and her art finds a proper background, a sort of intoxicating help to further her emotions."

Nazimova is a singularly attractive personality. She declares that she gave birth to her present self on the day when she arrived in America from Russia.

Many years ago, when the actress was a little girl in boarding school, she went to see an opera by Rubinstein. And smilingly she continues to tell about her first love affair. There was a tenor who played the role of a demon, in love with a princess, who did not return his affection. The tenor, declares Nazimova, was her ideal.

"I loved him with all my girlish heart, and I thought the princess a fool. In those days I was very religious, and prayed fervently that the tenor and I would be brought together in some miraculous way. At that time chocolate manufacturers gave premiums with each pound of chocolates in the form of a handsome painting of my tenor. I bought chocolate with all my money, and the walls of my little room were covered with the pictures of my idol."

But Nazimova never met him, except in her dreams. When she was 15 years old every shaven face on the streets was the object of her admiration. In Russia only actors shave, and she admired them because they represented to her interpreters of her beloved heroes.

But she has erased her Russian youth from her memory. She mastered English, became a star on Broadway, and a sensation in the pictures.

"When I am on the stage or in a picture I am not Nazimova. I am the woman I am playing. My life outside has ceased to exist. And when I leave the theater or have finished my picture work for the day, I am Mrs. Charles Bryant, a wife like thousands of others. No society for me, no high life."

Nazimova has been married for five years to her leading man, Charles Bryant, and it is said that she is much in love with him. They are seen together in "Toys of Fate." Mr. Bryant also supported his wife (no pun intended here) in "Revelation," and will be seen in her third forthcoming picture, taken from the Belgian story, "L' Occident." Albert Cappelani has just been engaged to direct the fourth of the ..azimova productions, which is to be a picturization of their "'Ception Shoals". The last piece comes nearest in giving Nazimova a role on the order of Wilde's Salome.

Fashion Notes.

THE CHARMING GOWNS WORN BY MISS ANGLIN.

THE frocks worn by Margaret Anglin and Phyllis Birkett in the love-comedy, "Billeted," attracted a great deal of attention during the runs of the play in New York and Chicago. They were designed and made at the studio of Balcom, the famous Fifth-avenue (New York) modiste.

In the first act Miss Anglin wears a pale yellow Georgette made with a panel of heavy lace to match the dress. There is a short apron of the lace falling beneath the long waist, which crosses surplice fashion and is hip length. The hat is large with high crush crown, rather pinched in at the sides, of palest pink crepe, with a narrow ribbon of the same tone at its base. In one scene she also wears a knitting apron made of white silk flowered in pink and ruffled with creamy lace. In this act Miss Birkett is in khaki breeches and a loose blouse belted with a white leather belt. She wears spiral puttees, a Windsor tie of old blue and a tam of burnt straw with a tassel of blue, a very picturesque and thoroughly workable costume.

Act two finds Miss Anglin in a floating negligee of misty gray chiffon with a train. The back is composed of a back panel of the chiffon over blue, and two floating panels falling from the shoulders and caught together at the knee for a space of just a few inches. The fronts crossing at the side are caught in at the waist by a turquoise oval surrounded with diamonds. Miss Birkett wears a morning frock of crepe meteor, in a delicate peach shade in this act. The edge of the skirt is a geometric design, and the waistline is defined by a series of shirrings and a girdle.

In the third act both women are in evening gowns. Miss Anglin in a light orchid satin veiled with self-color chiffon and spangled also in the same color. A drapery is drawn around the left side. The upper arms are veiled half way to the elbow with a self-colored maline, the points at either side weighted with small tassels.

The other gown is a wonderful shade of old blue silk poplin. It has a decided bustle under which is a band of pink roses. The skirt is finished with a four-inch band of blue spangles, and an ornament of these at the front of the square decollette and a single pink rose at the left of the girdle. A petticoat of lace shows under the blue to the depth of four inches. The shoulders are veiled with blue maline in exactly the same arrangement as used in Miss Anglin's gown. The frock is delightfully youthful and quite simple enough to justify itself in these days of so-called simplicity.

"Tailored to Measure

—that is why you like this skirt so well—and I have two others

—"It is such a fine idea—it seems to me that every woman who wants a new cotton skirt should take advantage of it—

"You know Bullock's man tailor will cut, baste and fit a skirt to your measure for $2.00—

—"Think what a little cost that is, then think of the great number of cotton skirtings there are at Bullock's from which you may choose. I would investigate on Monday if I were you—you know this is a cotton goods proposition."

In the Cotton Goods Store

—Monday there will be particular emphasis upon cotton skirtings at 75c yard— Among them will be—

36 in. Pongee Plaids 75c
36 in. Cotton Serge Plaids 75c
36 in. Shepherd Checks 75c
36 in. Irish Poplin 75c

36 in. Striped Diagonal 75c
36 in. Cotton Shantung 75c
36 in. Gabardine at 75c
—At Bullock's—2nd floor.

200 Pattern Cloths

—of heavy Irish linen satin damask
—at very low prices—

—In fact, at prices at which they cannot be replaced in today's market—because of purchases made some time ago, and because it is not Bullock's custom to buy and to keep but to buy and to give Bullock's customers the benefit of whatever advantage may be Bullock's.

—These cloths with napkins to match in rose and key, conventional scroll, poppy, chrysanthemum, acorn and band, thistle with Greek border, and rose band, circular and plain center designs—

—Cloths 2x2 yards, $6.50; 2x2½ yards, $8.50; 2x3 yards, $10.50; 2x3½ yards, $12.00; 2x4 yards, $13.50. 22 inch Napkins, $9 dozen.

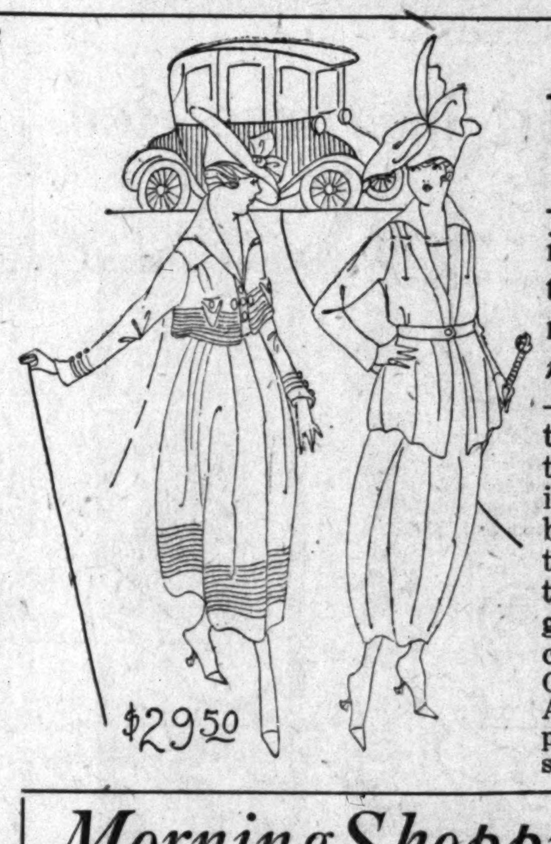
—At Bullock's—2nd floor.

Silk Petticoats at $6.75

—Of Silk Jersey with deep plaited flounces and colored set-in borders—many shades.

—And others of taffeta in plain and two-tone combinations—deep shirred flounces and tucked ruffles.

—They are just splendid in every way—and worthy a good word to anyone in need. —Fourth Floor.



—reflects the sincerity of Bullock's in offering them—without urge—other than that of their merit at the prices they have been marked, and of their particular merit at this new price which is to be theirs on Monday.

—In the face of style facts and manufacturing facts as they are and as they promise to be, the thought occurs that reductions such as those that have been taken in this instance might be considered inadvisable— —It may be that suits that will come for Fall will not measure up to the standards of the value that was in these suits at their regular prices— It may be that there will not be a great difference in the new styles— Many things are certain—

One of them is that these suits ARE REDUCED from many prices. Another is that they are particularly good suits—reduced for particularly good merchandising reasons—(nearly all ONE of a size, or a material, or a color, or a style)—to $29.50—Monday.

—Suits of white wool tricotine and serge—beautifully designed and made; suits of poiret twill, of mannish stripes and mixtures.

—Belted models—as well as tailored, and Eton or Pony Coat suits—even some of the navy blue serge cape styles—with "westkits" of khaki kool——Suits in sand, navy, Pekin blue, rose mixtures, and gray effects— An opportunity—if you will regard it as such—at Bullock's $29.50—3rd floor.

Morning Shopping

—In the morning street cars make their regular runs, and there are plenty of comfortable seats— In the afternoon the need is for extra cars, and during the peak hours standing room is at a premium—

—"Wait for the next car"—is friendly advice— —As also is "Take a morning car"—and have greater pleasure and comfort to and from and during shopping—; have afternoons to use for Red Cross work; and help in the development of an idea that is reasonable and in entire harmony with the spirit of the hour, which earnestly desires the maximum of co-operation in every way towards conservation and thrift.

—Try morning shopping, Monday, at Bullock's.

Percale, 35c yd.

—Light grounds with the wanted small calico print designs, neat stripes, polkadots, etc.

—36 inches wide! Keep that width in mind when you think of this price—35c yd.

—At Bullock's—2nd floor.

Gingham

—Thousands of yards in plain colors — stripes, checks, plaids—and the new multi-colored wide stripes—

—A.F.C., Red Seal and Toil du Nords, 40c.
—Domestic Zephyrs (32 in.) at 35c yard.
—32 in. "Wm. Anderson" Scotch gingham at 60c.
—32 in. David and John Anderson gingham $1.00.

—Prices that are worth taking advantage of now, considering the rage for gingham, its growing scarcity and the character and variety of the patterns and colorings at Bullock's—2nd floor.

Give
The Soldier Something He Needs

—Something that experience has proved will be of benefit to him—essential things—such as provided by Bullock's Gift Commissary.

—Which is devoted solely and intelligently to those essentials that have developed into necessities for the soldier or sailor—those things for which he has voiced a noisy preference.

—Here are a few of the things he will find most acceptable:

—Fitted Comfort Kits.
—Empty Comfort Kits.
—Money Belts.
—Writing Kits.
—Razor Sets.
—Sewing Kits.

Style Personalities
In Milady's Footwear

—"Personalities"—this is the theme that is noticeable in Bullock's Footwear for women.

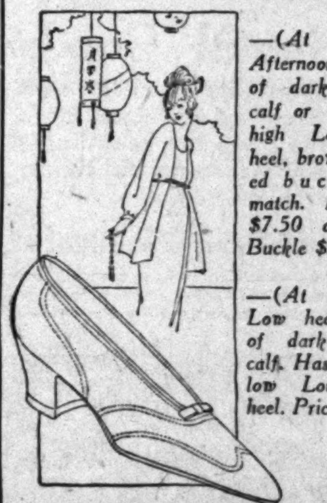
—If you will observe you will note this distinction—you will note a personality of smartness—elegance.

—"Beauty Shoes"—many have come to know them.

—And just now many new arrivals are bringing new thoughts in Fashion for late summer.

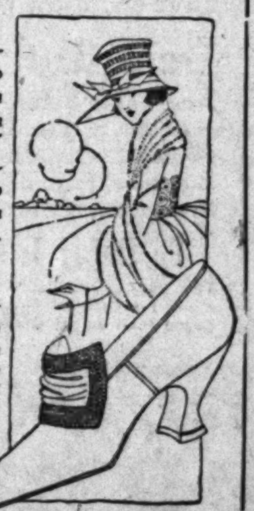
—Many women who insist upon originality in footwear—who dress their feet as individually as they do their head—recognize the eminence of Bullock's footwear and act accordingly.

—Two popular models are shown here:



—(At right)— Afternoon pump of dark brown calf or kid with high Louis XV heel, brown beaded buckle to match. Plain $7.50 and $8. Buckle $2.25.

—(At left)— Low heel pump of dark brown calf. Has popular low Louis XV heel. Price $7.



A Few Dresses!

—of figured and striped crepe de chine
—of embroidered shantung, charmeuse and pussy willow —with crepe de chine

—in light colors.

—in sizes for misses and women of slight and slender figure—(14's, 16's, 18's.)

—Just a few of these very pretty dresses

—in styles that could be models for Fall, as well as for summer

—are to be very low priced, Monday, because they have been enthusiastic as display models—and have lost a little of their briskness—They have been reduced to $35.00—

—and they could be advertised more forcefully without exaggeration—

—Will you see them—? If you will, you will be glad—At Bullock's.

—Remember, $35.00—
"Turn to your left from the Elevators"—3rd floor.

SOBER ELEGANCE DOMINATING NOTE IN NEW PARIS FASHIONS.

BY ALICE ZISKA SNYDER.

[SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, June 20.—Ages ago, before the world grew drunk on bloodlust and war, Paris in June spelled paradise. That was the month when the social season reached its height, when the Bois and its various restaurants were crowded with the smart set, all bent on one great pursuit—pleasure. Then, at the races of Auteuil and Longchamps, with the Grand Prix as a spectacular climax, lovely women were as thick as leaves in Vallombrosa. And as for wonderful frocks, they shone in all their splendor in this setting of elegance and luxury.

What a contrast to the Paris of today, with its shuttered houses and apartments and its almost deserted streets! So many persons fortunate in still being able to gratify their whims, have suddenly discovered within themselves a taste for the country! However, it would be unjust to attach to this spring's hurried exodus more importance than it really deserves.

Many women who for years have given all their time to nursing the wounded soldiers remain in town, faithful to their calling of mercy; others to their duties as mistress of a home, and still another class is true to a certain spirit of coquetry which forbids a precipitate departure from Paris and bids them to act just as though nothing untoward had come into their lives.

IN SOBER ELEGANCE.

These are the mondaines one still meets in the Bois every fine morning, dressed with the sober elegance that reflects the present seriousness of the military situation. A thousand charming details set off the simplicity of their frocks.

Nothing could be more alluring than the fine white line used by Jenny on her black and navy frocks, made by setting dozens of tiny mother of pearl buttons so close together that they overlap. Doucet lightens the severity of his gabardine chemise dresses by the white organdy collar, which crosses in revers over the chest and, passing around the waist, is knotted loosely at the back or at one side.

On other equally simple yet modish frocks the original note is struck by a necklace of carved wooden beads alternating with small medallions of blue porcelain, with pompons of Chinese blue to finish them at the ends. Thus, with a mere trifle, the sombreness of one's garb is prevented from lapsing into austere severity.

Despite this restraint practised by some of the big couturiers there are others who are prone to swing into exaggerations. Every one will agree that nothing is more attractive than a pretty ankle glimpsed through a transparent tulle skirt, but such frivolity is misplaced in this moment when thousands of hearts are torn by agony and anguish.

EMBROIDERY ON GOWNS.

Wool and silk jersey, charmeuse and satin are embroidered with wool on silk, with silk on wool, and sometimes with a combination of gold and silver thread. In Paris success to a dressmaker means capturing the patronage of the women who are the most difficult to please, of those who have a reputation to sustain as professional beauties, of those who are most in the public eye, and also of having one's models copied by less scrupulous houses, which often travesty their smartness before offering them to the other half of the would-be smart Parisiennes.

This is an evil of which the big houses have always complained; though before the war it did not matter so much. Then, so many rich customers paid inflated prices for their name that could afford to shut their eyes to the counterfeits. But things have changed.

The client who pays without considering the expense is the exception. Therefore these houses try in every way to prevent the secrets of their models from leaking out. Despite this caution, those in the know whisper to each other the name of a woman in the Rue des Batignolles who does the embroidering for many of the big couturiers and who, before returning the models, holds them back for a few days in order to copy them for less than half the price they bring in the Rue de la Paix.

Of late a touch of modern art and of cubism has tinged Paris frocks. Its effects are not so startling where robes d'interieur are concerned, but for street wear it is best avoided. It is permissible, however, at the seashore, where just now the new big wool cubes on a navy ground or black on white are running their checkered course with impunity.

GLASS BEADS REVIVED.

This summer has seen a recrudescence of the popularity of the glass bead. It is used in all sorts of garnitures—on braids, in tassels, in designs for blouses, where it blends happily with the silk of the embroidery. Of it are made round or flat strings of beads that usurp the place of belts and neckwear.

Entire designs in beads are used in embroidering dresses, their colors mingled and shaded just as they would be in silk or wool thread. And beads are used not only on dresses, but also on hats and veils, on whose borders they sparkle discreetly.

Gold, silver, white and colored glass beads are all used to adorn the latest creations; and the bead industry, so long dormant, has suddenly waked to a new and vigorous life. When one thinks of the thousands of beads that go into the making of handbags and necklaces alone one gets a faint idea of how many of them are used today.

Tunics have held undisputed sway for so many years that one is rather astonished to note that the bolero has jumped back into feminine favor, and many women will rejoice that this saucy and becoming little garment is having a summer vogue. The chief reason for their success lies in the small amount of goods required to make them; the under blouse and the under part of the sleeves can be made of a lighter material, either of the color or of a different shade, and all the angles are tastefully finished off by heavy tassels of silk, beads or passamenterie.

PETTICOATS NARROW.

In tailored suits the narrowness of the skirt has rung the knell of the petticoat; but for thin frocks this most feminine of garments necessarily holds its own. The petticoat must be of the same length as the frock under which it is worn, and it may be made of batiste, fine nainsook, mousseline de soie, tussor or white crepe de chine.

They are forcedly narrow; for fashion has decreed the skimpiness of skirts. It is, however, quite permissible to full them slightly, especially if the summer dress that covers them is slit at the hem to make walking easier.

With conservative women, delicate hand embroidery will always be the favorite trimming. Imitation lace and fine picot tulle give an effect of greater fluffiness, and are much less costly.

Although in the realm of modes there is nothing new under the sun, the young generation will seize upon as novel a certain material much used for spring and summer frocks. This is a fine serge in dark shades through which runs at inch and a half intervals a fine blurred white line. This weave, too, comes in white, beige, gray and sand color; then the intersecting lines are black and also blurred.

Added to that of novelty, this material possesses the double advantage of being able to be combined in divers ways and of permitting the tailor who builds the frock to display his individual exclusiveness of taste and cleverness of cut. For the pockets, collars and cuffs, the stripes can be set on horizontally or on the bias, thereby taking the place of other and more expensive trimmings. When the lines are white, a white pique waistcoat is the proper accompaniment to this costume.

BARE FEET BY THE SEA.

A popular fashion at the seashore this summer is that of going barefoot in sandals, not only in the early morning dew but in the cool of the evening. On the first day this new footgear feels queer to her who wears it; on the second day she sneezes.

The third she has grown quite accustomed to it, and the fifth she feels an unaccustomed lightness of limb. Her blood, whipped by the keen air and the hot sun, circulates better than it has ever done before, her skin clears and becomes tanned, and life seems tenfold more attractive.

Raymond Duncan, brother of our own Isadora, is probably responsible for this new fashion. For years Paris has been accustomed to seeing him and his Greek wife, with their handsome boy, unmindful of the variations of the weather, striding along the streets in Attic garb and sandalled feet.

This prophet of "back to nature" has long preached the benefits of this kind of footwear, and to attend his weekly lectures on beauty and art and the simple life is to stamp one as belonging to the cult where nature is the great mistress whose teachings lead straight to the road of health and happiness.

FIGURING FAIRBANKS GIFT.

Already, readers with mathematical minds are busy making calculations about the Fairbanks gift of $50,000 to the city of Indianapolis.

A "certified accountant," who writes on his own letter heading, sends to me a brief note to say that "without going into the problem accurately by arithmetical progression it is sufficient to say that four and a half per cent. money compounded will double itself every twenty years. Of course it will more than do so, but let that pass. At the end of the first one hundred years the Fairbanks fund will be $1,600,000. At the end of two hundred years it will exceed $51,200,000; at the close of the three-hundredth year the fund will have reached the snug sum of $3,276,800,000—almost enough to meet the next Liberty Loan. When the four-hundredth anniversary rolls around, assuming that all the financial resources of the Earth, Mars and the Moon have been employed, 'the Fairbanks Memorial Fund' will have increased to $64,841,600,000—sixty-four billion dollars!"

Why go further? No need thereof, but, just as a time killer, a trifle more figuring gives the demnition total, at the close of the five-hundredth year, as $4,149,862,400,000—four trillion dollars! More money than ever was on earth or ever will be.

Quite a bequest, even in these days of billions.—[Julius Chambers in Brooklyn Eagle.

German Soldier's Pay.

A German soldier's pay is roughly equivalent to nine cents a day. But out of this he must contribute about three cents a day toward the cost of his dinner. Apart from the dinner, generally some kind of stew, he gets nothing but black bread and alleged coffee, so most of the remaining six cents must be expended on additional food.—[Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Legal Discussion.

"What do they mean by court calendar?"

"I don't understand the term."

"Nor do I. I thought courts paid no attention to time."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

At Glendale.

At a special meeting of the Thursday Afternoon Club the proposal to join with the Tuesday Afternoon Club was defeated on the ground of property interests which must be disposed of before the majority of the members feel the time is right for such a union. Arrangements were made for an adjustment of certain business obligations, after which the matter will again come before the club. Such personal club properties as dishes and silver are being disposed of, a large part of it being given to the local Playground Commission for use on the municipal playgrounds.

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones of No. 106 Orange street was hostess on Friday at her Hermosa Beach cottage to the members of the executive board of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, of which she is president.

Mrs. W. W. Ramsay entertained the new executive board of the Tuesday Afternoon Club at her home, No. 437 South Adams street, on Tuesday afternoon, when arrangements for the coming year were discussed. Mrs. Freeman Kelley, chairman for the programme committee, outlined her plans for next year's work, which were indorsed by the board. Summer war work is to be carried on through the coming months, one of the especial features being a large Red Cross benefit to be given in August.

At a special meeting of the Glendale Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations Mrs. A. A. Barton was unanimously chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the departure of Mrs. Opal Greenwalt, newly-elected president. Mrs. Greenwalt left for Palo Alto, where she will make her home because of family business affairs. Mrs. Barton is chairman of the local committee of the Council of Defense and a prominent worker in the Tuesday Afternoon Club.

The Shakespeare section of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, of which Mrs. Charles H. Temple is chairman, was entertained on Friday with a luncheon given by their instructor, Mrs. W. S. McClure, at her home, No. 3323 East Second street. An afternoon of literature and music followed. On the programme were Mrs. Alma Gibbs and little Elizabeth Sawyer of Glendale, and Mrs. William Fred Frommes, who gave readings, and Mrs. F. Fleisenstein, who sang, both from Los Angeles. Mrs. McClure is to continue her work as instructor of the section next year, and at the first meeting of the season will take up the study of "As You Like It."

Somewhere in California.

Not the least interesting news of women these days is that which tells of the doings of our woman's land army. It is quite a unique democratic army, for it is not just those vague "girls of the masses" who are taking up hard physical outdoor farm labor, but the girls we all know, the girls that tea-d with us, danced at our parties, belonged to our clubs and sororities, flirted with our sons and brothers, studied with us, played with us. And now they are sweating patriotically "somewhere in California" with vast acres of plenteous tilled fields to their credit, mountains of picked fruit, miles of irrigation ditches, thousands of gallons of milk to show for their prowess.

This week two youthful women lawyers join the happy, industrious throng. Miss May Laye and Miss Lucille Haskell, both with fair and dainty hands and lily-white complexions that won't look a bit the same when they come home. Virginia Middaugh, a dainty college girl, is out at Lankershim picking apricots at 15 cents a box; the three Boke sisters are cultivating tomato acres up at Elsinore, and another bevy of jolly girls goes to Hemet this week to pick fruit. There are about 700 girls working on the farms already, and more going away every week, and their employers never dreamed that "labor" could bring so much intelligence and enthusiasm to its job.

When we were all "ladies" sweating was vulgar. You remember, the polite correction urged upon nice little girls. "My dear! Horses sweat, gentlemen perspire, but ladylike little girls only glow." Well, our ladylike little girls are glowing to some purpose somewhere in Southern California just now; but as they are honest-to-goodness farm laborers, they vulgarly insist upon the "honest sweat."

The Children's Campaign.

The clinics that are being established in the various high and intermediate schools for the purpose of weighing and examining all children under 6 years of age, will be formally opened on Tuesday at 9 o'clock. Thereafter they will be open on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 to 11 until the work is completed. A corps of workers are making a house-to-house canvass, informing the mothers of the purpose of this campaign and urging them to bring the children to the clinics for examination.

This applies to all children, whether rich or poor, the purpose being to get authentic data in regard to every child under 6 years of age in the city of Los Angeles, which data is to be forwarded to Washington. The clinics will be in charge of competent nurses and doctors, who will examine the children and if medical attention is necessary the children will be sent to the various clinics now maintained by the Board of Health, or else the mother will be advised to consult her family physician. The vast number of drafted men who have been exempted for physical reasons has no doubt proven a strong factor in determining the government to inaugurate this campaign in order that any physical defect can be remedied at an early age.

In addition to the regular clinic maintained by the Board of Health, the following will be established for this drive: Loretta-street School; Berendo Intermediate, Boyle Heights, Fourteenth street, Franklin High, Sentous, Virgil, Mackinley avenue, Selma avenue, Menlo avenue and Gates street.

There will be also four other stations established by the Board of Education.

Miss Agnes Talcott, chief of municipal nurses, has issued a call for volunteer nurses to attend a meeting on Monday at 2 o'clock at No. 719 South Hill. All nurses who are willing to help in this work are urged to be present. Both the doctors and nurses are serving without compensation. Massachusetts has already completed its drive and sent their data to the government, while Minneapolis has registered 33,000

The California Board of Health Statistics show that there were 559 deaths last year among children under 5 years of age, so this drive should be considered of the greatest importance by the mothers, who have an unusual opportunity to have the advice of expert physicians.

Scales are badly needed for the work and anyone having a scale to loan are asked to kindly communicate with Room 12 of the City Hall. This drive is under the City Council of Defense, the Board of Education and the Board of Health.

Last week the Council recognizing the importance of the work appropriated $100 to defray the expense of registration cards.

Club Briefs.

The Los Angeles Million Club will resume its Red Cross auxiliary work on Tuesday next at 1025 Story Building. A garden party benefit is to be given in August for which plans are being discussed.

The Hermosa Camp of the R. N. of A. will give a card party on Tuesday at 2 p.m., at the home of Oracles Sopha B. Leonards, No. 339 West Twenty-eighth street. The prizes will be Thrift Stamps.

The Camera Pictorial Club entertained in honor of Mrs. Sara Holm of Chicago and Miss Florence Tanner of Fresno, both expert camerists, on Tuesday last, when a musical programme was enjoyed in addition to an exhibition of clever camera work.

NEW YORK STORE PREPARES BIG AFFAIR—PROPOSAL TO OUTSTRIP OTHERS.

By Olive Gray.

With the determination to outdo the two department stores which have already had days at the Red Cross Shops at Eighth and Alvarado streets, and also to set a fast pace for the other stores which will have days later on in the summer, the New York Store started out two weeks ago to make plans for a great Red Cross carnival on next Saturday, from 2 until 10 p.m.

Not all of the features are yet announced, but the headline events are: Dancing all day, with music by two big bands, the Naval Reserve and the Eureka Jazz Band; a joy zone with all kinds of concessions, one of which will be an original idea of "swat the Kaiser;" hot lunch stands and a Sis Hopkins country store, with home-made pastries; war garden vegetables and merchandise of all kinds at low prices. Monroe Salisbury and J. Warren Kerrigan will have a "western bar," with "soft drinks for hard cash."

Besides the well-known artist, F. Constantino, who promised his services, the following entertainers will be present: Charlie Murray will be master of ceremonies; Gregory Cherniavsky, premier violin virtuoso; Warren Kerrigan, Monroe Salisbury, Marjorie Wilson, Norma Gould and her dancing girls, Rhoda Lawrence, 13-year-old violiniste; Bertha Doris Rossetti, violiniste; Thelma Cortright, soprano; Dorothy Phillips in patriotic dances. Al Treolar of the Los Angeles Athletic Club will also stage a programme of athletics, including wrestling by Walter Miller, lightweight champion, and Ito, Japanese wrestler. There will be speeches by officers from France and other patriotic features.

Fortune telling, auctions, fish ponds, etc., will add to the joy of the day. A grand grab bag will be a feature, where every purchaser will be given a prize, the grand prize being a Liberty Bond.

All revenue from this affair will be given over to the Red Cross—the proceeds from everything sold, as well as that from the sale of tickets, going into the funds of the national organization, via the Red Cross Shops.

Von Bissing at Close Quarters.

The man "whose name, justly or unjustly, was destined to stand forth to the world as a symbol of one of the darkest, cruelest, and most sinister pages of its miserable history" is thus described by Brand Whitlock in Everybody's for July.

"Gen. Baron von Bissing, standing there in the lofty salon of the residence of the Belgian Minister of the Arts and Sciences, in the early twilight of that short December afternoon, was a man over 70 years of age, old and thin, with thick graying black hair brushed straight back from his forehead and plastered down as with water or with oil on the curiously-shaped head that was so straight and sheer behind. His face was hard and its leathern skin, wrinkled and old and weather-beaten, was remorselessly shaved as to chin and throat and high lean cheeks, leaving the thick heavy mustache of a Prussian Reiter to hide somewhat the thin lips of the stern mouth and then flow on, growing across his cheeks to bristle up fiercely by his ears.

He was scrupulously clean, one might almost say scrubbed. One might almost imagine him smelling of soap like an old sergeant-major in a regiment of guards. His brow was high and wide and the lean face tapered to the wedge of a very firm jaw; the visage of an old Prussian dragoon of the school and mentality of Bismarck. But out of it there gleamed a pair of piercing dark eyes that seemed black until one saw that they were blue; they were keen, shrewd eyes, not wholly unkind. He wore, ceremoniously, a great heavy saber that clanked against his thin legs as he walked stiffly into the salon until its hilt was grasped, as though by a habitual gesture, in the aged hand."

No, He was Not Lost.

He trudged bravely alone through the crowded park, carrying his 6 years with an air of maturity.

"Where's your mother?" a man asked. "What are you doing walking around by yourself. You might get injured."

The lad laughed as if it were a huge joke.

"I guess mom's got losted," he said. "I can't find her at all."—[Kansas City Times.

Sweetheart Monument.

The "sweetheart monument" at Camp Devens is rising by leaps and bounds. Every girl who has a sweetheart among the troops is supposed to add a "rock of love" to the monument. As the girls pass the cantonment they select a good-sized stone and carry it to the monument site, where they heave it onto the pile. It is expected that before the war ends a tremendous monument of "love" will be raised.—[New York World.

THE LETTERS OF LEMUEL BEAN.

"Seeing It Through" Efficiently a National Pastime.

BY ROY K. MOULTON.

NEW YORK, July 15.

IF CONSISTENCY is a jewel, efficiency is a chunk of radium. Efficiency is a little trick the horrendous Hun tried to teach us and he has succeeded far beyond his wildest imaginings. Even the fox-trotting couch cootie and the languorous lounge lizard are beginning to be efficient units in our national machine. Not because they want to, but because there is no way out of it.

My wife, Luella, and I, who live in a building infested by 299 other families, are deeply engaged in the study of efficiency and we firmly believe we are putting a crimp in the Kaiser every day of the week. The other 299 families may be trying to help as best as they can, but Luella and I are really knocking off the persimmons. We know it because we are going about the efficiency thing scientifically.

No rise in prices affects us in the least. We have prepared for it several weeks in advance. Having learned to get along without meat and both feeling much better for the change, we applied the same rule to other things. When a thing is about to rise in price, we merely scratch it off our list and say: "We will get along without that."

NO MORE CLOCKS.

Thus, when mantel clocks, made of onyx and platinum went up in price, Luella had already decided that we could get along without an onyx and platinum clock and we have done so ever since. As time has worn on, we have decided that we can get along without almost everything except Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. Our digestion is improved, we sleep better nights and our consciences are sweet-running engines which hit on all twelve cylinders in perfect sequence.

We have not arrived at this state calmly and serenely, by any means. We have had our moments when the household lares and penates have been jarred from their pedestals and the policeman just around the corner, has put his hand up to his ear and grasped his night stick a little more firmly.

Our first difficulty was in trying to reconcile the teachings of the two schools of war economists who have been holding forth in our national midst. As is customary in such cases, Luella followed the teachings of one school while I followed the teachings of the other. In that way we got all the best arguments on both sides of the question.

LUELLA A RADICAL.

Luella loaded up on the precepts of the economic school which argued and still argues vehemently in favor of saving every cent of money available. When I used one of Luella's hairpins to lean my pipe, she would read me a two-column editorial by Prof. Titus A. Drumm of Atwater College, telling us to save the minutest things. "Do not spend a cent you do not have to spend," roared the professor. "Make economy fashionable. Every time you save a cent, you help win the war."

It was the professor's idea that the old Lisle Silk Bank full of pennies and nickels would beat the Kaiser into a state of inocuous desuetude. He didn't explain how a nickel in the toe of a sock hidden under an old oil stove in the basement was going to help make the world safe for democracy. He overlooked many details such as that, but his arguments were high sounding and instilled into the reader the idea that if he spent 10 cents for a mess of stogies he was an alien enemy, a hyphenate and a biter of the hand that fed him.

The other school of economy represented by a flourishing list of hale fellows well met has held just the opposite opinion. "Spend as much as you can," they have urged. "Idle money won't help. Keep your dough in circulation. The busy dime wins every time. Don't be a tightwad. Buy not only necessities but luxuries. Don't hide your money in a cracked teapot in the top drawer of the chiffonier. Keep every cent you have got going around and doing good."

That school was a little slow in getting started. It was several months behind the tightwad school, but when it did get under way it accumulated a mighty host of followers.

ME FOR THE LIBERALS.

As soon as I read the arguments of the liberal school they appealed to me and I went out and bought a meerschaum pipe with the figure of an Airedale dog engraved on the bowl, something that I had never owned before and had never hoped to own.

I don't think there was any spot in this country where those two schools clashed more fiercely than they did right in the three-room kitchenette apartment occupied by my wife and myself. I don't know what the neighbors thought while we were working out our own family scheme of winning the war. They probably thought we had better win the war at home before trying to impose peace upon a lot of foreign countries.

After trying both systems for several weeks, Luella trying hers and I trying mine, we found that they wouldn't work well together. Either one might do individually, but they wouldn't co-ordinate.

The more I spent abroad the tighter things got at home. In other words, my foreign policy reacted on my domestic welfare. We were forced to a compromise. It was a regulation domestic compromise. The money was all to go through Luella's hands. She would do the spending as well as the saving and would follow the teachings of both economic schools as faithfully as possible. It was sort of a unification of command such as happened when Gen. Foch was placed at the head of the military affairs of all the Allies over in France.

I didn't care much for the cigars Luella bought me, but in many respects the new order worked out in good shape. It was a golden day in Luella's history when she found a place where they sold two good cigars for 6 cents instead of one good cigar for 11 cents, such as I had been buying. I have stopped smoking cigars.

Luella has pinned three Liberty Loan buttons on my manly bosom thus far and has bought enough War Savings Stamps to paper the Kaiser's dining-room at Potsdam. "You see, I am following both schools," she said. "I am saving and spending."

In the matter of efficient economy we first learn to endure, then pity, then embrace. It looked pretty fierce a year ago. There was not a thing we had which we believed we could do without, and a lot of piebald patriots resolved on the sly to economize by doing without the things they had never had.

I was among them, I admit. I said to myself: "I will do without cucumbers. I hate the darned things, anyhow." Then, through force of circumstances, I began doing without things whether I wanted to or not, and what seemed at first a great and insurmountable task assumed the proportions of a pleasant duty. People cannot become efficient all at once. They have to come to it gradually.

I know one great patriot who, about a year ago, bought a 25-cent War Savings Stamp, folded his arms and said: "There, I have done my duty! Now go on and win the war. I hope the Kaiser knows I am in it now." Then he went home and hung a service flag with one star on it in his front window.

The reformation that has overtaken that man in the past year has been remarkable. The last time I saw him he was yelling from a street wagon—calling the crowd a gang of slackers—and was disposing of Liberty Bonds faster than he could write the names down. He had sold his automobile and bought bonds. With him, buying bonds was like eating popcorn. The more he got the more he wanted.

LOVED EACH NICKEL.

This man used to think quite a lot of a nickel. He called it big money, but today he speaks of a billion as though it were a tin stopper off the top of a beer bottle. Our ideas have changed. When Congress used to appropriate $9000 to build a postoffice building at Skaggs Crossing, Iowa, everybody used to go home and figure how far 9000 $1 bills would reach if they were placed end to end, how many loaves of self-raising bread could be bought for $9000 and how many orphans could be sent to Bermuda on a pleasure trip for $9000.

Today they can grant $739,000,000 an hour, night and day for a week, and the average man tosses the paper aside and says: "Ho, hum! Why don't the papers publish more baseball news?"

Can anybody remember what a fuss there was when Congress first proposed to grant the President $25,000 extra per year for traveling expenses? Some of our best figurers claimed that it couldn't be done without impairing the national credit, and when the measure finally passed, a lot of people sat about nervously waiting for the Sheriff to foreclose on the Capitol building and move the furniture out. Nowadays $25,000 wouldn't make more than a good day for a War Stamp saleslady at a subway entrance.

About the time we all get used to saving our money and investing it through efficient channels, the war will be over and we will all be left with a lot of savings on our hands. That will be the hardest feature of all, and gosh, how we do dread it!

The first Norwegian seed-culture union has just been formed. Commercial Agent Norman L. Anderson reports that the organization's chief object is to render Norway independent of foreign sources of seeds, of which considerable quantities have been imported in the past. The district of Sorlandet is said to be especially well adapted to the raising of seeds.

The President of Brazil has authorized the transformation of the experimental station at Deodoro, Federal District, into a pomicultural station, which is to serve as a model for the farmers of the district, as a practice school for students who expect to take up this line of agriculture, and as a nursery for the production of fruit trees for free distribution to planters.

The neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed in 1831 by the treaty of London, signed November 15 in that year. Austria, France, Russia, Great Braitain and Prussia were parties to the treaty. When the German Empire was formed it agreed to be bound by Prussia's treaties, but violated this one in 1914.

Frank Wendling, a fisherman of Port Clinton (O.) recently made what is thought to be a valuable find while pulling nets on his fishing grounds. Among some shells which became entangled to the nets Mr. Wendling found a shell with a large pink pearl attached to it. The pearl was taken to jewelers for examination and is said to be of a rare variety.

That China is being modernized faster than most of us may think is indicated by the increased use of the telephone in that vast country. It also is worthy of note that although practically the whole equipment comes from abroad and is to a considerable extent operated by foreigners, the prices for service are much below those to which we are accustomed in this land of high prices.—[Chicago Journal.

A Matrimonial Record.

History is a trifle vague regarding the age of Solomon and the size of his family, but statistics concerning "Uncle John" Dempsey of Marion, Ill., are more accurate. "Uncle John" died recently, lacking four days of being a centenarian, and he had been married thirteen times.

Seven years ago "Uncle John" rather startled Marion by buying his coffin and preparing his final resting place in a cemetery. Not dying as he expected, after waiting two years, he married his thirteenth wife and lived five years more.—[Chicago News.

SINCERITY ESSENCE OF ARTISTIC PRODUCTION

BY TRUMAN B. HANDY.

SINCERITY is the keynote of art, and without sincerity artistry is impossible.

It is for the latter reason that but few motion picture plays can be classed as truly artistic. In but an infinitesimal number there has been a lack of sympathique, an omission of the genuine. Either it has been insincere authorship, or action, or direction, or staging.

Commercialism has played a tremendous hand in this particular game of hearts. Art and twenty-five per cent. are poor, if at all possible bedfellows, and it has been through an overdose of the spirit of dollaritis that a play, once having been removed from the glittering Rialto, is seldom replaced.

In the olden days this insincerity commenced with authorship. Unskilled hands were at labor upon such photodramatic efforts which claimed the attention of moviegoers. And the actors, the majority of whom were recruited from the ranks, had a complete lack of the esthetique. Their movements en scene were crude, horrible. Few knew anything of the gentle art of passementerie; make-up was to them but a means to the bread-and-butter end. Directors were the same. At least until one Mr. Griffith stepped in and commenced to produce real picture plays.

Mr. Griffith succeeded in his field for the reason that his heart was in his work. His life consecrated to what he believed had a real artistic possibility, he devoted himself and all of himself to the work of putting better and more esthetic photoplay babies into the public cradle. He commenced by discarding timeworn scenery. He devoted his attention for a time to a study of make-up and its relation to lights and shadows. He collaborated with William Bitzer, his cameraman, in an effort to master the tricks of the lens. And then he started to "make" his actors. Mary Pickford he discovered in a frightened stage child who had seen service in the Belasco forces. Bobby Harron he found poking around the ancient Biograph studio as an office boy. Mae Marsh arrived unheralded on his "lot," and he at once put her to work. Blanche Sweet was to him a "find," and her finest work has been done under his direction. And Henry Walthall's Shakespearean technique Mr. Griffith utilized in elevating the art of screen thespianism.

All of these people—personages we would now call them—Mr. Griffith interested in their work. He demanded sincerity. He required them to consecrate themselves to the "art" of the photoplay. And they did, as long as they played in his company, the result being that they grew. At last, however, the majority of them parted company with their wizard, and have never since been in any way equal to their former selves. Mae Marsh has forced her "whims," acquired from Griffith, into an insincere array of character. Blanche Sweet two years ago was languid and limpid. Her personality almost gone, she retired, but only in time. She was beginning to lose her grip.

I have taken the rise and fall of the Griffith stars as an example of sincerity, what I call sincerity of art. And the same has been true of a dozen analogous cases. The gentle art of screen acting has been distorted at times under inefficient direction until the players were mere shells of their previous screen selves. Mabel Normand, away from Mack Sennett's guiding hand, has been content to go through a series of motion picture platitudes with her mouth open. Clara Kimball Young's reserve has at times assumed the proportions of ennui. Marguerite Clark, on the other hand, has infused each role of hers with a new sort of sympathy, a sympathy which has placed many of her old pictures on an artistic par with her latest release.

This "intellectual" acting, as affected by Petrova, and Elsie Ferguson and Louise Glaum, has run "repression" into the ground, buried it, and then frozen it over. An icicle is a beautiful thing in itself, but at the same time a poor substitute for a human being.

And insincerity has taken on other forms, too. The "passionate" diablerie, such as one sees in a Theda Bara product, or one of Dorothy Dalton, or of Bessie Barriscale, taken for instance. Healthy, normal people in real life are natural. There is nothing forced about them—no chest heaving, nor hair tearing, nor eye rolling. Nor do human beings mug their sorrows to the four winds, nor keep a handkerchief continually saturated with tears—at least not in public. The ordinary heroine of everyday life drama is a quential being, not a whose heart is her head run.

Insincerity, you see, has more than one form And tawdriness, either of setting, is a relevant and comitant. Our over-dressed, der-dressed, or actor is an anachronism ity. And the same with the of the play itself. Cheap are insincere—a complete art. Curtains blowing when they are supposedly an air-tight room are Chippendales arranged with Stickley ware, and oriental rugs spread over pine floor never mark the sence either of sincerity or Prostituted production all de rigueur, and acter comportment is realm of art.

"We shall have raids from the Baltic so long as the spirit of Genseric rules those prolific regions. Italy and England and France will continue to create glorious works of art and the Vandals will continue to envy the men whose work they clumsily seek to imitate. They cannot make Berlin attractive, but they can at least bombard Notre Dame and possibly depopulate Paris. The Prussian artists can please only Prussians, yet they may hope to wreck the Louvre and the Luxembourg, as Genseric sacked Rome and Attila leveled Aquileia to a dust heap."

"THE NEW DEATH."

THE NEW DEATH. By Winifred Kirkland. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

Miss Kirkland reviews the new vision toward death that has been accepted by most writers of every class since the war, and traces lightly the spiritual quality which in some fashion or other has affected numerous books. "The New Death" is intended in part of a document of consolation for those who fear and those who suffer losses in upholding the country. It is written with sympathetic dignity, some passages are giftedly phrased, and the summary of her viewpoint is perhaps contained in these words:

"It is in their service to the future that young men of proved genius find comfort for their arrested course. With eyes made tragically clear, they perceive that a premature fate may have greater influence than an accomplished career. A profound intuition reveals to them that it is more divine to be a man than an artist, and that their deepest peril is to fail the challenge to battle, for if they presume to believe themselves more valuable to the world alive than lost, they may choke at its source the wellspring of their inspiration."

A WONDER DETECTIVE.

CHRISTOPHER QUARLES. By Percy James Brebner. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

Sherlock Holmes isn't anywhere near in the same class with Christopher Quarles, the old philosopher, who solves problems by a little bit of vague deduction and a lot of intuition; but the only thing that in the least redeems these stories is the fertile imagination of the author, who consumes in practically every one of his short stories more complications than serve a full length mystery novel.

Mr. Brebner does not seem to me to fully appreciate dramatic values, at least in narrative, for—following the style of less ingenious writers of detective stories—he dilly-dallies over a lot of clues and hypothetical deductions; then Quarles gets a hunch, and suddenly the whole thing is revealed. "The Affair of the Stolen Gold" is one of the few, about the only one, in which his manner of narrative could scarcely be improved on, and even then his solution seems arbitrary.

Writers of detective stories are, as a whole, the poorest narrators in the language. They have all patterned after Conan Doyle, with never a thought or effort at improving that crude Dr. Watson medium and the "deductive" obscurities.

BAEDEKER PARODY.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TOWARD PARIS: 1914-1918. A Guidebook for Confirmed Tourists. By W. Hohenzollern. (Hon. Col. Death's Head Hussars and Doctor of Sacred Theology.) Translated from the original German and adapted for the use of untutored minds, by Simeon Strunsky. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

Simeon Strunsky, humorist and essayist, started out a clever idea. The conception is much more to be commended than the performance; for when one has grasped the idea that W. Hohenzollern has been most unlucky in his tour toward Paris, the humor of the book is exhausted—except for the six maps. They are clever, when the joke finally dawns. The first chapter, "Practical Notes," furnishes all the humor. The rest is dreary and forced stuff; and not even war patriotism can incite interest for the body of the small book.

PHYSICAL DRILL.

THE KOEHLER METHOD OF PHYSICAL DRILL. By Capt. William H. Wilbur. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

Capt. Wilbur has put into convenient and practical shape the method of physical drill used at West Point, where he served for several years as Maj. Koehler's assistant. The author's idea has been to turn out a text-book that will be of value for training the National Army. He says that "the physical drill properly used is an absolutely essential element in the making of good soldiers and better citizens, and should be adopted as an obligatory part of the training of our school children. It is training for the brain as well as training for the muscles."

It is well illustrated with photographs and the instructions are complete and easily followed.

CRITICISM.

HORIZONS: A BOOK OF CRITICISM. By Francis Hackett. B. W. Huebsch, New York.

"Horizons" is another of those books requiring the reviewer to review the reviewer, and in some instances the reviewer whose book is being reviewed has reviewed the books of other reviewers, etcetera. Which may remind some people of Ambrose Bierce's prophecy that literature would ultimately degenerate into mere comment on the comment that others have made in commenting on something that was not creative in the first place.

Mr. Hackett is an "earnest" critic. He has none of the sophisticated cynicism that may make much criticism valueless, but does something to keep it from being podgy. But in bending away from cynicism he leans perilously toward the professorial manner. I can imagine him with the fullness of years being used in the making of a composite photograph of professorial critics—a photograph that will when finished bear a likeness to Prof. Stuart P. Sherman, at the same time suggesting Prof. Lyon Phelps.

As a reviewer, I am rather familiar with most of the books that Mr. Hackett has reviewed. The reviews are well written in style and manner. They have the scrupulous attentiveness to manner of a young man observing the formality of St. James; they have the studious literary grace of the conscious essayist. The book is replete with such sentences as: "The odium of scientific monism may be attached to certain ruthless Germans, especially German legalists, but you cannot start out to annex such a convenient equipment as the old moral abstractions without hearing a loud squawk from the Kaiser." That is the tried and "intellectual" style. Mr. Hackett's reviews impress me much as that sentence does. It is easy enough to know of what he is talking, to know what he is saying, but what he thinks—that rather eludes perception. The thinking process is concealed behind the ruffles and furbelows of style, which Mr. Hackett wears with scholastic propriety, but as uncomfortably as a young man in tight trousers and stays.

This affectation of style is not so noticeable in his earlier work; and ten years ago he was not averse to saying what he thought, to letting his enthusiasms loose. A bit youthful may be the threnody on John Synge, but it is inspiring, bold with the boldness of admiration. I haven't read all of Mr. Hackett's reviews. I should certainly scream if compelled to pore over many pages like those devoted to Mr. Harvey's estimate of William Dean Howells; and how anyone with the admiration for Samuel Butler that Mr. Hackett professes could write of him in the manner and phrase that Butler so heartily detested, I do not know. But of those reviews I have read, the one on Synge impresses me as the most valuable; and for critical expression, nothing of the laborious brooding and sifting equals Mr. Hackett's review of "Tono-Bungay."

And in view of all this it is curious to find Mr. Hackett remarking in his introduction that when it was suggested that he collect his reviews for a volume, he thought of rewriting them, then decided that "why, after all . . . should I long to come forward in full dress when it was my habit to go around in a tennis shirt?" I suggest that he take to a bathing suit.

Scenery.

OXFORD HISTORIES.

The war has caused many books to be brought out to fill in deficiencies in historical chronicles which a new and general interest in nations' destinies has discovered to exist. The Oxford Press has issued several volumes of the kind intended for the student and inquirer who are hard put in ransacking libraries to get a complete story of, for instance, the Balkans.

Nevill Forbes, Arnold J. Toynbee, D. Mitrany and D. G. Hogarth have mingled ink from their respective wells to write "The Balkans: A History of Bulgaria, Serbia, Greece, Rumania and Turkey." The Balkans may be called the Witches' Caldron of Europe, and the authors say that "every one of these peoples, on whatever side he be fighting today, has a past worthy of more than our respect and interwoven in some intimate way with our history." Attention has been focused on near and contemporary events and the authors attempt to illuminate the muddle of politics and intrigue.

Another concentrated study of one power that has usually been treated as one, though the dominant one, of numerous Germanic states, is in "The Evolution of Prussia," by J. A. R. Marriott and C. Grant Robertson. In the authors' words, they have "attempted to set forth the story of the rise and development of Brandenburg-Prussia and the later Prussianization of Germany under the Hohenzollern dynasty, and to set it forth briefly and simply, but as a connected whole and with due regard to the claims of historical scholarship." They have "deemed it wise" to end the narrative with Bismarck's fall as later developments "have not yet fallen into historical perspective, and cannot be disentangled from political controversy; but, for the convenience of readers, the main facts have been succinctly narrated in an epilogue."

"Portugal, Old and Young," by George Young, is avowedly written as an answer to the question, "Why is Portugal at war, and at war on our side?" "A question," says the author, "which can only be answered by giving some idea of the part played by Portugal in past European history, of the present position of Portugal in the European polity, and of the potential power, moral and intellectual, represented by the Portuguese people."

"Italy: Mediaeval and Modern," by E. M. Jamison, C. M. Ady, K. D. Vernon and C. Sanford Terry, has its purpose and scope explained in this paragraph from the preface: "Our historical literature is full of admirable monographs on particular epochs of Italian history, and on the leaders of Italian religious and political movements. Yet it is strangely difficult to find any general sketch of Italian history, from the barbarian invasions to the present day, which can be recommended as an introduction to more detailed studies. It was to supply this need that the present volume was planned and written."

Many books have been written on Japan—a dozen if not more during the last two years—but Robert P. Porter, in "Japan: The Rise of a Modern Power," is among the first to bring together Japan's rise as expressed in military power and victories, and much attention is given to the part Japan is playing and has played in the present war. His interest is not confined to battles and campaigns, however; and the effort is made to give a comprehensive grasp of the people, their resources and industrial progress as well as their wars.

All of these books are issued by the Oxford University Press.

AMBROSE BIERCE.

It is one of the oddities of literature that the individual works of an author like Ambrose Bierce, who enjoys an international reputation as one of the leading American writers, should until now have remained practically inaccessible to the great body of American readers for lack of an American publisher. This stupendous anomaly has at last been removed by the enterprise of Boni & Liveright, who have undertaken the issuance of his best works, to be added in single volumes. Heretofore, it has only been possible to buy Ambrose Bierce in a ten-volume set, variously bound, at either $25, $60 or $100 a set. The first volume, that has just come from the press of Boni & Liveright, is "In the Midst of Life" (tales of soldiers and civilians.) This volume contains some of Bierce's very best stories, those of the American Civil War being particularly timely at this moment. The next volume Bierce's present publishers will issue will be "Can Such Things Be?"

Practically everybody knows of the mystery that has surrounded Bierce's life. Nothing has been heard of Bierce since he so dramatically disappeared in 1914. At that time it was rumored that he had joined Villa's forces in Mexico, and every few months another rumor spreads, locating Bierce anywhere from Petrograd to Patagonia. The other day, in speaking of Bierce, Gertrude Atherton, who says that he is the greatest writer of English the United States has produced, with the possible exception of Henry James, remarked that she recently heard from three "authoritative" sources that Bierce was doing special work for the British General Staff, was special military adviser to the Mikado of Japan and had been killed in Gallipoli. Other people say that he is hale and hearty in Paris at seventy-six, and has placed his military knowledge, gained in the Civil War, at the disposal of the French government.

But it is certain that no author of the last decade has been so much discussed by the men and women who have made the literature of the world during the past fifty years. Few great living authors may say that they have been uninfluenced by Ambrose Bierce. He himself humorously said in reference to his lack of recognition:

"My, how my fame rings out in every zone,
A thousand critics shouting, 'He's unknown!'"

—But in spite of this lack of general recognition, such men as Henry Irving, Austin Dobson and Clement Scott tell of how Bierce, then writing under the pseudonym of Dod Grile, stirred London thirty years ago as no writer has done since the days of Swift. Joel Chandler Harris once said: "If I were Santa Claus I'd put into the hands of every intelligent man and woman in the United States an edition of Ambrose Bierce's remarkable stories of soldiers and civilians." Elbert Hubbard once said: "Ambrose Bierce is the boss of us all. Ambrose can do without us. We cannot do without him and still have the sunshine and the shade. He knows life in its every phase." Owen Wister tells us, "Some of the things that Bierce writes are wonderful—a work of genius in fact." William Marion Reedy, who has discovered so many Americans and who has helped to rediscover many more, writes: "You cannot resist the lure of his style, simple, lucid, nervous, compact, his unerrant selection of the right word, his way of saying exactly what he means, nor less nor more." Arthur Brisbane, who some of us know as the highest paid editorial writer in America, says "Ambrose Bierce is one of the best writers in America, perhaps the best." So it would seem that he is a prophet not without honor in his own country, and that he is also appreciated in England as are few American authors other than Poe and Hawthorne. Conan Doyle considers him America's master of weird tales. Arthur Machen says that "In the Midst of Life" is one of the very best collections of short stories ever printed.

Bierce's present publishers do not feel that his work is of an even merit. It is their purpose to publish the four or five volumes which entitle him to his place as one of the few great American story tellers.

RELIGIOUS SENTIMENTALITY.

THE QUEST OF THE FACE. By Stephen Graham. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Mr. Graham has embodied much mystical Christianity in "The Quest of the Face" that will perhaps send thousands into raptures; and some others will think that he wanders in thoughts as much as the title intimates that he has wandered on the quest. It is rather Russian in its aimlessness and introspective searchings, a tendency that Mr. Graham no doubt has come by honestly.

It is the face of Christ for which he quests, and though he finds something of the face everywhere, there is no face that has it all: quite an allegory, and filled with enough of religious sentimentality to give an assortment of ecstatic thrills to minds that like to "feel" things instead of think.

I am aware that it is unusual to speak disrespectfully of books of the kind, for they are surrounded with some kind of sanctimonious aura that gives them immunity; and no doubt Mr. Graham was very sincere in the writing of it, but it impresses me as being filled with affectation, and certainly, in such chapters as "The Light" he has gone out of his way to be crassly artificial for the sake of a little, and by no means new, irony.

ROASTING THE KAISER.

KEEPING UP WITH WILLIAM. By Irving Bacheller. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

The cartoons by Gaar Williams are quite interesting, even amusing—some of them. But the Honorable Socrates Potter, from whose lips Mr. Bacheller has taken numerous words relative to the "merits of sense, common and preferred," is long-winded and sophomoric—as anybody is likely to be when he gets onto the war.

And this book is written for the same type of mind that confines its attention in the Sunday papers to the first page headlines and the comic supplements. Much of it is supposed to be humorous with a lot of good homely philosophy thrown in—the backwoods variety. Such stuff as this may appeal to many, no doubt it will, as making a book of some value on the war:

"Behold the common sense of Germany become the sense that is common only among criminals! The sooner we recognize that, the better. They are really burglars in this great house of God we inhabit, seeking to rob it of its best possession—Hindenburglars! In this war we must give them the consideration due a burglar, and only that." . . . etcetera.

A SPY NOVEL.

THE LIGHT ABOVE THE CROSS ROADS. By Mrs. Victor Rickard. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Mrs. Rickard has written a remarkable spy story; and though the merit of "The Light Above the Cross Roads" is exceedingly high, that merit is distinguished only in the last half. The first half is like the first half of almost a dozen novels easy to name that prepare to include the war in their narrative, and the foundation is not at all the best suited for the pinnacle she eventually raises.

There is no plot invention to this "spy story," little excitement. The information, and the manner of acquiring it, that Marcus Janover gets and gives to the British is suggested rather than described; and interest is allowed to focus only on one or two little incidents, as when Janover declares he has been thrown out of the British service, as when he flies over Helgoland, and when Ursule, the wicked but regenerate French girl, gleams what she wants from a nap and goes to her execution with a taunt for the Huns.

Janover is educated in Germany for the English diplomatic service, and at the death of his father finds himself without funds to continue in the ambassadorial retinue. It is then that the suggestion is made that he take up spy work. The author has been concerned in showing the revulsion which a decent, honorable fellow feels when called upon for love of country to play traitor to the confidences of friends, for Janover has many friends among Germans of high place. By emphasizing the fact that he is half Irish, by becoming naturalized, he is able to secure much precious information for his country; and the hate and disgust that he feels for himself is the author's theme—one that has been handled with distinction.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

HOW TO OUT-THINK YOUR OPPONENT. By Prof. Al Williams. John J. Newbegin, San Francisco.

This offers in book form the "Army and Rifle Interlocking System of Defense and Offense" for use in hand-to-hand fighting in which Prof. Williams has been instructing the sailors at Mare Island. It is designed to enable an unarmed man, or one whose rifle has become disabled, to clinch with the armed enemy and overpower him.

Prof. Williams says "the different positions and locks and holds are not difficult to learn though they may seem so at first. After a little practice it becomes very easy to gain a perfect balance and instinctively you will bring your hands, arms and legs into the most effective position to overpower your enemy and compel him to surrender."

The book is illustrated with photographic plates showing each of the important positions and accompanied by detailed instructions.

A FIRST POEM.

Palmer Cox, the famous creator of the Brownies and their books, who now lives at East Quoque, on Long Island, recently told how, at the age of 6, he manifested an unwelcome gift for poetry. "A man who lived some miles away," he says, "was crossing the fields below our house and my older brothers, looking out of the window, were talking about him. One of them said it was John Bell from Shefford Mountain. Well, the name has a sort of ring to it, that once started seemed hard to stop; it caught my ear, as I sat on the floor playing with spools, corncobs or some such things, and I suddenly broke out loudly in some extemporaneous lines, without knowing where or how they were going to end. Like 'the poet, with his eye in a fine frenzy rolling,' I started the verse:

John Bell
Gave a yell
When he fell
Into hell.

Milton never sent the rebel angels down to bottomless perdition with more unction, than I displayed in transferring poor John Bell to dwell in adamantine chains and penal fire. But epic poetry from a baby was not what my father wanted just then. He sat nigh with the Bible on his lap, strict in his rule, and had a hand that always seemed to be very near the ear of the wrongdoer. Surprised and angered at the bold output at his very bootleg, his hand soon found the side of my head and a second stanza was never given."

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Admiral Mahan's Books.

The increasing demand for Admiral Alfred T. Mahan's writings since America entered the war has led his publishers, Litttle, Brown & Co., to arrange for a volume of selections of his teachings on sea power and naval strategy, which they will publish in August under the title of "Mahan on Naval Warfare." The editor, Allan Westcott of the United States Naval Academy, will supply a biographical introduction to this important volume.

A List of Varied Interest.

The following books are announced for July publication by George H. Doran Company: "The Hive," by Will Levington Comfort; "The British Campaign in France and Flanders," Volume III, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; "From Bapaume to Passchendaele," by Philip Gibbs; "An Englishwoman's Home," by Mrs. A. Burnett Smith; "Ten Months in a German Raider," by Capt. John Stanley Cameron; "Why Prohibition?" by Charles Stelzle; "High Altars," by John Oxenham; "Knit and Sew for Your Man," by Maud Churchill Nicoll; "Practical Flying," by a flight commander; "What Everyone Should Know About the War;" "On the Fringe of the Great Fight," by Col. Nasmith; "Admirals of the British Navy," by Francis Dodd.

Mr. Baker Always Extemporaneous.

An interesting fact recently stated by Ralph A. Hayes, private secretary to Newton D. Baker, is that every address recorded in the book of the Secretary of War, "Frontiers of Freedom," was completely extemporaneous. No notes of any sort were used by the author in delivering any of them. "On several occasions," says Mr. Hayes, "I went with Mr. Baker from his house to the place where he was to speak, and on more than one of those occasions he had me to tell him the location of the meeting and the nature of it while on the way from his house to the meeting place. The only one of the talks in which any memoranda were used was that one before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, in which long excerpts from official documents had to be read into the record."

Harold MacGrath's World Trip.

Harold MacGrath, whose latest novel, "The Girl in His House," was published recently by the Harpers, has just told of the unusual way in which he decided to take a trip around the world. Before the war Mr. MacGrath and his wife occupied one end of the Villa Serbelloni, Bellagio, Lake Como. It was September. Trunks were packed and the author was about to return to America. Suddenly he ran out onto the terrace and flipped a coin.

"Heads or tails?"

"Heads," said Mrs. MacGrath, wondering what it all meant. The coin came up "tails" and resulted in a trip round the world which consumed a year and a half and 32,000 miles. In "The Girl in His House" Mr. MacGrath tells the tale of a man who had traveled in distant lands for six years, brooding because the woman he loved had married someone else. On his return to the States he met with many strange occurrences that made him change his mind as to whom he really loved and led him into entangling adventures.

"Offensive Fighting."

Pointers from Maj. Donald McRae's manual, "Offensive Fighting" (published upon the recommendation of the War College,) practically make up the entire book, and it would be hard to choose any that are of greater importance than others, when every one has been worked out under intensive experience by the Allied armies. Some chapter titles are: "Mine Crater Consolidation," "Trench Raids," "Patrols and the Control of No Man's Land," "Co-operation Between Infantry and Artillery," "Infantry in Action," etc. Exact detailed instruction is the feature of the book.

What Britain's First Sea Lord Said.

During his five months' visit to the Allied fleets Ralph D. Paine, author of "The Fighting Fleets" (Houghton Mifflin Company) had an interesting conversation with Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, Britain's new Sea Lord and acting head of the navy. Mr. Paine says: "When it comes to discussing naval matters, the first Sea Lord speaks straight from the shoulder, with an abrupt and convincing sincerity. 'Tell them when you go home that your navy is first class,' he said to me. 'We like your people immensely. I hear it from our admirals and other officers. There is nothing to be gained by flattery or empty compliments. We are in it together to the finish, and our fleets must work in harmony after this beastly war is over, or God help the civilization we are fighting to save. To my mind we can't afford to misunderstand each other. All that rubbish should be swept aside.'" Mr. Paine will go on a lecture tour in the fall when he will tell of "The Fighting Fleets."

"Biology of War."

Reports of the severe punishment inflicted on Prof. G. F. Nicolai of the University of Berlin for publishing his work, "The Biology of War," a translation of which will shortly be issued by the Century Company, have recently been confirmed. Dr. Nicolai, despite his having been not only one of the most celebrated scientists in Germany, but also consulting physician to the imperial family, firmly opposed the war from the beginning and, as a consequence, was interned in the Graudenz fortress, where he wrote most of his book. Furthermore, this punishment was not meted out, as was falsely asserted by the German government, "because Prof. Nicolai had sent his work to a Swiss publisher after evading the particular regulations laid down by the censor." On the contrary, the manuscript of "The Biology of War" was in Switzerland before its author could know that the German censor would not agree to the publication of this important scientific work. It is also a fact that the publication of the book was arranged by interested scientists without any personal assistance from the author. The Progres Medical of Paris notes: "We recall that Prof. Nicolai refused energetically to have anything to do with the making of bombshells to contain the germs of cholera or plague bacilli, and to inoculate Russian prisoners with bacteria."

Blackwood's New Story.

A new story by Algernon Blackwood called "The Garden of Survival," which E. P. Dutton & Co. will publish later in the summer, deals with the question of the influence upon living persons of loved ones who have died. It tells the story of how a man who had cared for his wife with less depth and ardor of affection than she had felt for him became able after her death to feel the greatness and power of her love working through the beauty of the world for the elevation and guidance of his soul. Mr. Blackwood is the acknowledged master if the kind of fiction that concerns itself with half-glimpsed spiritual truths and demands in its treatment the most delicate art, but those who have read the forthcoming book say that it exceeds even his previous stories in its exquisite beauty and its subtle but convincing portrayal of spiritual influence.

Another Couple

—Another couple of new books is emphasizing the importance of keeping in close touch with that Different Book Store at Bullock's
—to which delightful place all worthy thoughts immediately betake themselves as they leave the Press —and to which place a new book of fiction by J. C. Snaith, and a small volume by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, have only had time to take off their "wraps" and get themselves on the shelf for you

The Time Spirit
By J. C. SNAITH,
Author of Broke of Covendon and The Sailor.

—As the title indicates, Mr. Snaith has given us a clever, humorous, timely romance of the "havoc" created among the "old school" by the modern Spirit of Democracy. Written in his inimitable style, he has handled a rather sensational plot in a plausible, entertaining, somewhat satirical manner—which is as delightful as it is acceptable to present day readers. $1.50.

The New Revelation
By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

—Conan Doyle has dedicated his new book to:
"All the brave men and women, humble or learned, who have had the moral courage during seventy years to face ridicule or wordly disadvantages in order to testify to an all-important truth."
—The "Important Truth" being, of course, found in Spiritualism, the ranks of whose followers Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is the latest convert. $1.00.

IN THE STUDIOS ON THE RIALTO.

unless or until a scenario appears entirely acceptable in the eyes of the readers of the organization, it will not be recommended to its author for sale. When a scenario is considered acceptable, both in form and in matter, it will be stamped by the rubber stamp of the company as worthy of being sent to some film organization or star, and will be returned to the author with the recommendation it be submitted to whomsoever appears to the Palmer people likely to be in need of such a scenario. Of course, in order to do this, the organization will keep constantly in touch with the various film companies and their needs.

At the head of the company, and acting as chief editor is Frederick Palmer, who has had several years' experience as a successful writer and editor of scenarios. His experience includes work as staff writer for Mack Sennett, Triangle, William Fox and Universal. In nine months he wrote fifty-two accepted scenarios, i. e., more than one a week, for the Universal. Associated with him as business director and assistant editor is Roy L. Manker, well-known newspaper writer; while a staff of readers, all of whom are experienced writers, will assist in the perusal and criticism of submitted scripts.

Letters from Cecil de Mille and others whose names are mentioned above testify to the fact that a ready market will be found for all good film stories, which may easily be imagined when it is realized that approximately 30,000 photoplays are produced annually.

As 85 per cent. of all the pictures produced in this country are made in Southern California, it will readily be seen that an organization like the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, which is in touch with all the various film companies, may be of tremendous help to both writers and producers.

"We feel certain," said Mr. Manker yesterday, "that there are scores of persons with ideas and imagination, and with the will to write scenarios, who could be trained to do so properly if willing to do the required work. But we shall welcome as pupils also the writer of magazine stories who has not learned the business of putting his stories into scenario form."

RIGHT ABOUT FACE! MARCH TO MASON.

Today's canteen for soldiers and sailors, to be given at the Mason by the Stage Women's War Relief, promises unusually pleasing entertainment. Gladys Brockwell will be hostess, assisted by Mrs. Frank Lloyd, Billie Brockwell and Mrs. Mary Mann. Wallace Reid and Grace D'Armond will be guests of honor, with Mrs. Charles Kenyon dispensing punch. Mrs. Wallace Reid will pour tea and Rena Rogers, Alice Mason, Mildred Hollen, Dora Mae Howe, Lillian Keller, Lucille Humbert, Polly Moran, Lela Bliss, Violet Phillips, Mary Thurman, Juanita Hansen and Betty Schade will be Miss Brockwell's courtesy girls. Miss Margaret McKee will entertain with her whistling, and Robert Alter will furnish a 'cello programme.

LONG LINE WAITS TO SIGN LITTLE MARY.

A vision of Mary Pickford spending her vacation dodging a long and panting line of picture producers who are anxious to sign her up, following the completion of her Artcraft contract, is the view conjured up by the reports of Miss Pickford's publicity department; and, as a matter of fact, there is no doubt but that the biggest offers ever made by reliable concerns to any star have been laid at Mary's dainty tootsies. Not that Mary herself does any of the scrapping over terms; Mommer Pickford is always a match for the shrewdest of the producers.

As a matter of fact, Miss Pickford has been spending a restful and joyous vacation at Santa Monica—the first real vacation of her whole life, she says. And she has learned to swim!

"It was pretty hard on the old ocean and everybody else," smiled Mary yesterday, pulling one of her expensive little pouts, "and I wore out one swimming teacher and nearly drowned another; but now I can swim, anyhow. I always take Lottie's baby Mary in with me since I've learned to swim, and she's a good little sport—not a bit afraid."

And just as if Miss Pickford's life hadn't been just one darned pose after another, during the past four years, along came the famous sculptor, Prince Troubetskoy, the other day, and nothing to do but the famous little star must pose for him.

HORRORS! WANTED SACRED SHOES FIXED.

There came near to being one less property man at the Chaplin studios this week. This is how it happened, when the usual calm of the studio was sadly ruffled one day the past week by a wild shriek from the dressing-room of the comedian.

At sound of that shriek, actors, stage hands, property men and the entire office force dashed in confusion toward the dressing-room, expecting to see the one and only Charlie in the throes of apoplexy or the clutches of a hold-up man.

"They are gone, gone!" wailed Charlie.

"What are gown?" chorused the crowd.

"My shoes, my shoes!" answered Charlie. "They were here last night, and now they are gone!"

A pall of sorrow spread over the hushed throng at thought of the tragedy of losing those famous shoes which have inspired poets and made the sick to pick up their beds and walk.

Just then a property man came whistling along. He was a new property man and didn't know studio traditions. "Wot's the trouble?" he demanded.

"My shoes—have you seen my shoes?" cried Charlie.

"Oh—them old things?"

"Yes, yes—."

"W'y," drawled the property man, "I thought them shoes needed mendin' and—."

A howl of rage and sorrow arose from the c rowd.

"So I was just agoin' to take 'em down and have 'em fixed up right."

He never got any further.

So that, during the past week, Miss Pickford has not been depending solely on canned immortality in the shape of film, but has been coming in daily to the Lasky studio, where, in the quiet of her capacious dressing-rooms, she has been submitting to the ordeal of having her head and shoulders "sculped."

Until the game of hide-and-seek with the producers is finished, and a contract signed up, Miss Pickford will continue to rest—or at least will continue along with her idea of rest; and it is possible that she may take a trip to New York for the purpose of putting her small fist to the contract.

By the way, Miss Pickford's last Artcraft picture is named "Johanna Enlists," and is considered to be the best picture she has ever made.

"FATTY" TELLS HOW TO BE SYLPH-LIKE.

With his willowy figure draped in a baby blue bathrobe revealing the beautifully rounded curves of his body, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, the rotund motion picture comedian and health expert, in his dressing-room yesterday delivered another secret on how to grow thin, while answering letters from frantic seekers after the truth. The jovial comic receives many foolish letters from the lovesick, who have no doubt been attracted by his heroic build and classic features, but he has no time for such. No other questions but those concerning surplus flesh will be answered.

"I can assure my readers that ice or roller skating will be a great aid in reducing, providing one does not remain too long in a sitting position," said Doctor Arbuckle. "It is absolutely necessary to stay on one's feet in order to get proper results. When taking a corner, however, skate on one foot, and you will find that your curves will speedily reduce in quality and quantity. Ice skating should be enjoyed in cold climate, but if you skate in a warm climate it is best to wear rubber boots and a life preserver. Cold baths are conducive to the loss of flesh. Therefore, I advise fat persons to skate on thin ice."

DOROTHY DALTON IS THE MOLD OF FASHION.

Arriving at the head of several vans bearing new clothes for forthcoming pictures, and carrying in her hand a vanity case containing the very latest thing in bathing suits, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas H. Ince star, returned from New York a few days ago.

But though Miss Dalton shopped a great deal, she took a little time off in order to entertain photoplay magazine editors and others of the pen-pushing tribe, who forthwith splashed ink trying to tell how charming her eyebrows and dimples are.

"Frankly," said Miss Dalton, the other day, "I don't just hate to hear such things, principally because it in part compensates for having been voted the ugliest girl in the third grade. I had freckles, wore my hair in two tight pigtails, and had first and second teeth crowding each other for window display honors."

Miss Dalton says vacationing is much harder work than working, and she will resume her labors in behalf of art this week, expecting slowly to regain her health. She has an excellent new role in a highly dramatic offering as her next picture story.

HAYAKAWA TOOK AN UNEXPECTED DIP.

An unexpected and rather exciting bath was the portion of Sessue Hayakawa, film star, a few days ago at Monrovia, where he is making some scenes on a beautiful old estate for "The Temple of Dusk," under the direction of James Young.

The company was working near a pool in the old rose garden which embellishes the estate, and Young was directing a tug-of-war between the little Japanese and American children, which the youngsters enjoyed immensely in rehearsal. The scene was about to be shot when Hayakawa was called over to the rope by the Japanese children and unanimously asked to help them. The director consented, and then, an idea occurring to him, he whispered to the sturdy boys who were pulling on the American side. There were many giggles and excited nodding of heads.

It was then that Hayakawa's unexpected immersion took place, for the American boys swung the Japanese around to such an extent that Hayakawa, who was at the end of the rope acting as the anchor, was hauled off his feet and sent flying head first into the pool, the Japanese children at the same time falling precipitately into the camp of their American cousins.

Mr. Hayakawa took the ducking like a good sport, and Director Young says he got a great scene.

TRIANGLE ADDS MANY DIRECTORS AND STARS.

Another director of proven ability has been added to the forces at the Triangle's Culver City studios, making a total of four new directors engaged during the past six weeks. He is Henry Otto, responsible for many excellent pictures, chief of which perhaps was the lovely masterpiece, "Undine." The Triangle directing force now includes such well-known names as Christy Cabanne, Cliff Smith, William Dowlan, Albert Parker, Gilbert P. Hamilton, Frank Borzage and Thomas N. Heffron, while it is rumored that several more new directors are soon to be engaged.

With the arrival of Taylor Holmes and his director next week, there will be nine feature companies on the Triangle lot, and with such well-known stars as Taylor Holmes, Harry Mestayer, Alma Rubens, William Desmond, Pauline Starke, Gloria Swanson and Roy Stewart, some high-class pictures are expected.

BRONCO BILLY GETS INTO HIS STRIDE.

Under the direction of Jesse J. Robbins, the G. M. Anderson Company is rapidly approaching the completion of their first release, a five-reel western production entitled "The Son-of-a-Gun," featuring Mr. Anderson in the title role.

The story, written in collaboration by the star and Director Robbins, is said to be full to overflowing with the vivid action and the genuine heart interest characteristic of the original "Bronco Billy" pictures, which pictures Mr. Robbins likewise directed. No time has as yet been set for the release of the "Son-of-a-Gun," but it is generally understood that it will be some time in September.

In the cast of the feature are Joy Lewis, Frederick Church, Paul Willis, Harry Todd and A. E. Whiting.

BRUNTON STUDIOS WILL TAKE IN TO LET SIGN.

Production activities are booming at the Brunton Studios. Two Paralta companies, with Louise Glaum and Bessie Barriscale, are now producing, and Paralta makes the statement that in two weeks there will be at least three others. Sessue Hayakawa is filming his latest production there. Frank Keenan will start work immediately on a Pathe production. A series of Zane Grey novels will be filmed, starting with "The U. P. Trail," which will be given an elaborate production. Negotiations with other stars and producers are under way, and there is every prospect that the big studios will be producing to their full capacity within a short time.

Louise Glaum has completed her latest Paralta play, "A Law Unto Herself," by Francis Paget. Her

Doubtless there are those familiar with this so-convenient bag, too, who would confess — were they pinned down to it, that they were unaware as to Gladstone, the man, and who are well acquainted with the traveling bag.

Under Fashions' Cloak.

Pink silk gingham trimmed with pink organdie makes an unusually smart frock.

Ratine and spotted batiste, and even mull make the war-time garden party gowns.

A yellow bathing suit is girdled with blue, and has pockets of yellow and blue stripes.

Among the ornaments seen on the summer hats are silk flowers painted by hand.

The untrimmed low-cut necks of dresses are becoming only to plump and lovely throats.

A summer suit of shantung is splendid for two reasons: it looks well and wears well.

A dress of white dotted rose foulard can be very attractive.

Slipons of wool, lined with foulard, are worn inside out when the owner wants a change of dress.

Tunics are as much worn as ever, and are often carried out in tricot, over an underskirt of smooth satin.

A pink batiste hat embroidered in French knots, can be worn upon either afternoon or evening occasions.

One smart dress of mull was trimmed with a soft bow tie of lace insertion, which had long, pointed ends.

An attractive motor veil was made of net, weighted by a very broad band of velvet—broad enough to be used as a cape.

If one wears a girdle of blue with a white dress, it is only right to wear blue stockings and white shoes to complete the costume.

ANGELENO SOLDIER GOES GLADLY TO WAR.

MEN WILL RETURN BIGGER AND STRONGER FROM EXPERIENCE, HE SAYS.

A letter typical of the high purpose and good cheer which animates the American soldier in and on the way to France has just been received here by Mrs. J. A. Davis of No. 6088 Selma avenue from her son, Ralph E. Davis, written just before his embarkation for overseas at Camp Merritt, N. J. The letter is as follows:

My Loved Ones at Home:

When you receive this letter I will already, barring mishaps, be over there. The weeks and months of anticipation will have been passed and our one great purpose—to get over—will have begun to be realized.

How strange it seems to be writing this! How different I feel from what I thought I would feel when this supreme anticipation of the past year is about to be realized! As I have looked forward to the eve of "shoring off," it has many times seemed that the adventure immediately confronting us would appear so huge, and at the same time so forboding, as to make the last few hours in our beloved native land anxious, and certainly the last night sleepless.

And yet it has not been that way. We are naturally looking forward to a great adventure, but it is the uniqueness rather than the danger of it that stimulates our thought. Except for a certain quiet expectancy, all of us are as calm as though we were going about our peaceful pursuits back in the dear West.

In fact, one can scarcely be otherwise in the army. The first commandment here is to be ready, and after one accustoms oneself to be constantly ready for anything—either the best or the worst, the easiest or the most difficult—even a trip on a transport in these stormy days does not alarm one unduly.

So every man of us is ready. No sleep is being lost and now as later on, we are ready to accept the worst even, as a part of the day's work. I only hope that our loved ones at home will accept the future with as little forboding and as much optimistic faith as we do ourselves.

As for myself, I am absolutely sure that I am in the one place of all the places in the world, where I should be. There is no task in all the realm of the world's work to which I could dedicate myself more completely than the one in which I am engaged now.

"Going off to war" for a cause such as America in this war is not an awful thing. It is not a cause of despair, but rather an occasion for thankfulness. It is one of the privileges which come to the average man but once in his life. It is a chance to find himself and to realize his best self, as most of us have never had before, and perhaps will never have again. An American soldier's life in this emergency is not a cause to feel that hope has fled, but rather it is a challenge to the very best which he possesses.

Practically all of us are coming out of the war bigger and stronger than we ever could have become without the discipline and training which this crusade for democracy is giving to us.

I am so thankful that I have this opportunity. It is one of the greatest blessings which could have come to me. I surely do not count it a tragedy. If our country did not have such an altruistic motive in waging the war, it would be different. But as it is, the person who purposely stays out of this great Christian campaign is depriving himself of an opportunity which will leave his life marked forever.

Because Germany began the war: because she began it to realize her own criminal lust for world dominion and not for her own protection or for any legitimate cause; because Germany hacked her way through unsuspecting Belgium and raped and sacked and plundered like fiends from hell; because Germany disregarded her own pledges and promises in the conduct of the war by bombarding unfortified towns, resorting to pillage, using poison gases, dropping bombs on sleeping villages; because she flung aside international law and sent to the bottom of the sea the Lusitania and other ships filled with innocent men, women and children; because Germany filled our land with spies and plotted for the destruction of our mines and factories and churches and homes and all that America holds dear and tried to alienate us from other friendly nations; because Germany imperiled civilized standards by declaring that might makes right, and because she made the world unsafe for democracy as well as unsafe for every other institution, including the church and the home, which we Americans hold sacred—because of these things it is necessary that she be humiliated.

I thank God that I have inherited from my parents the red blood, the six feet of stature, 180 pounds of weight, the attitude toward my brother man, the love of righteousness and the determination to do my part in prosecuting this present programme until once again justice and safety and peace are enthroned in the world.

In the light of all this I know that you will not weep or regret or even worry because I have embarked for over there. I am glad that I can go, and you will be glad that I can be your representative. I am doing something better than I have ever done before. I am only doing my duty as a man is bound to do.

Whatever happens will be for the best. I am positive of this. God is in his heaven and rules the world still. Our life is in his hands and even submarines or German seventy-fives cannot thwart His purposes. His will shall be done, and we would not have it otherwise, would we? And even if we shall not come into physical contact again, let us not forget that the ultimate substance of our lives is after all not physical, but something far more permanent and eternal.

The thing in your life which has always called forth my love, is not a something to be measured in avoirdupois and vice versa. But the real thing that constitutes life, the essence of our beings, the part that will cling to us after taps has sounded for the last time—is our unseen, intangible but nevertheless real spirit, and bayonets do not go that far.

So it really makes very little difference what happens to our physical selves. It is the soul of a man which we love and the soul is immortal and eternal. The Germans cannot get that because it belongs to God.

You will be good while I am gone, I hope. I guess you could scarcely be otherwise, could you? Take good care of one another and keep the home fires burning 'till I come home again.

With a greater love than I shall ever be able to express or show, I am your humble but loving son and brother,

RALPH E. DAVIS.

WONDERFUL GRIT OF THE WOUNDED.

ONLY ONE OUTCRY IN A BUSY WEEK IN FOUR DRESSING-ROOMS.

The medical folk salute the wounded from the fighting around Chateau Thierry. From the youngest litter boy to the senior surgeon, from the rudest of the field dressing stations to the finest operating-room in Paris, the testimony is overwhelming to this effect—that they had never seen such grit in all their lives, never seen such unquenchable spirit.

In the four dressing-rooms of a divisional evacuation hospital through which the procession of wounded must pass on its way from the field hospitals, hundreds of soldiers were treated last week—treated all hours of the day or night in all those cases where bleeding had to be stopped, where fresh dressings had to be given, where anti-tetanus had not yet been administered. Such work does not call for anaesthesia. And in all that week, there was only one outcry. That was from a man with a slight skin wound.

Through the receiving-room in the Red Cross Military Hospital No. 2 in Paris, 225 of the wounded passed in one night and there was not a murmur from any of them. One infantryman, who was shot through the abdomen, crawled into the dressing station twenty-seven hours after he had fallen. On the dressing table he smoked a cigarette and talked airily of what had befallen him and told how another doughboy had administered first aid and then disappeared in the shuffle.

A major saw a man walking groggily out past the point from which the litter boys were operating. He was cradling his arms.

"Are you wounded?" he called out to him.

"I've only broken my arms," was the answer. "I can hoof it."

One infantryman was shot through both arms and both legs, breaking the bones of his thighs. He was shot in the abdomen and shot in the hip. He talked enthusiastically about the battle with the doctor who was dressing his wounds in the field hospital.

"What's this fellow got, lieutenant" asked someone peering over the surgeon's shoulder. "Guts," said the lieutenant respectfully.—[Stars and Stripes, France.

Lizard That Aviates.

At least one lizard enjoys, to a certain degree, the power of sailing through the air, as in the cases of flying squirrels, flying frogs of Borneo and some other animals. These lizards are called flying dragons and they are all small-sized forms found in the Indo-Malayan region. They possess elongated ribs in mid-series, some five to seven pairs of them; these ribs support, on either side of the body, a semi-transparent membrane, it being stretched over them both dorsally and ventrally, united at the free margins, and continuous with the general integument of the body. It, or rather, these "wings" close up like a fan when not in use and fall to the sides of the animal, but when spread form a parachute of marked effectiveness, as by its use this lizard can leap from the limb of a tree and sail to another one at certain distances as well as a Phalanger or a flying Lemur. Sometimes these "wings" in certain species of the flying dragons are beautifully marked, resembling the wing markings of some butterflies.—[R. W. Shufeldt, in Scientific American Supplement.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

According to Miss Minnie L. Jamison, State secretary of college volunteers, North Carolina, the college women of North Carolina are doing work unthought of for women before the war. One girl is driving a milk wagon, two girls are driving trucks, and fifteen have volunteered to mow the twenty-acre campus of the Normal School during the summer months.

Miss Jamison reports that ten war farmers at the Normal College hoed seventy-five acres of corn; that ten girls volunteered to put up 8000 cans of tomatoes, beans and soup mixtures at the Normal College; that fifteen girls volunteered to do stenographic work during summer school; that 200 girls are making a campaign to save 50 to 100 per cent. wheat in 1000 homes during the next few weeks; that two volunteers are teaching canning to colored persons; and that a campaign for back-yard gardens in colored settlements has begun, and will be conducted by white and colored college volunteers in co-operation with the colored agent for Boys' and Girls' Club Work.

An old man, thin and bent, with the years of hardships plainly marking his wrinkled face, says the Indianapolis News, stood on a station platform at an Indiana town recently as a train bearing a party of young men registrants to Camp Taylor stopped. The old man wore a faded blue uniform, the badge of the Civil War. He had a message for the young men who were to be enrolled in Uncle Sam's great army, and soon he was surrounded by a group of the young fellows.

"I wasn't counting on getting to talk to so many of you boys," he told them tremulously. "I just came down to give something to one of Uncle Sam's new soldiers."

He drew a parcel from under his coat and opening it displayed a pair of almost perfectly knitted socks. "They ain't much for my country," he apologized, "but they will help some young fellow to fight better. These don't look like much for a soldier to give, but I knitted them myself and I bought the yarn out of my pension money."

A thin fellow got the socks because the old soldier thought he would need them most. The train pulled out and the little old soldier went back home to knit another pair of socks for another young soldier.

Contracts have been awarded by the Young Women's Christian Association for the erection of two hostess houses for the entertainment of the relatives and friends of the colored soldiers stationed at Camp Jackson, South Carolina, and Camp Gordon, Georgia. It is the plan of the association to provide similar hostess houses for all the camps at which colored soldiers are stationed. For this purpose committees to assist in organizing the work are formed among the wives of officers.

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB
SYMPOSIUM.

THE Happy Thought Club has been compelled to take out burglary insurance and hire a night watchman. Lawless ones covet the treasures it is acquiring and only the other night a daring attempt was made to break into curio hall and despoil the club of the possession of the ancient violin with which the Emperor Nero entertained his people while their homes were burning. But for the fact that the Old Resident had carelessly left the fiddle in a poolroom on his way home the night before it might indeed have been taken.

The desperate thief in prowling about the place in quest of the historic trophy, overturned the armor of Godfrey of Bouillon, which was standing in a corner and was frightened away by the noise he made. When the custodian came in the morning he had to help Godfrey to his feet, but was relieved to note that nothing was missing. He knew that the Old Resident had the precious violin in his own keeping.

But for fear that thieves would return the club decided to take out $10,000 worth of burglary insurance and also have some one in the capacity of watchman, as the custodian cannot be expected to be on the premises all the time. Accordingly Cole Day, a young man who aspires to do literary work at night after the manner of all famous bards, was given a job on the premises as assistant curator with the understanding that he is to remain awake while the custodian is absent or taking his feathered refreshment.

The armor of Godfrey, which served as an alarm against the covetous attack of burglars, is the suit worn by John Godfrey Fortune, a lineal descendant of the Poladin, as a member of the wonderful band and orchestra of the Happy Thought Club. It is also used occasionally by the custodian as a stove. On a cool morning he can fill the armor with paper and then by touching it off with a match; he is made as comfortable as a bug in a rug. On a showdown he can make his coffee and toast on his novel base burner.

Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away,
While knightly Goldfrey's ancient suit of tin
Might form a furnace where to warm one's fin.

The Old Resident had a little glow of pride on his person at the symposium yesterday. Probably it was because he had been invited to appear before the Scherzo Club and give a concert on his Nero fiddle. The old man called the club the "skirts" and that is possibly why he was pleased with the recognition. It seems as if a skirt can get a rise out of him most any time.

At any rate the Scherzo members were anxious to see and hear this famous instrument and were willing to accept the pioneer as the inevitable accompaniment. As a trombone artist the old man might be able to get by, but as a violin performer he is about the third poorest seven-up player south of the Tehachepi. That is not stopping him, however, and unless the District Attorney interferes he is liable yet to be making a phonograph record with his ancient instrument to the garrulous notes of "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight"—which he insists was Nero's masterpiece.

Officer! do your duty.

The club collection of historic treasures continues to increase. During the week the sunny secretary received a registered package from the Sunnybrook stock farm accompanied by this note:

"We realize the matchless service you are doing to art and posterity by making and preserving your wonderful collection of musical instruments. Cannot you extend that service in keeping with the warlike spirit of the time? Make your collection one of historic weapons as well. We are sending you in this mail a treasure which has been handed down in our family for generations and which is highly prized by others as well. Receive it reverently for it is none other than the epistolarum with which Terre del Fuego shot the ferocious and bloodthirsty Persimmons. It descended to us from Terre himself—whose name was Mud, and who was conspicuous in our family ancestry. We are sure you will take the best of care of this great relic and that you will so place it that it may be viewed and studied by interested ones. In case you should wish to obtain complete title to this trophy we have consented to sacrifice it for $1000 cash, although, of course, it is practically priceless. We would not willingly entrust it to any other than your worthy organization."

"What is an epistolarum, anyhow?" inquired the Cheerful Idiot.

Tenderly the secretary lifted the treasure from its cushioned receptacle and it was passed around for inspection. It was found that this particular epistolarum was made from the jawbone of a mongoose, and could be loaded and used in the same manner as a fountain pen. Loaded with red ink, it was said to do deadly execution at two paces.

The Old Resident was delighted with the treasure, and was eager to carry out the suggestions conveyed in the letter. He wanted to send a draft for $1000 to the Sunnybrook people at once. Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, however, once more urged caution, and asked that time be taken to investigate the authenticity of the relic and the circumstances surrounding its tender to the club. He said that there was no danger in it's getting away, and that the haste was not only unnecessary but unwise. If it wasn't for the professor the Old Resident would keep the club in a delicious condition of bankruptcy most of the time.

In the obituary department the amiable secretary said she had given a hearing to Hiram Chatter, the favorite undertaker of Sage Canyon, who wished a chance at the contract for burying Adam. His offering was as follows:

Pause, passenger, and shed a tear,
For ancient Adam's buried here;
He started in the human vale,
But only got a "show" or "place."
When Eve came ambling in the plan
Poor Adam was an also ran.

Sunset Sallie, the soft singer of the Sierras, also responded with the second installment of her epic to Adam's apple, and which glided gracefully over the hot sands in this form:

Adam's Apple.

Of course, we know it wasn't man's intention
  To saddle all the blame on Mother Eve.
That was a most malevolent invention
  Of Satan's and the serpent, we believe.
For in this tale of theid "dabu" from Eden
  Poor Mother Eve is always made the goat,
Yet she was lucky when she ate that apple—
  It might have stuck in her own pretty throat.

While hanging around the morgue at Bonita a young man who gave the name of Knott Wise, found an order for a tombstone on which this message was to be inscribed:

Nobody Knows.

Beneath this slab rests Reuben Rose,
Where he came from no one knows;
He tumbled down three flights of stairs—
Where he has gone to nobody cares.
If he don't wake resurrection morn,
Nobody'll wonder who blew the horn.
If he hadn't been a hearty sleeper
We'd planted him some four feet deeper.

Letty M. E. Ramble, the cute thing who wrote a buzz-wagon song, added this fragment to her collection:

You laugh till you choke
At a funny "Ford" joke,
  And then there is nothing to meet it;
But if you are bored
Just use a new Ford,
  And you'll find there is nothing can beat it.

Letty also put her blinkers on the downtown parade of movie queens and broke out in a new place, like this:

Little dabs of powder,
  Little daubs of paint
Make the Broadway chicken
  Look like what she aint!

Tommy Tomtom Thompson, the ten-toed terror of Tioga, has been working his muse for ballads about current events and timely topids. He lay on the torrid beach at Venice until he was all "het up." When the prickly heat subsided the proceeds looked something like this:

The Sunburned Boy.

I once knew a boy who had auburn hair,
And of dancing brown eyes he had a pair.
To tan and sunburn he gave not a care,
So he laid on the beach with his skin all bare.
Old Sol beamed down with his rays so bright,
And the skin on his arms and legs grew tight.
When evening came he was a sight—
He was cross and peevish, and ready to fight—
His mother and sisters cried out in alarm
And looked about for some magic charm
To allay the pain in his back and arm.
They espied a bottle of mystic cream,
At sight of which he began to scream—
But they rubbed him softly and helped him to creep
Into his bed, where he went to sleep.
But when morning dawned he still was sore,
Fire seemed to burst from every pore—
He had been in this fix every summer before—
And he vowed he would go to the beach no more.

N. H. Parker, the grand old bard of the Verdugo Valley, has been putting forth some stirring rhymes of the war, and some of his lines hang beneath the service flag of the home at No. 136 Elrose avenue, in fair Glendale. They are like this:

The Service.

This flag denotes that one is away,
Who has gone to join the world's wild fray;
He's somewhere out upon the sea,
There to project both you and me.
You'll find him there beside the gun,
Ready to meet the U-boat Hun,
His young heart glows with a patriot's pride,
As he coolly surveys the billowy tide—
There with his comrades true and brave,
To fight to the last our land to save.
No thoughts of peace until victory's won,
With death and defeat for the vandal Hun.
With triumph over, and war then o'er,
Then he may come to his native shore.
Let the fire of patriotism in our hearts burn,
And think of the joy when our boy shall return.

Bloody old Mars should be asked to tell,
Why on earth he raises hell;
Why a Nero at the head of the Hun,
Should think the slaughter of man great fun—
The insolent king who coldly smiled
At ravished woman or starving child.
He holds that from God he is inspired,
Yet it seems that by Satan he was hired.
Yet he claims he holds a right divine
To butcher men like so many swine.
Were the great Dante on earth today
He would think his inferno a petty play
Compared with scenes enacted now.
To the devilish Kaiser he would bow.
They are giving Europe a bath in blood,
Her streams are red with a crimson flood,
At the scenes that are acted now in France
The devils are holding a merry dance.
This partnership of Mars and Kaiser,
With the devil as supreme adviser,
Must now and forever be rent in twain
If peace shall be brought to this earth again.
Uncle Sam has started upon that work,
And from his duty he will not shirk.
On him falls the weight of the task today,
To win the victory and stop the fray.
On that great mission he has begun,
And there is no rest till the deed is done,
The brave marines help tell the tale,
They are driving the Huns o'er hill and dale;
Our troops are in triumph on every field,
And the Kaiser's horde must surely yield.
If the crazy Hun could but see his fate
He would muzzle his dogs ere it grows too late.
For as sure as the sun our flag shall shine
On top of his ramparts over the Rhine.

Cumming A. Cross, the clever cleaver of Cloverdale, begged to be heard for a few moments on a matter of a parody in the Gen. Goliath Gander jingles. It affected him in this way:

"There was a man in our town,
  The wisest of his kind.
He always kept expenses down
  And never ran behind.

And so he left a heap of mon
  When it come time to croak;
His heirs went through it on the run
  And he can't see the joke."

At this stage of the game the Cheerful Idiot had an idea—something that happens every now and then in hot weather. He thought the club should follow up the plan of securing famous historic weapons, and he believed he could obtain the cross bow with which the ancient mariner shot the albatross. He said it was now in possession of Albert Ross himself, the ancient mariner having shaved himself and got rid of the bow as a hoodoo.

Gladys Canby demurely stated that she once had a cross beau herself, and was glad to get rid of him. If the secretary wanted to add to her collection she was welcome.

Then Esmercida Hooligan wanted to know what made the bow cross, and the idiot replied that it was probably because some fool woman wanted to use it for a hat pin.

Nevertheless, the club is trying to get that cross bow, as well as any other bloody tools of antiquity. A scouting party is out after King Arthur's sword. The Cheerful Idiot said that that was the largest caliber of any weapon he knew. It was excaliber. If anybody has trace of any notable weapons they will confer a favor by notifying the vigilance committee of the club.

In the limerick contest of persons and places Ima Goodwin reported a disturbance in her brain pan which, when pruned, panned out like this:

"There was a young woman named Zoe
Who was never mentally slow,
  She said that to wed
  Was like making bread—
A matter of needing the dough."

Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, who has been deciphering and translating the love letters of Adam and Eve, said that he had almost finished Adam's third effusion, but would not be able to submit it until after he had consulted the censor. The Happy Thought studio is one of the few equipped with this modern piece of furniture, and the professor thinks a censorship is valuable in literature as well as in moving pictures. "A lot of Adam's relatives might be embarrassed if they knew what kind of a guy he was," the professor explained.

Perhaps he is right.

In the meantime all applications for membership, all limericks of persons and places, Gander jingles or happy thoughts, as well as all suggestions toward the securing of famous historical weapons or musical instruments, may be addressed to Eugene Brown, editorial rooms, The Times.

Bullock's Basement Store

There are many reasons why you should come to

Bullock's Basement Store

Everyday—and Monday

—For Monday is such a particularly particular day each week—a day on which Bullock's Basement Store takes increased pleasure in emphasizing the good reasons that are rational, good economy reasons why one should find it of advantage to shop in Bullock's Basement Store Everyday.

—There are the merchandise—the variety—the values—There are the ideals of Bullock's that are an anchor, an inspiration and a guide—There is the Spirit of Service that is the spirit of Bullock's that is as dominant and evident in the Basement Store as elsewhere in every section of this business. —There are these things that are closely associated with an appreciation of responsibility that is as sincere as sincerity itself—and there are other things, perhaps, that occur as the days go by, or that exist even if they do not occur—All of them going towards the making of a business that desires to be known as a good business, a business that one can turn to with confidence as one would turn to a friend.

—So these Silk Dresses that are being featured at $12.50 are not to be considered merely as $12.50 Dresses but as good silk dresses for $12.50—of taffeta and crepe de chine—in black, navy, gold, green, sand and gray—a few in striped effects—very pretty styles—and values at $12.50.

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—And the Wash Skirts at $1.95 must be thought of as of worthwhile pique, and gabardine—in plain and striped designs. Several styles—sizes 24 to 37 waist—$1.95.

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—And the Waists at $2.95 of Georgette Crepe and Crepe de Chine, semi-tailored and more elaborate effects—with lace, tucks, hemstitching and pearl buttons. Even sizes 36 to 46. Isn't that good news—$2.95.

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—Girls' Knit Bathing Suits have assembled themselves under three prices, $3.25, $3.50 and $3.95. If you have not known Bullock's Bathing Suits of worsted and woolen materials in Bullock's Basement Store, you should know them now—$3.25, $3.50, $3.95—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—Then there is Muslin Underwear at 75c— Gowns and Envelope Chemise of a quality and character that are surprising especially at this time when gowns and chemise of any kind are surprising at 75c—Gowns, sizes 16x17; Envelope Chemise, sizes 36 to 44—75c—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—Girls' Muslin Drawers in sizes 2 to 12 years—25c and 35c—of white muslin gathered at knee, finished with a hemstitched ruffle and 5 button holes—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—The Untrimmed Hats at $1.95 can not fail to interest those who have untrimmed hats at all in mind— Large, medium and small shapes in black, white and colors— Hats that were not $1.95 hats in any sense of the word are now $1.95—and values—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—36 Inch Cotton Warp Plaid Dress Goods at 75c Yard— Won't mothers like it for children's dresses? It is just as desirable for skirts and jackets and suits, 75c—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—A Satin Messaline at $1.65—35 inches wide—extends an invitation from the Basement Silk Section—it is in white, black, rose, pink, mais, gray and many other colors—$1.65 yard—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—A Snow White Dimity at 22½c—and 38 in. Colored Voiles at 35c—Two leading representatives from the Basement Store of Cottons. 1000 yards of the former in dainty checks, stripes and broken plaids—27 inches wide. 1500 yards of the latter in good plain colors—38 inches wide—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—27 Inch Mercerized Poplins at 40c Yard—are very firmly woven—highly mercerized and in a good range of colors. For waists, dresses and children's wear—40c yard—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

—75 Scalloped Lunch Cloths offer themselves, Monday at $1.25. Just 75 of them firmly woven, linen—like finish—heavy quality—$1.25—

—in Bullock's Basement Store

P. S.—600 Bath Towels 20x40 in.—Turkish, mind you—double thread—at 30c each, while 600 last—

Dear Eddie
Smithy's mother says she doesn't believe in arguing. She says if they don't agree with you and they keep on talking, just pick out a spot and soak 'em, and soak 'em good. She says she knows lots of arguments that have been stopped by a good crack in the snoot. It's no good to argue, it doesn't even do your voice any good, and it is wear and tear on the atmosphere all around. It is awfully trying on the ones that have to listen, so she think it ought to be made a penitentiary offense to argue—

THAT KIND, POLITE PEOPLE WILL NOT ARGUE. SENSIBLE PEOPLE REFUSE TO ARGUE- ALL ARGUMENTS ARE BASED ON BELIEFS OR ON OPINIONS- WHEN SOME ONE GETS A LITTLE TOO ENTHUSIASTIC HE SAYS SOMETHING THAT HE DOES N'T MEAN TO HURT OR STOP THE OTHER ONE AND THEN ALL REASON CEASES- IF YOU FIND SOME DISAGREEABLE PERSON WHO LOVES TO ARGUE, JUST AGREE WITH HIM AND LET IT GO AT THAT. WHAT EVER HE THINKS ISN'T GOING TO CHANGE THE FACT IN THE MATTER VERY MUCH- A FACT IS NO RESPECTER OF OPINIONS. LET US TRY TO AGREE- IT IS PLEASANTER

A tomato arbor.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

THE cycads, members of the order Cycadaceae, are among the most curious of all known plants and are very old in the world's history, for their fossil remains are common in the early Mesozoic formations. They occupy a strange position among plants, for physically they are midway between the conifers, or cone-bearers, and the ferns. Botanically they are midway between the flowering plants and the non-flowering plants, the ferns being one example of the latter class. The plants are in sexes, one bearing a male "cone" and another a female "cone" or head, in shape and outward appearance not unlike a cabbage, inasmuch as it is largely made of leaves, among which are hidden the fruits or seeds. These number more than a hundred to each head, are edible, and a sago is made from the pith of the trunk.

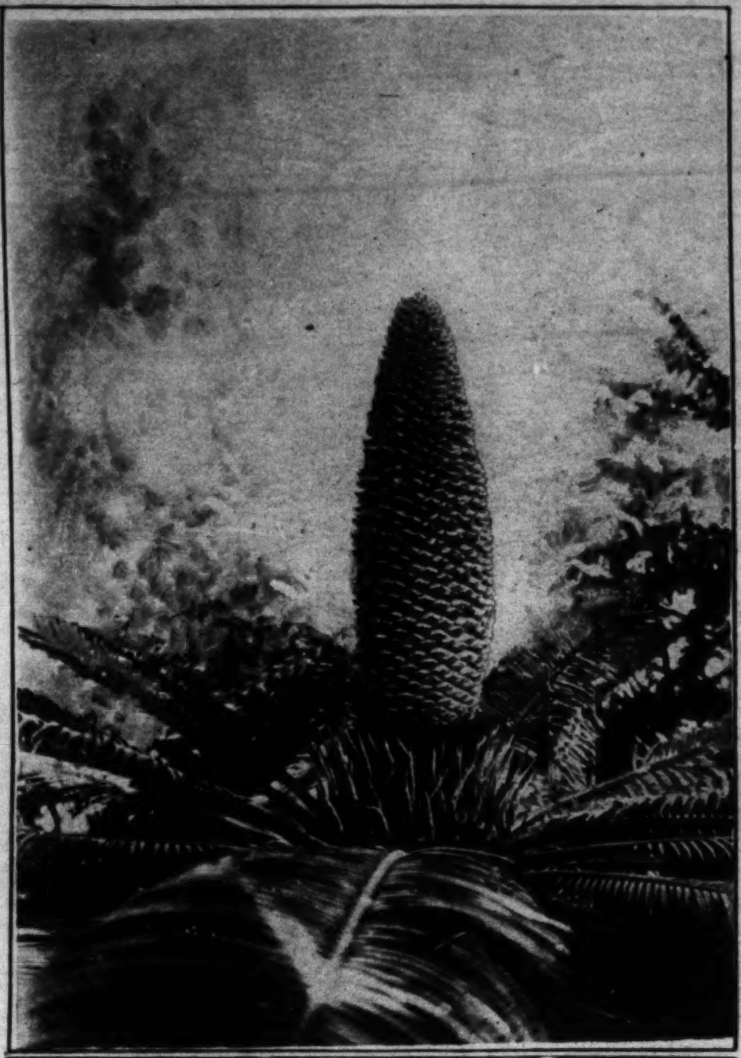
These cycads are usually known as Japanese sago palms, and while they now grow wild in Southern Japan, they are supposed to be originally from Java only, and they are not palms. Otherwise the name fits. In method of propagation they closely approach the animals, this being effected by means of spermatozoids and archegonia. The former are provided with minute movable cilia, or hair-like appendages, by which they are propelled, quite like the spermatozoa of animals. These discharge over the other element and fecundate the eggs. The spermatozoids of one species of cycad are the largest yet found in any plant or animal, and this species is native to Florida. The discoverer of this fact was none other than our own Dr. H. J. Weber of the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station. The cycads we illustrate are quite hardy in all ways, but are hopelessly slow of growth, eventually becoming ten feet high and widely branched. There are a number of such plants in Southern California, imported, at considerable expense, from Japan

Odoriferous Esculents.

"We remember the fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic." Thus did the Israelites exclaim when they grumbled at the bill of fare, provided in the Desert of Sinai, consisting for forty years of nothing but manna. And who would blame them for asking for a new menu card once in forty years? And especially after they fairly reeked with malodorous breath when living among the Egyptians. Herodotus, who lived 400 years before the birth of Christ, records that he saw an inscription on one of the great Egyptian pyramids stating that a hundred thousand men were employed for thirty years in building them and that these men consumed during that time garlic, leeks, onions and radishes to the value of 1600 talents of silver, or one and a half million dollars. No doubt the approaching visitor was furnished with a gas mask. Reminds one of Dooley's description of the king's coronation in Westminster Abbey: "The air was full of aristocratic associations! Principally on account of the bad ventilation." But the fact remains we are eating the same eats our forefathers ate 2500 years ago. The question is: Do we grow better sorts than the people of those times? Did the Early Frame cucumber originate there? If so, the "early" part of the name was well chosen. And was the Rocky Ford melon named after the place where the Israelites passed through the Dead Sea? If so, wherein have we advanced, or, as Bill Nye put it: "Why are we thus, and what is the reason of this thusness." Plants of wild cucumbers found at the foot of the Himalayas, where they are native, compare favorably in fruits with those we now grow. We invite the attention of the plant breeder to [illegible] possibilities resident in the "[illegible]."

Removal of Alkali.

The gardener is not often confronted with the necessity of removing or counteracting alkali, but in the lower parts of Los Angeles are city lots where the soil contains too much for general crops. Remember that alkali is a mineral, indestructible, agriculturally, and must be removed physically. If it cannot be taken up directly with a shovel, loaded into a wagon and hauled away, it must nevertheless be removed just as surely in some other way. The usual and best method is to provide both surface and underground drainage and wash it away in solution. There is no other practical way, and if you do not provide such drainage you will never get rid of it, no matter what you may think about it. Irrigation, without drainage, makes a bad matter worse.



Male Sago plant, showing cone.

If your lot is so low that draining away is impossible, see if you cannot get to a gravel or other strata by digging a cesspool and carry the alkali down. If surface water will not allow of this you must keep your alkali. But hold; if your alkali is "black," or carbonate of soda, a dressing of land plaster may be applied to change it to sulphate of soda or "white" alkali, a less destructive form. But you may not be able to effect this. One other method will remove a little. Grow a crop like sugar beets or one that will take up lots of alkali and remove it from the premises. If you feed or burn the crop on the grounds, you do not get rid of any of it. As stated at first, it must be taken away just as surely and as literally as though you could shovel it into a wagon and haul it away. A little alkali is beneficial in any soil, an alkaline soil being merely too rich in one element.

Economic and Ornamental.

Avocados instead of magnolias and other broad-leaved evergreens, guavas and carissas instead of box, myrtle or privet for hedges, edible-fruited passion vines, chayotes and others instead of purely-ornamental climbers; that is the present trend of conservative garden building. As one studies the question he cannot but ask himself why he may not grow all ornamentals his garden will allow and yet a crop of edible fruit from each one. Why abandon the growing of fruits to another simply because he has acres and you but a small portion of one acre? Make the most of your little orchard and then buy what you must have, additional, from him who hath more acres. But grow those things for yourself which would cost you most in the local market. Avocados stand at the head of the list and are more essential, as food, than oranges

Plants of the Bible.

A correspondent wishes to know what he should grow "in a genuine, old, Bible-time garden." As the writer was not living at that period of the world's history when the gardens are in full swing and as the Bible is generally accepted as a fairly reliable record of those times, we would suggest consulting that work, which is no doubt for sale at local book stores. Just as a "trial trip" we quote such names as: almond, anise, ash, beans, box, brambles, brier, cedar, chestnut, coriander, cucumber, garlic, grapes, grass, leeks, lentils, lily, mallow, mandrake, melons, mint, myrtle, mustard, nettle, oak, olive, onion, palm pine, pomegranate, rue, rushes, sweet cane, tamarisk, thistles, thorns, willow and wheat. Scores more may easily be found.

Soil Analysis.

Many complaints are heard that soil analysis is valueless. This is not true, but it is true that a chemical analysis is of little practical value, as it fails to give the amount of available plant food and is therefore no guidance in the intelligent growing of crops. But the more one knows about soils the more valuable such analyses become. The methods of analytical chemistry are known to but few, and the analyses are understandable to about the same proportion of those who embrue their hands in the soil. It is that a soil may be rich in one or more elements, as potash, for example, and yet contain an insufficient amount of available potash to grow the average crop of any common plant or plants. The chief need of soils is good physical condition, and if it is brought about, a considerable amount of humus will be present and the gardener need not worry. Lime is a good corrective and often sets free much locked-up plant food.

Garden Fertilizers.

Get nitrogen in your garden first. It is the most necessary element, for without it plants make no appreciable growth, and with a small amount plants start fairly well; but as soon as the available nitrogen is used up the plants will soon dwindle and amount to nothing. Nitrate of soda is the quickest acting, most available and most concentrated form and is quickly used up, therefore, not a permanently dependable quantity. In spite of anything that may be said to the contrary, well-rotted stable manure, which has been kept covered, has not been leached and has rotted in its own liquids, is the best fertilizer for general use that can be obtained. Some special element may be lacking, or more than one, but as a safe base it has no peer.

A Dainty Bignonia.

A score of years ago there grew in Los Angeles a few plants of a dainty little member of the bignonia family known as Eccremocarpus scaber. There was a large vine in the old Child's garden at the southwest corner of Main and Eleventh streets. It was known locally as the climbing cigar plant, which aptly describes the flower, for the latter closely resembled the cupheas popular in all countries as "cigar plants." The one of which we sing hails from Chile and has scarlet flowers, though one variety has yellow flowers. It is a woody climber with small leaves and the daintiest of all the bignonia family. It is regrettable that it has passed out of local gardens, except for an occasional plant, for it is of good appearance, easy of cultivation and a good cover for unsightly objects.

Alkali soils without drainage are very hard to improve and with irrigation usually become more undesirable. But with good drainage irrigation is the principal beneficial factor. Do not despair if your land is too flat for "wash off" if it is high above surface water. Dig a cesspool and wash the alkali down instead of off.

About that "wild" garden at Exposition Park. It is in the southeast corner, its greatest length along Figueroa street, and in a modest way quite a wonder. It contains scores of species of native plants either sown, as the annuals, or planted in the perennials, shrubs and trees. A visit there is a liberal education regarding our wonderful native beauties.

Patriotism Reconciles Young America to Castor Oi

For Liberty Motors.

CALIFORNIA'S original quota of 10,000 acres in the castor-bean campaign which is being fostered by the United States War Department in order to insure a supply of oil for the lubrication of liberty airplane motors, has been exceeded. There has been planted, according to representatives of the California Castor-bean Association, which is handling the campaign in this State, a total of 13,000 acres, of which 8000 acres is in Imperial Valley.

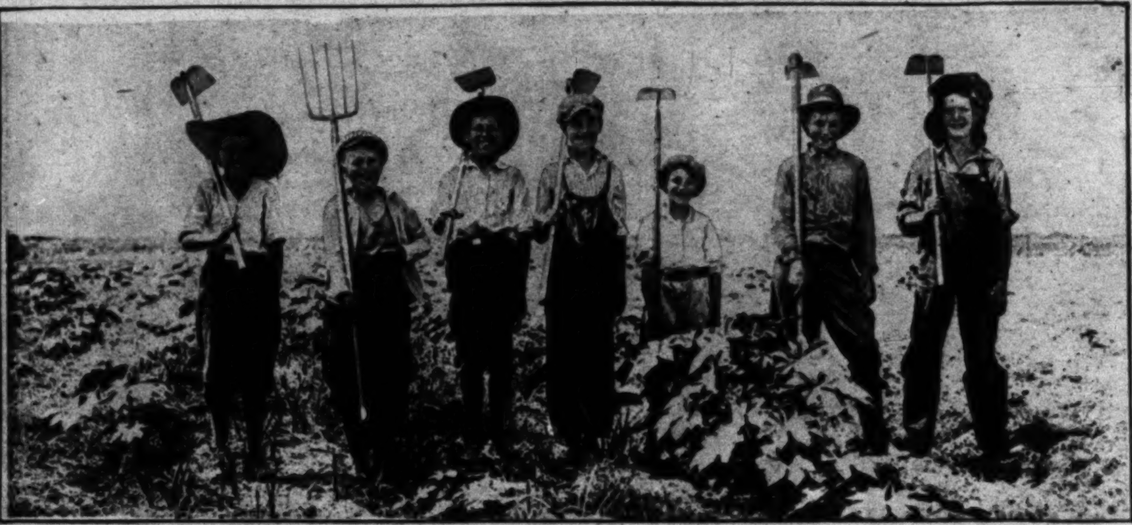
The Imperial Valley, it is said, has proved to be an ideal location for the culture of the Bombay bean, of the type of which the War Department has furnished seed. Although interest was at first centered on Florida as a promising section for quick-quantity production, the officials were agreeably surprised, it is reported, to learn of the possibilities of California, and especially the Imperial Valley, with the result that this State will probably be called upon in the future to supply a large share of the "liberty beans" required by the aviation section.

Among other ranches which have given over part of their acreage to the culture of castor beans is that of the Laguna Land and Water Company of Los Angeles. On this company's property, near Bell, forty acres was planted early and sixty acres later in the season. The castor-bean association, desiring to air and encourage in every way possible the growers with whom it has contracts, has enlisted a youthful "land army" of schoolboys, who are paid good wages to work in the bean fields, and are organized into companies, with leaders, in somewhat the same manner as the boy scouts.

The lads, upon qualifying in their work, are presented with buttons, officially designating them as War Department workers. Competition is strong among these youthful knights of the hoe as to who shall qualify for leadership, and, in spite of frequent trips to the water bucket and occasional halts for heated discussion of some absorbing topic, the youngsters are making strenuous war on the weeds.

The raising of castor beans is not now regarded as a strictly-patriotic enterprise, as it is believed that the big yields which may be secured in Southern California will bring good returns at the government contract price of not less than $3.50 a bushel, less 10 per cent. to the growers' association. The advantage of handling the beans through an association is that the government thereby deals with only the one corporation instead of with various individuals.

Although their previous acquaintance with castor oil has been so unpleasant as to prejudice them, these boys have buried past recollections and are assiduously cultivating the plants that Uncle Sam may have oil to lubricate his Liberty airplane motors.



Left to right: Robert Wykoff, Roland Adams, George Sundmacher, Eugene Davis, Francis Wennig, Walter Sundmacher, Denis Galbraith. These lads, who are all between the ages of 11 and 15, and have been attending the Echo Park and Logan schools, are members of the "Castor Bean Division, War Department, U.S.A."

The Prize Cucumber Growers of the United States.

Exacting Gardening.

IN THE Signal Hill district, near Los Angeles, the difficult art of cucumber growing has reached the highest state of development, in all probability, to be found in the West. During the season just closing some 55,000 boxes have been marketed through the newly-organised Signal Hill Cucumber Growers' Association and close to 50,000 boxes by independent growers, making the output for the season from this district alone approximately 2,085,000 pounds.

Although this amount is greatly below that marketed last year, because of a variety of market and shipping conditions which prevented growers from making extensive plantings, the Japanese who have joined together in the co-operative selling organization feel that their successful handling of the situation in their first year will reinstate the industry another season at the old volume of production. The growing conditions at Signal Hill are peculiarly adapted to this highly-specialized business.

The many demands of the cucumber for successful bearing, on a commercial scale, especially as to climatic conditions, greatly restrict the territory suitable for its production as a business. Not only must the soil be prepared as only an expert knows how, the moisture apportioned in the most exact and scientific manner and the small plants nurtured with the most undivided and thoroughly-experienced attention, but the weather conditions must also conspire for favorable results. This exacting need for heat at the right time and no frost at the wrong time, together with the possibility of obtaining water in just the correct way at all times make the choice of location a very particular matter indeed.

IDEAL CONDITIONS.

And all conditions seem to be met at Signal Hill. Here, where between 1000 and 1200 boxes are taken from an acre of ground, bringing a net price of 85 cents each to the grower, the methods of successful cultivation are noteworthy.

Plantings are made about the last of December in small boxes, berry boxes proving very satisfactory. The plants are set into beds in the open ground in March, where the ground has been thoroughly prepared for them. These beds, about sixteen to the acre, are covered with canvas, which serves a twofold purpose. Closely covering the plants (the canvas is stretched across foundation frames some fifteen inches in height) warmth is conserved during the chilly weather of the spring and during the cool mornings of the later season. The canvas also serves as protection from the hot sun of the growing weather which the vines demand and yet shrink from.

The tender vines are readily injured by too much sun, though moist heat is one of their most urgent needs. By the use of the canvas canopies, applied at the proper times, the vines are kept in healthy condition and make luxurious growth. It is interesting to observe the manipulation of these coverings which must often be kept on of a cold summer morning until the fog clears and the skies are bright, and then, on the same day, must be again adjusted to keep off the direct rays of the sun.

Moisture is applied here in the form of fine spray from sprinklers kept running for hours at a time during cloudy days or in the mornings and evenings when the sun is not on the vines. This method has proved altogether satisfactory and far better suited to producing good cucumbers than irrigation.

MARKET IS LARGE.

Last season sixty carloads of cucumbers were shipped from this district to various parts of the United States, and, while the shipment this year was not as large, owing to temporary conditions, the growth of the industry during coming years is assured. The co-operative association handling the greater part of this year's output has placed a big proportion of the crop on the Los Angeles markets.

With the close of a successful season from the standpoint, especially, of profit to the grower, the officers of the new organization hope for a much larger acreage signed up under their management next year. The company, of which S. Fukuda is president; S. Fujioka, vice-president; H. Ikeda, treasurer, and Fred Hirano, manager, has rented a packing house from which carload shipments to the East have been made and from which three seven-ton trucks owned by the company have been operated in delivering to the Los Angeles markets. The Signal Hill Association has its own distributing center at the Los Angeles wholesale produce market.

With the successful growing of cucumbers thoroughly demonstrated at this location for a number of years back, and the adjustment of market difficulties accomplished through co-operative organization, the promise for the growth of the industry seems bright. Already widely-known for the quality and earliness of production, the cucumbers of Signal Hill are doubtless destined to supply a still more extended field throughout the country.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"FOOD WIDD WIN THE WAR."

The Labor Problem.

THERE is no more worthy and important demand before the American people today than that of the farmers for help in the production of the nation's food. The country's big crops must be harvested and they must be harvested each at its proper time and under proper conditions or much of the benefit from the war planting operations so patriotically undertaken by the agriculturists of America will be lost. And it goes without saying that things cannot be as they have been in the past unless emergency labor measures are resorted to, so seriously has the normal farm labor supply of the nation been depleted by the demands for man power for the army and the various war industries.

To meet the problem, the United States Department of Labor, co-operating with the Federal Department of Agriculture, State and county farm bureaus and agricultural organizations generally, has been bending every effort to find all available labor and to correlate every activity designed to provide necessary help for the country's food producers. United States employment service offices have been opened in hundreds of cities to facilitate the recruiting of farm laborers and to handle the difficult task of intelligently placing the help that is made available.

The government's efforts to fill up the ranks of the great army of the soil, upon which the ultimate and complete victory over the Hun so largely depends, have taken innumerable forms. The "work or fight" order, in so far as it affects the farm labor situation, has been the nearest thing to an actual draft yet attempted. Uncle Sam has counted on the patriotism of the American people to meet this crisis as the purely military crisis has been met. The nation has thrilled to see its mere lads by the hundreds of thousands volunteering their services and its women and girls going out to do men's work on the farms. It is proud of the spirit that has prompted business houses in farming communities to voluntarily shut their doors on certain days in order that everybody from bosses to office boys might help in the fields. It has exulted to see red-blooded communities on their own initiative rounding up their pink tea lounge lizards, pool-room loafers and "I Won't Work" bums and putting them to work digging and delving.

Paradoxical as it may seem, however, it is to be feared that these manifestations of the very real spirit of service that is in the American people are operating to some extent against the success of the government's efforts to meet its tremendous labor problem immediately and efficiently. Many persons read about these things, thrill at the thought of the patriotic determination they represent and thank heaven that "America is awake." They get the idea, and it sometimes becomes a belief, that the farm labor problem has been solved. No belief could be more dangerous at this moment. The labor problem as it affects food production was never more critical. Notwithstanding all that has been done to recruit farm labor, the task of replacing the depleted ranks of the experienced farm laborers is so big, and the work represented by the harvesting and handling of this year's crops so inconceivably immense, that only by the most intelligent and tireless activity upon the part of all agencies bent on securing farm recruits can this vitally important battle on the home sector be fully won.

The Times has constantly urged the necessity for increasing and maintaining the supply of farm labor and has repeatedly pointed out the danger of taking any chances whatever of failure in maximum production through a shortage of labor at the time of the harvests in California. This newspaper has even ventured to suggest the advisability of importing, as a war measure, a hundred thousand or more of the skilled and industrious agricultural laborers of China to make certain the crop yields so vital at this time. Insistence has been made always of the necessity for providing the farmers with really efficient labor to pull them through their own and the nation's emergency. And that is the kind of labor that is wanted now and for the rest of the summer.

Harvest time is no time to be breaking in crews composed entirely of green hands, valuable as the stout and willing workers from the cities may be when mixed in with experienced laborers. And the big problem right now is to round up every able-bodied man, whoever he is and wherever he is, who actually knows from experience something about farm work. These men must be found and impressed with their duty to the nation or the new farm army that is being recruited from the high schools, stores and offices will not be the success that it could and should be. It is time for the veterans of past soil campaigns to come to the front and help Uncle Sam with their knowledge and experience. There isn't another city in the United States, either, that has among its population so large a percentage of men who have actually seen service behind the plow. Los Angeles is largely made up of people from the little towns and farming communities of the Middle West. These people have the greatest opportunity for service that ever came their way, if they will but respond to the call.

The United States Department of Labor has asked agricultural publications over the land to assist in recruiting farm labor by becoming farm labor agencies to work in co-operation with the different United States employment service offices in the cities. The Farm and Tractor Section has agreed to help in this respect and has been designated as Farm Labor Agency No. 191. Its editor becomes a farm labor agent at a salary of $1 per annum and is authorized to handle calls for farm hands and applications for farm work, reporting same to the local office of the United States Employment Service at No. 207 South Broadway and the Farm Service Division, United States Department of Labor, Washington. Space will be devoted every week to items relating to farm labor conditions and demands, a special department being created for this purpose.

The farmer readers of The Times Farm and Tractor Section are asked to address calls for needed labor to the editor, being as specific as possible as to requirements. Such calls, as well as applications from those volunteering for some branch of service in the great farm army, will be given careful attention, every effort being made to bring farmers and applicants together in arrangements mutually satisfactory. Where this cannot be accomplished directly, cases will be referred to the United States employment service officials representing the United States Department of Labor in this community.

TOMATO FRUIT-WORM.

Just as the tomatoes are ripening they are likely to be attacked by the tomato fruit-worm, which is the insect as the boll-worm of cotton and the corn ear-worm. This worm eats into the fruit, usually at the top where the stem joins. Lead arsenate, two pounds to twenty-five gallons of water, applied two or three times, will keep the pest under partial control. The worms prefer to work upon sweet corn and sometimes will leave the tomatoes in favor of corn growing near by.

Co-operation for criticism.

Don't let your gardening enthusiasm die with the early plants. Los Angeles is a place to raise things the year 'round.

THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY FARM BUREAU AND ITS ACHIEVEMENTS.

BY J. ELIOT COIT,
Farm Adviser Los Angeles County.

THE Los Angeles County Farm Bureau was organized at a meeting of the directors, January 17, 1918. Previous to that time a campaign, conducted by Dr. H. J. Webber of the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside, resulted in a paid-up membership of 1600, which has since been increased to 2212. Twenty-seven centers have been organized, where monthly meetings are held. The director elected at each center presides at the meetings, looks after the interests of the members and represents them at the monthly directors' meeting, where the agricultural policies and activities of the county as a whole are considered.

Most of the activities of the bureau are carried out on a project basis, the project or plan of work being written out in some detail and approved by the Project Committee before the work is begun. Usually a special committee is appointed to carry out the project.

The fertilizer project, for example, was designed to show by actual demonstration that on certain depleted soils, annual crops would respond to the use of fertilizer, especially nitrogen, and leguminous green manuring. Fifteen such plots with potatoes, corn and grain were established, chiefly in the San Fernando Valley. At the time of the observation trip, June 21, the plots showed a decided effect from nitrogen, the most pronounced being where organic nitrogen was used. Of animal manures, hen manure showed up the best. Of particular interest was the good showing made by melilotus clover grown during winter and turned under before planting potatoes, the color of the plants showing that large amounts of available nitrogen were secured in this way. The success of the demonstration plots of the boys of the Van Nuys High School Agricultural Club, with potatoes reflects high credit on these budding agriculturists and Roy Merrick, their teacher. L. B. Doan of Burbank, J. W. Deupree of Lankershim and H. S. Bissell of La Crescenta represent the committee in charge of this project.

HOG INCREASE PROJECT.

At the time of President Wilson's appeal to the farmers to raise more hogs for the army, the hog population of Los Angeles county was decreasing at an alarming rate. The Farm Bureau started a campaign to change this and advocated the raising this year of one or two liberty pigs by every farmer. In order to provide pigs to those who could not otherwise get them, Assistant Farm Adviser Gordon was provided with an auto trailer, and a revolving fund with which to buy pigs and distribute them. While only 186 pigs were placed in this way, the general results were satisfactory for the shipment of bred sows and small pigs to the packing-houses was stopped and many who had intended to go out of the hog business stayed in. Hog raisers who had become panicky on account of the high price of grain became more confident and decided not to sacrifice. Most of this was accomplished through publicity given through the Farm Bureau. Volney H. Craig of San Fernando, Donald Graham of Lancaster, and Robert H. Neely of Covina, composed the committee in charge of the hog project.

BOYS' AGRICULTURAL CLUBS.

Realizing the necessity of stimulating the interest of young people in agriculture, the Farm Bureau early took steps to encourage the formation of agricultural clubs in the schools. A number of successful clubs have been organized at Monrovia, Van Nuys and San Fernando. There are pig clubs, bean clubs, tomato clubs, etc. Each boy must keep an accurate record of his operations, and his project must be large enough to return him at least $20, if successful. The club work is carried on under the supervision of the teachers of agriculture in the high schools acting as district club leaders and with the co-operation of the farm advisers. The Farm Bureau is interested in getting up prizes, in providing capital, and in helping the boys dispose of their product to advantage. Floyd Pomeroy of San Fernando, J. A. Rasor of Van Nuys, and C. O. Peterson of Monrovia, are the Committee on Boys' Agricultural Clubs.

SILO-SORGHUM CAMPAIGN.

During this period of high-priced grain and dry forage it is incumbent on every stock feeder to get the greatest possible efficiency out of his feed. The logical way to accomplish this is through the use of silos. By this means it is possible to preserve green feeds like Indian corn, sorghum, grain forage, alfalfa, clover, pea vines, etc., in a succulent condition for feeding at any time during the year; it furnishes valuable supplementary feeds for late summer and early fall feeding. The directors of the Farm Bureau feel that a large increase in the number of silos in this county would do much to place our dairying and stock-feeding industry on a more substantial basis. A campaign is now in progress in those centers, where there are large dairy interests, to stimulate the building of more silos. Plans for silo construction are furnished and a plan has been worked out whereby farmers in any locality may co-operate in erecting cheap but efficient silos at a minimum of cost.

Honey sorghum is one of the best crops for ensilage, and has the additional advantage that any surplus will be available for the making of sorghum syrup, which is coming into great demand on account of the growing scarcity of sugar. A quantity of sorghum seed has been distributed and in two centers provision has been made for the installation of syrup evaporators. The directors in charge of this project are Erle Goodall of Owensmouth, Donald Graham of Lancaster, and George Frampton of Artesia.

WOMAN'S HOME DEPARTMENT.

The Farm Bureau is vitally interested in improving the conditions of the farm home. In this the women, of course, take the most active part. Until lately the work for the betterment of the social, home, school and church conditions in the rural districts has been largely unorganized. To develop this line of work adequately, the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau has organized the work into a separate department in order that it may reach its fullest efficiency and thereby benefit the entire farm family. The objects of this department as stated in the project are:

(1.) To provide a permanent organization for extension work in home economics.

(2.) To make stable, permanent and definite, the woman's work in the Farm Bureau.

(3.) To co-ordinate in the Farm Bureau the work of home economics with the work of scientific agriculture.

Under the Emergency Food Production Act, the United States Department of Agriculture has provided funds to pay the salary of women demonstrators of home economics. Under the able leadership of Mrs. Jessica Hazzard, the farm women have been organizing in the various centers and eventually they will elect two directors to represent them on the county board.

COW-TESTING ASSOCIATION.

A cow-testing department has been organized within the Farm Bureau, whereby the dairymen of the county may have their cows tested for yield, butter fat, and feed consumed regularly once a month for one year, at a cost of $1.50 per cow. This work has been a success from the start. Twelve hundred cows have been signed up for the first year and George E. Knight has been employed by the association and is devoting his entire time as cow-tester. In these days of high feed costs, dairymen need accurate data on the actual performance of each cow in the herd when the time comes to sacrifice a few for economy's sake. Some dairymen are fairly good guessers, but it is easily worth $1.50 to know exactly what a given cow is doing. In culling out calves, also, the dairyman is able to save calves from the best producers.

SELECTION OF BEANS.

Los Angeles county is reported to have planted 73,000 acres of beans this year. Many of the varieties represent mixtures of different strains of varying value. In order to encourage seed selection, a special meeting was held March 28 at Marian, at which Prof. E. B. Babcock of the University of California delivered a lecture on heredity, and seed selection. A project has been prepared and approved, which provides for the co-operation of bean growers in selecting a certain number of high yielding plants this year from which pure line strains of the highest quality will grow next year, in order that there may be available an adequate quantity of high-class seed.

The Farm Bureau has made an effort to standardize farm wages and labor conditions in Los Angeles county. A labor sur-

The Economy of Prepared Poultry Foods.

CHANGING CONDITIONS. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

NO ONE subject at the present time possesses an importance to the poultry farmer equal to that of feeds and feeding. First, all feeds are excessively high in price, and, second, some of the staples (principally wheat and its by-products) are unavailable because prohibited by the Federal government as a source of food for live stock. So acute has the situation become that all breeders are experiencing a "pinching down" on their margin of profits, which in turn has driven not a few out of the business, while others have culled down their flocks to a mere nucleus. Under these changing conditions the entire system of rationing domesticated fowl is undergoing a revolution, which is still largely in the experimental stage. Under normal conditions there are three systems of feeding, viz., all grain, grain and dry mash and grain and wet mash, all of which are supplemented with available green foods and oyster shell, grit, charcoal, etc. Broadly speaking, a ration under normal conditions runs about 60 per cent. grain (in variety,) 25 per cent. green stuff and 15 per cent. animal food. But under present conditions the tendency has been to increase the green food (in variety with alfalfa or clover as the base) to 50 per cent. and cut the grain 25 to 30 per cent. In England this has worked out much better than was anticipated, and since the average breeder possesses sufficient land to grow a patch of alfalfa, some Swiss chard, kale, lettuce, etc., it has in a measure tended to solve the food situation. But it is still a problem fraught with some commercial hazards.

Many of the older formulas of so-called well-balanced rations are obsolete for reasons already mentioned; the newer ones providing substitutes for wheat and wheat products are not only commanding serious attention, but have given satisfactory results. It is not our purpose just at this time to enter into that phase of the subject, but to caution breeders in the purchase of their feed supplies. It goes without saying that this is the age of the specialist. Excepting on the very large poultry farms, breeders buy their grain foods in the prepared state, finding this method more economical than to compound the raw material themselves—an operation which, if properly done, demands machinery and appliances. Usually the manufacturers put out a number of combinations of feeds to meet particular purposes, while in other cases breeders have the mill make up rations from their own formulas. Experience has pretty well demonstrated that the average poultryman will attain better results with his flocks by bending all energies on his particular line of production. This accounts for the professional hatcheries, the feed manufacturers and dealers, and indeed the several divisions of activities that enter the poultry industry. Allowing for these basic facts, we believe it economy for the average poultry farmer to buy his grain foods in the prepared state rather than assume the additional labor by buying the raw material and doing his own compounding. And thereby hangs a tale.

Which of the two hens would you keep?

"Selective service" in the poultry yards is important in these war times. July is a good month in which to cull out the poor layers and backward pullets. Intelligent culling means a saving of feed, room, time and labor. It means more eggs from fewer hens at less cost and with greater profit.

If there is one thing that adds to the cost of growing poultry more than another it is to buy food in small quantities. The breeder who purchases his grain feeds in paper sacks every Saturday night over a retail counter is doomed. For the smaller the quantities the larger the number of intermediaries that must make a profit. The unit of purchase should be in carload lots, and since this is feasible only with large operators, the smaller breeders of any given neighborhood should combine their feed orders until the aggregate makes a carload shipment. Such an order can be made up of a variety of feeding stuffs to meet the particular needs of the individual purchasers making up the sum total. In this way freight tariffs are reduced, the "overhead" in handling the business reduced to a minimum, and the charges at points of destination cut to the bone. The moment the quantity is reduced from full carload shipments the price not only increases, but the freight charges advance, and the intermediary expenses grow proportionately. These are factors that no one in the poultry business can afford to overlook in these times of food conservation.

Poultry Breeds in Italy.

A soldier fancier from Italy writes to the Feathered World of London, detailing some of his observation on the Leghorn breed as it really is in the land of its origin. Singular as it may seem, the quality is much inferior to that found on the poultry farms of both England and America, all of which goes to show that the poultry fancy is a product limited almost wholly to the English-speaking races, who have done quite as much, if not more, to improve all breeds of live stock than all the other nations combined. According to this correspondent, most of the poultry found in Italy comprises the lighter breeds, which are bred solely along utility lines. "The majority are Leghorn type," says our authority, "but all sorts of colors; pure-breds are very few and far between. I have seen a few very decent Brown Leghorns and a Campine or two. A great many hens are brown, with white markings, like an Ancona. At one farm where we were billeted for a few days I saw one or two La Bresse. Most of the small farmers have a few turkeys and Guinea fowls. At one farm I saw a pale lavender Guinea fowl, and on the same farm was another, quite black. Plenty of Bantams are about here, but, like the large poultry, they are much mixed. At one place I saw two Bantams exactly like speckled Sussex; they were a very pretty pair. In all the towns I have been in there are the usual town pigeons flying about, identical with ours at home. In one town, the name of which I must not mention, hundreds were about the streets. On the farms the pigeons are of a different type, much larger, and are kept for utility purposes. They are nearly all white or pied in color, and many of them are shell-crested, with muffled legs."

In the light of these facts will not the quality of poultry in these countries (France, Belgium and Italy) be much improved when the time comes for rehabilitating these devasted farms with English and American strains of fowl and general live stock? It seems to the writer that when peace is once declared there will be a foreign demand for pure-blooded fowl that will take all and more than we can supply. What is agitating the poultry breeders, however, is how shall the time be bridged and flocks maintained before this war shall become history? For immediate results local markets must not only be depended on, but widened and exploited, so that the industry will be sustained while the war is still on.

Protect Growing Pullets.

Males and females can be "brought up" together until about the time that the cockerels show evidence of beginning to crow, when the sexes had better be segregated. This will be of particular advantage to the pullets, first, because in occupying quarters to themselves they will be freed from the harassing attention of the young males, and, second, they will develop better and become robust specimens ready for early production. Nothing induces a healthy development like contentment and a congenial environment. Feed liberally until fully developed; bone and muscle-making demands foundation to build on. Overfat specimens are, however, liable to result if continued after that period in case of the heavier breeds; with the Mediterraneans there is less danger. Pullets should be yarded in small flocks; Rocks and Wyandottes in colonies of fifteen to twenty-five, while Leghorns can be somewhat increased. Feeding should be wholesome and liberal, with a goodly allowance of green stuff. Shade should also be looked out for. That provided by trees and shrubs is ideal; but if this is not possible, then any contrivance that will break the direct rays of the sun will answer very well. The dust bath is another consideration that must be observed. Wet down a small portion of soil and when merely damp to the sense of touch, spade it up and see how the birds enjoy it.

Egg Production and Breeding.

In a lecture delivered during Farm Week at Cornell University, Prof. James E. Rice emphasized the importance of securing and maintaining the right class of stock, stating that the breeding problem is the biggest before poultrymen, all others being secondary. As 85 per cent. of the feed consumed goes for maintenance of the body and not more than 15 per cent. to production, all will be in vain if the egg machine is not a good one. That does not depreciate the essential influence of environment, but the tools must be right. To explain why hens which lay well in winter are usually highest in production during the entire year, he suggested that instead of a winter-laying hen falling off after she has produced eggs for four or five months, as would be the case during other periods, the toxic effects of season in the spring months of the year cause a reaction, and so she continues right on. He said that heavy layers are generally small in body, due to check of growth by early laying. Although not dealt with, the question arises, how far and for how long can this be continued? One of the points which gives concern is the large mortality among heavy layers, averaging 10 per cent. As this is undoubtedly a sign of weakness, and it is desirable to maintain constitutional vigor by breeding only from hens able to stand the strain, Prof. Rice advocated retaining hens which keep up production for three years.

Speaking of Pledges.

What's the matter with receiving a million or more signatures to the following pledge, designed to conserve red meat and to help the great American business hen to do her bit?:

"I hereby agree to eschew the use of fancy dainty package foods during the period of the war and substitute therefor fresh-laid, standard-size, California ranch eggs; that I will use every legitimate effort to increase the use and sale of eggs as a staple article of food, because by so doing I am conserving red meat for our armies in Europe, helping to sustain the poultry industry, and doing an educational service by increasing the consumption of eggs."

It is safe, as a rule, to count on the fertility of eggs for a week after the removal of the male bird from the flock. It is equally safe to count on fertility one week after

---

Reports state that day-old-chick shipments by parcel post are a success, hence will be increased next season; hatching eggs also go safely by the same means. the male has been introduced to the flock.

If the ration proves satisfactory and market prices of feed should call for changes, the same should be made gradually and with judgment; otherwise it might lead to bad effects.

Farm News of the Bounteous Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS. IN PARAGRAPHS.

OXNARD.—All of last year's directors of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association were re-elected at the recent annual meeting held here. The directors are: W. S. Saviers, Oxnard; B. F. Barr, Hueneme; C. C. Perkins, Camarillo; William Culbert, Somis; A. C. Vickers, El Rio; Roger G. Edwards, Saticoy; John Lagomarsino, Ventura; E. E. Stowe, Goleta; Alexander Jeffrey, Owensmouth; R. L. Owens, Van Nuys; W. C. Jerome, Santa Ana; G. W. Moore, Smeltzer; E. H. Jones, San Diego county; Edward Chaffee, Garden Grove. The association expects to pool between 1000 and 1200 carloads of beans this year. The annual report of R. L. Churchill, manager, showed that the members of the association will net a little over $11 a hundred pounds for recleaned beans of last year's crop. The average selling price was $11.26 a hundred. Deductions for selling expense, storage and insurance must be made from that figure. The association has increased 130 per cent. in contracts of new members over the 1916 membership.

YUCAIPA.—High-school boys from Redlands and other cities of the San Bernardino Valley are assisting in the handling of the crops here this summer and it is believed that the farmers will, with the help of the boys, be able to harvest both the fruit and the grain yields. The peaches on the orchards here are beginning to turn now, and in another two weeks the season will be at its height. Then some of the boys who are now in Hemet helping in picking and canning the apricots there will come to Yucaipa to work in the peach orchards. Some of the girls of the high schools are also to be used in the canneries and when the apples in the valley are ripe a large number of them will be used. Yucaipa will probably have 250,000 boxes of apples this year and the girls can be used in picking the first-grade fruit, in cutting the second grade for canning and for evaporating fruit. The canning factory now being built by the growers' association will be ready in time to handle the peaches. The crop is expected to be about normal.

VAN NUYS.—Two local schoolboys, Paul Whitsett, Jr., and Leslie Gilbert, have just marketed their joint potato crop grown on a five-acre tract which was farmed and managed in a thoroughly workmanlike manner, strict account being kept of all expenses. The boys are so pleased with the results of their efforts at food production that they have enlisted in the service for the duration of the war and plan ambitious production for the coming season. Paul Whitsett is also the owner of two pure-bred Poland China sows which he cares for and feeds himself, largely from produce raised on the five-acre grounds surrounding his home. Following are the potato figures achieved by the two boys: Production, 336 sacks, weighing 36,485 pounds; gross receipts, $483.38; their own labor and teams, $91.40; rental, sacks, digging, hauling, etc., $249.03; net profit, $142,95.

LANKERSHIM.—The agricultural class of the local school is to continue through the summer, meeting on Monday afternoons. The school garden is being kept up in good condition and a good supply of vegetables has been sold from it for the benefit of the Red Cross. The class is planning greater agricultural activities during the coming year and expects to take some prizes in various farm products exhibits now being contemplated.

UPLAND.—Declared by A. D. Borden of the United States Department of Agriculture to be responsible for the great majority of the citrus ills with which ranchers have to contend today, the days of the Argentine ant, which in recent years has infested the Upland district, are numbered if a campaign planned for its eradication by the Upland Chamber of Commerce is successfully carried out. After a study of local conditions during the past twelve months, Mr. Borden gives it as his belief that the ant is largely responsible for carrying scale, mealy bug and other pests from tree to tree, thus defeating the purposes of spraying and fumigation. After hearing Mr. Borden on the subject, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce voted to start an active campaign to get rid of the ant at once. The Upland City Council is to be asked for assistance at its next meeting and the campaign against the pest includes the placing of poison along the pepper trees in the parkway on Euclid avenue and other streets. Every man, woman and child in Upland will be called upon to do his or her part in ridding the city of ants. Arrangements have been made with local drug stores to secure a special ant poison, the formula of which is given out by the government at cost. At the head of the committee in charge of the campaign against the ant are Royal Miller, W. K. Beattie and Mr. Borden.

TULARE.—According to the report of C. M. Conner, the farm adviser for this district, the grasshopper pest, which at one time threatened to be the cause of serious loss to the ranchers of this section, has been controlled by extensive poisoning. Mr. Conner says the control of army worms has also been established, the pests having been cleared from alfalfa fields by prompt work and before any extensive damage was done.

PORTERVILLE.—Earl F. Dexter, secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., after a tour of the county, has announced that there will be available for orchard and ranch work this fall, during the months of August and September, not less than 300 high-school and grammar-school boys, all of whom are capable of doing a man's work. They are to be distributed to the districts where there is the greatest demand for labor, through the Y.M.C.A. employment bureau. Investigation of other portions of the valley is said to indicate a serious shortage of day labor, as a large number of the orientals, heretofore engaged in that work, are, because of high prices of various products, engaged in community farming on their own account.

LA VERNE.—A move to enlarge the new marmalade corporation, Thomas Cranford Company, Inc., to include a large number of the Southern California fruit exchanges and eventually to extend to the entire California Fruit Exchange, was launched recently here. Representatives of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, the O. K. Exchange and the A. C. C. Exchange, together with others interested in the marmalade industry, were present. The new move will not affect the factory which is under construction at San Dimas, or the proposed one at Pomona.

OJAI.—Bee men of this section and other parts of the county have filed incorporation papers of the South Coast Honey Producers' Exchange. The organization will be associated with the California Honey Producers' Co-operative Exchange. The incorporators and directors are: J. G. Linebarger, Santa Paula; Charles C. Orr, Ojai; L. Snow, Fillmore; Fred A. Parker and W. J. Oates, Lompoc. Members of the exchange are to have one vote for every ten colonies of bees.

BEAUMONT.—The cherry season is practically over. The fruit was of fine quality and the prices good. In fact, word was received from the Los Angeles Market Bureau of the Department of Agriculture that the cherries shipped were of the highest quality received on the Los Angeles market and were commanding the highest prices. The Fruit Growers' Association is now calling for bids on pears and early apples, especially summer Champions. The hay crop is first-class. Difficulty is being experienced in securing labor. There are about 1700 acres being cut. It is being baled and threshed.

VENTURA.—One sack of squirrel poison recently cost Ventura county $600. That amount has been paid to Daily Brothers of Camarillo, on account of the death of three fine horses which ate out of a sack of poisoned grain accidentally left within their reach by the county squirrel-poisoning squad.

OXNARD.—Apricot pitting has begun on many ranches in the county. Several have secured pitters from the Women's Land Army of this county and Los Angeles. The crop is not as heavy this year as last, but the cots are of very good quality.

MANY ENROLLED.

Thirty-four thousand students have enrolled in one or more of the twenty-seven free correspondence courses in agriculture now being offered by the University of California. Instruction designed to be of practical value to all classes of people is given, the choice of courses extending from the growing of war gardens to farming on a large scale. Persons interested may obtain detailed information by writing to the division of agricultural education, University of California, for Circular No. 113. The courses cover adult and child nutrition, alfalfa, almonds, avocados, barley, business aspects of farming, canning and preserving, citrus fruits, corn, dairying, date culture, figs, grapes, milch goats, flowers, lumber and its uses, olives, onions, pears, plum and prune culture, semi-tropical fruits, sheep, swine, vegetable gardening and walnuts.

FOR VITICULTURISTS.

"Topping and Pinching Vines" is the title of Bulletin No. 296, recently issued by the University of California Agricultural Experiment Station. Detailed accounts of experiments are given, in which it was demonstrated that three-fourths of the topping practiced in California is inadvisable, and that the practice should be limited to special conditions, which are described in the circular. It is stated that many grape growers have been "working in the dark" in this matter of pruning, and the two-year tests conducted at Davis have brought to light the true conditions, which will no doubt come as a surprise to many growers.

ALFALFA WEEVIL DANGER REDUCED.

While California has undergone a number of "scares" over the alfalfa weevil, no positive evidence of actual infestation in this State is known to have been collected.

Growers, however, are reminded by horticultural experts that there is always danger of the insect being introduced from other States. The recent importation into Utah from Italy of a parasite of the weevil has been, it is reported, an important factor in controlling the pest. This fact is deemed indirectly of interest to California growers, as authorities agree that the danger of infestation here is greatly reduced. Observations conducted in the Mormon State are reported to have shown that as high as 70 per cent. of the weevils have been attacked by the parasites.

"All the resources of the country are hereby pledged"—now is the time to work them to the limit.

THE AMERICAN COW'S GREAT WAR RECORD.

The American cow is doing her bit in the great war. She has contributed one hundred million dollars' worth of her products to the exports of the United States in the last year, nearly all of it going to the boys in the trenches, chiefly in the form of condensed milk. A compilation by the National City Bank of New York shows that the quantity of condensed milk exported in the fiscal year 1918, ending with June, will approximate 600,000,000 pounds against 260,000,000 in the fiscal year 1917, 160,000,000 in 1916 and but 37,000,000 in the fiscal year 1915.

The stated value of the condensed milk thus exported aggregates for the fiscal year 1918 about $70,000,000, and when we add the other contributions of the cow, butter and cheese, the total value which she has contributed to the exports, including supplies sent by the government, will aggregate in round terms $100,000,000, against $50,000,000 in 1917, $25,000,000 in 1916, $13,000,000 in 1915 and less than $3,000,000 in the fiscal year 1914, all of which immediately preceded the war.

STOCKYARDS LICENSES.

A Federal license by every commercial stockyard in the country which is to continue in business after July 25, 1918, and by all commission merchants and dealers in livestock in connection with stockyards, is required by a proclamation issued by the President. The licensing proclamation is one of a series issued by the President, under authority of the Food Control Act of last August, bringing the dealing in necessities under the control of the Federal government.

ings and enable producer and consumer to work together cordially for the good of each. In war times, it is important that all work together good naturedly and in a spirit which will result in a more speedy triumph.

FIRE PROTECTION.

In Los Angeles county, the fire-protection project has not made the progress it has in other counties for the reason that we no longer have the large areas of grain subject to fire loss and that the United States Forest Service is active in preventing fires in brush-covered hillsides. Something has been accomplished, however. Special speakers have discussed the subject at center meetings. Fire companies are being organized in one or two centers. A fire-prevention ordinance is being prepared, including the best points in other county ordinances (Los Angeles county has had no such ordinance.) Cloth notices for posting, and other literature, has been distributed in all parts of the county; and a special moving-picture film has been circulated free for a month among the various moving-picture shows in the smaller towns. This educational film illustrates many common causes of fires, and the best methods of fire fighting and control. H. A. Bissell of La Crescenta, J. B. Vaile of San Dimas, and C. F. Richardson of El Monte are the Committee on Fire Protection.

PURCHASE OF BEAN SACKS.

On account of the highly unsettled conditions in the bean-bag market, Farm Bureau members of the San Fernando Valley clubbed together their order for 31,000 bags, which enabled them to deal directly with the importers and be sure of their bags. This practice of co-operative buying is capable of infinite extension as the Farm Bureau gains in strength and self-confidence.

FIELD DEMONSTRATIONS.

The Farm Bureau has accomplished much in the way of practical field demonstrations, a large number of which have been held in various parts of the county. The centers of Glendora, San Dimas, Monrovia, La Canada, Covina, San Fernando, Hanson Heights, Whittier and LaVerne have held citrus pruning demonstrations at which Farm Adviser Hodgson has pruned citrus trees of various kinds, and ages, to stand as models in the communities. The average number of growers attending each of these nine demonstrations was fifty-five.

Farm Adviser Scribner has held stock-judging demonstrations, at which dairymen, members of boys' agricultural clubs and others, were shown how to select the best types of cattle and hogs.

Farm Adviser Gordon has held demonstrations of the best method of vaccinating hogs against cholera.

The control of pear blight by aseptic excision has been demonstrated before interested groups of pear growers by Farm Adviser Colt.

Farm Adviser Nebelung, working in cooperation with government experts, is visiting monthly all castor bean plantations whereon more than 1000 acres of castor beans are being grown this year to provide castor oil for the airplanes of the army and navy.

SPECIAL MEETINGS.

During the first six months of its operation, the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau has called a number of special meetings. On February 15, the entire membership was called together in a great patriotic rally at the Los Angeles High School auditorium, at which time Dean T. F. Hunt presided. Meetings have been held for the benefit of honey producers at Los Angeles, Pasadena and San Fernando, at which government and State bee experts have presented plans for increased honey production. A mass meeting of all the poultrymen of the county was held recently at Exposition Park, with Dr. Edward Brown, famous English poultry expert, as the speaker. The Farm Bureau members of Antelope Valley called a special meeting at Little Rock in May to hear Col. Harris Weinstock speak on "Co-operative Marketing of Pears." The Monrovia and Lamanda Park centers have each conducted a citrus men's trip to the Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside, in order to attend special lectures and observe the results of experiments. The Van Nuys center held a special union meeting to hear Prof. J. W. Gilmore and to work out a project for the most efficient method of developing the agriculture under irrigation in the San Fernando Valley. The Glendora-Azusa center held a special meeting on July 1 to hear Dr. C. B. Lipman talk on citrus fertilization and to consider plans for the adequate upkeep of soil fertility under war-time difficulties.

In February, the board of directors of the Farm Bureau authorized the farm adviser to begin publication of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau Monthly. Twenty-five cents out of each dollar for annual membership dues was set aside to pay a subscription for each member. The paper carries no advertising. In it are printed each month short, timely articles on local agricultural conditions and interests; the directory of the Farm Bureau organization; the monthly report of the farm adviser; and

During the first six months, the Farm Bureau has sent out twenty-nine different circulars, setting forth matters of interest to farmers in general, to the newspapers of the county.

MEETINGS AND FARM CALLS.

There are now twenty-seven Farm Bureau centers in the county as follows: La Verne, Pomona, Downey, Sawtelle, Long Beach, Owensmouth, Van Nuys, Lankershim, San Fernando, La Canada, Lancaster, Little Rock, Newhall, Burbank, Artesia, San Dimas, Covina, West Covina, Glendora, Puente, Lamanda Park, Monrovia, El Monte, Whittier, Hynes, Moneta and Inglewood. The total number of center meetings held to date, is 119, with a total counted attendance of 4398, and an average per center meeting of thirty-seven. Sixty-five other special meetings have been held with an attendance of 8449, making the total number of meetings 184; total attendance at all meetings, 7847.

The farm advisers, working through the Farm Bureau organization, call at farms where this is requested and study the grower's problems with him, giving information and securing assistance from specialists at Berkeley, Riverside or Washington, as each individual case may require. Using the Ford automobiles furnished by the County Board of Supervisors, the farm advisers have in six months traveled 26,165 miles in the county, in addition to 2958 miles on steam and electric roads.

The Farm Bureau offices are at room No. 357 in the Courthouse. Here Miss Lindenberger, the stenographer, and Miss Shultis, assistant secretary, take care of a rapidly growing office routine and send out postcard notices to every member of every center announcing meetings. They also make appointments for the farm advisers and distribute bulletins and other literature to callers. All of the farm advisers are in the office until noon each Saturday for the purpose of receiving callers. Dr. J. E. Coit, chief farm adviser, is usually in the office several hours each morning. At other times all farm advisers are in the country making farm calls, pushing project work or attending demonstrations and center meetings. A record is kept of all office calls, phone calls for information, and letters written. In six months, 1387 persons have come to the office for consultations; 673 persons have secured agricultural information by phone, and 1623 letters have been written in answer to inquiries. The farm advisers have made 638 visits to farms to study problems on the land.

The farm advisers are quite conscious of their limitations. They do not pretend to be walking encyclopedias of agriculture. However, being pretty well acquainted with the best sources of reliable information, they are in a position to secure assistance on almost any agricultural problem, and it is their aim to carry this assistance to the farmer and help him put it into practice on his farm. Farm advisers do not appraise lands for intending purchasers and are prohibited from accepting service fees of any kind. Being paid from public funds, their services are free to all farmers, but only members of the Farm Bureau enjoy certain privileges of that organization. Anyone may become a member by sending his name and address, together with $1, to the secretary of the Farm Bureau, at No. 357 Courthouse. The $1 dues cover the calendar year of 1918, and the back numbers of the monthly will be sent when requested.

In six months, the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau has made a good start. Under the leadership of its able and public-spirited officers and directors it will grow and become more and more the medium through which the farmer on the land may find his best expression.

"ACCREDITED" LIST GROWS.

One hundred and seventy-one herds, representing 6250 cattle, were qualified June 1, for the accredited list of purebred herds of cattle free from tuberculosis which the United States Department of Agriculture is developing to insure disease-free sources of purebred stocks. In order to have his herd accredited the owner must comply with uniform rules approved by the Department and adopted by nearly all of the States, which require that every animal pass at least two successful annual tuberculin tests. In addition to the number of herds mentioned, more than 600 others have passed one successful test in preparation for accrediting. One of the advantages of having accredited herds, which is proving popular with breeders, according to the department, is that the owner may make interstate shipments of animals accompanied by a certificate at any time within one year without subjecting the animals to further tuberculin tests.

A $6000 BOAR.

Wildwood Prince, Jr., No. 34837, pronounced the greatest living boar of the Chester White Breed, and one of the best of any breed, was recently purchased by Maurice F. Black, Scribner, Neb., for $6000. This great boar is said to have attained a weight of 1053 pounds at the age of thirty months.

various means of quarantine, local control and eradication so far as possible, which have already been discovered in this country.

SPREADS SLOWLY.

When not aided by inadvertent human assistance, the spread of the Argentine ant has been found to be about an eighth of a mile in a year. Its introduction into this country was probably through shipments of some sort received at the port of New Orleans. From there it has gradually made its way to many points, largely through nursery stock, it is thought. The first known colony in Southern California is found at the old Normal School grounds and is believed to have been started by pioneers from tree shipments. Manure carried from infested districts is another common method of transference.

Since it is said to be impossible for colonies to live for long without a queen, the carrying of worker ants is not dangerous, making it a more simple matter to guard against importations. Boxes of potatoes filled in a field where a disturbed colony hastily seeks its shelter for depositing eggs or queens is an illustration of the many possible ways of unwitting aid in opening up new territory to ant settlement.

Cases have been known in the South where one side of a street was made untenable, buildings being deserted by residents, while on the other side no inconvenience was experienced for many months. Withdrawal of the food supply causes immediate advancement of the ant tribes, however, so that property near infested spots is never safe excepting through the use of barriers.

In the employment of these barriers many ingenious devices have been invented in the past years of experience in the South. Architecture has come to be actually influenced by the presence of the ants. Bridges are constructed in New Orleans and other cities with the object of preventing further spread by leaving open spaces at intervals over which the insects cannot cross. Running water entirely surrounding city blocks has frequently been resorted to, and smaller areas are protected by repellent substances such as corrosive sublimate. Still smaller spaces, including interiors of homes and individual trees and plants, are protected by such means as vaseline, tanglefoot fly paper and water. These are often effective, though the slightest accumulations of dust or pathways formed by the bodies of dead ants soon furnish trails over which business is again resumed by the watchful survivors.

The task of ridding a community of this formidable pest fairly attains the proportions of a scientific undertaking, since thorough knowledge of the ant is quite as complicated as intimate acquaintance with the bee. Though the use of various formulas free to all who apply to the Farm Bureaus and other government agencies is undoubtedly beneficial in holding in check the increasing annoyance suffered in households, gardens and farms, thorough eradication is quite another and a most important matter. Federal and State experts are constantly at work in laboratory and field in the big work of gathering together adequate fighting forces to contend with the growing encroachments of this impending agricultural affliction.

Undoubtedly great good in checking the spread of the Argentine ant can be accomplished by the conscientious observance of precautions by all persons who might carry them from infested districts, and by the use of poisoning and other control methods. Persistent application is the secret of success with these remedies.

Since experiment has repeatedly proved that citrus groves and other areas wholly rid of these ants are soon also fairly well rid of scale and the trouble incident to the pestilent mealy bug and its kind, the task of not only temporarily routing the workers of the ant colonies, but of following up the complete destruction of the young and the eggs, is well worth while. With patience even approaching that of the ant offensive the defense can be so successfully launched that it may quickly assume the proportions of a counter-attack. The most effective means so far discovered is based on the idea of a poison not strong enough to kill the adults, but sufficiently attractive to induce them to feed it to the young. Following is a government formula, the proportions of which have proved satisfactory: (Experience gained in administrating it will aid the novice in learning at least the rudiments of ant control.)

Fifteen pounds sugar; seven and one-half pints water; one-fourth ounce tartaric acid. Boil thirty minutes; then three-fourths ounce sodium arsenate; dissolve in one-half pint hot water. Cool; mix together and add one and one-half pounds honey.

A noisy cream separator often means cream in the skimmilk? Are the bearings loose; does the machine need discs or other parts?

GROWERS WARNED AGAINST THE HUNS OF THE INSECT WORLD.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

AN INVASION, as mercilessly efficient for territorial aggression as any military scheme plotted by the Hun, is being carried forward with startling success in peaceful California by countless armies of the Argentine ant, a foreign invader scarcely heard of in this country a decade ago. And because this invasion is actually threatening the stability of a number of productive industries at this crucial time, the fighting of this imported pest becomes an urgent war measure.

The Argentine ant was noted in Southern California by government experts as long as ten years ago, attention being called at that time to the existence of colonies in Los Angeles, Uplands and Azusa. It was even predicted that if no definite action were taken to eradicate the invaders, the insects would sooner or later become a serious pest. The experts spoke from their experience with the small, black insects in Louisiana.

The excellence of this advice of a decade ago can now be attested by large numbers of residents in different Southern California communities, in the cities as well as in the country. In parts of Pasadena and in the fashionable Montecito district of Santa Barbara the ants have recently become a plague. Nor is immediate encouragement forthcoming, for in New Orleans, Augusta and other Southern cities, reports say, whole blocks of city homes have been deserted by their occupants upon the resistless advance of these enemy aliens.

In the South also the Argentine ant is declared to have destroyed entire orchards. It has ruined the flower industry in New Orleans, seriously injured the poultry business and made impossible the raising of rabbits in parts of Louisiana besides the far more important depletion of sugar cane production. The protection of the aphis and other citrus orchard pests by the Argentine ant which acts, to quote a local authority, "as a shepherd dog who guards a flock of sheep, savagely keeping off all enemies which approach his charge," is not the least count against this powerful small foe to peaceful agricultural production. The actual existence of the orchard trees themselves is threatened by such an enemy occupation, to say nothing of the ruination of crops.

That California is facing a period of siege similar to those suffered in several parts of the South, where property values dropped 25 per cent. and more as a result of the invasion of the Argentine ant; and where some communities had virtually to be placed under martial law by the Federal government in taking extreme measures to get the enemy under control, is feared by many who have made a serious study of the situation. That the study of methods of control and eradication is a vital problem to the entire community is urgently apparent to anyone who gets a glimpse into the scope of these insect depredations.

HUN EFFICIENCY.

For it would seem that nothing short of intelligent planning and a forethought equal to that of the military preparedness campaign of the Honenzollern system could account for the organized movements of the Argentine ant. From the veriest details of household arrangements, to well-systematized advance of their armies into new territory, the story of their accomplishments is nothing short of startling. The young are cared for, the houses are swept, even the incubators containing the eggs so precious to the colony and furnishing added complication in the problem of eradication, are arranged in a uniform and careful manner to do credit even to German efficiency.

Exhaustive scientific study of ant life reveals a truly remarkable development of what might almost be called "civilization"—though perhaps Kultur would be the better word. The rapid growth of the Argentine colonies is due in part to the large proportion of queens supported in each, which has been known to be as high as 240. Since these lay some fifty to fifty-five eggs each per day and these eggs do not evolve into mature ants until after a period of about twelve weeks, the difficulty of entirely eradicating any one group is easily apparent.

The workers among the ants, as with bees, are all females which divide the labors in a most thoroughgoing manner, assigning duties to each individual of the community. The queen is fed and tended by a special bodyguard; nurses feed and care for the babies with scrupulous devotion and, in case of flood or other catastrophe, carry them to safety wholly without regard for their own lives; the eggs are turned with scientific exactness, just so many times in certain periods and given the requisite hours of sunshine. Nothing is left unthought of, nor neglected in this social and military system, where scouts regularly perform their duties of finding and reporting new sources of food supply, which are forthwith seized in defiance of international law by trained forces under orders to confiscate all available supplies with true Prussian disregard for property rights.

The patient persistence and infinite pains expended by the scouts in search of food presents one of the chief difficulties in the struggle to circumvent their invasions. A case is reported where an orange tree was circled at the base with sticky fly paper. Though all ants soon left the tree, according to custom in such cases, by dropping from the limbs, the tree was soon again swarming with the midget barbarians by some seemingly miraculous means, the access still remaining cut off at the base. The mystery was finally solved by finding that a telegraph pole had been climbed and the wire traversed for a long distance to a point where a single leaf of the tree occasionally made a point of contact when blown by the wind. With such astounding ingenuity and persistence to outwit, human intelligence is hard put to it for means to thwart these destructive hosts bent on conquest.

MENACE CITRUS GROVES.

Of the various means these foreign forces have of making themselves thoroughly disliked by the helpless residents of the districts they have captured, perhaps the most dreaded in Southern California is the serious danger of destruction in the citrus groves. Setting hens driven from their nests, baby chicks and young rabbits eaten alive, flowers ruined while still in bud and sugar cane output demolished, is of small consequence here compared to the fear of a ruined citrus industry. The danger to the groves is both a direct one in the destruction of fruit and blossom and an indirect one through the encouragement and protection of the aphis and other citrus enemies.

The Argentine ant is particularly fond of the "honey dew," as the secretions of several varieties of the mealy bug and a number of other kinds of insect pests of citrus trees is called. Therefore, the aphis and many kinds of scale, which must constantly be fought in orchards is guarded in close formation by determined ranks of belligerent Argentine ants.

The greatest aid to man in fighting orchard pests has been the employment of natural enemies. Some twenty years ago the citrus industry was saved from utter ruin by the then prevalent white scale through the introduction of a kind of beetle from Australia called the Vedalia, which Federal research agents found to be an effective enemy to this ruinous scale. Likewise the yearly transportation from certain parts of the mountains of Northern California of many tons of "lady bugs" at the present time performs untold benefit in the continuous warfare against these destructive forces. Therefore, the entrance of such formidable reinforcements as are being brought forward by the advance of the Argentine ant is truly a serious check to the campaign for human defense.

In retaliation, doubtless, the one altogether effective means of protection would prove the discovery of the natural enemy of the Argentine ant. Such a possibility remains still in the future, however, for, though it is known that in its native country this insect is not a pest, the means of natural control, which keeps it within bounds there has so far never been found. All that remains in the meantime is the

JULY IN THE HOME VEGETABLE GARDEN.

July is one of the harvest months. It is a good time to prepare for the planting of fall vegetables. If, as soon as a strip of land is cleared, it is worked down and well successfully grown from late plantings by many Los Angeles gardeners.

Now is the time, if you wish to raise your fertilized, and then thoroughly irrigated, the late stuff will get a quicker and better start. The soil will quickly become baked and crusted if left bare and unturned after the early crops are removed.

Late varieties of beans, especially the Kentucky Wonder or Stringless Green-pod, may be successfully planted during July, while a succession of corn plantings, ten days apart, will provide roasting ears over a considerable period of time. Lettuce, radishes, spinach, peas, carrots and beets are own "sets," to plant seed of Brussels sprouts, cabbage, early cauliflower, peppers and tomatoes for fall transplanting. Authorities recommend the planting of early maturing varieties of potatoes until the latter part of the month.

The important thing to observe during the summer bonths, experts agree, is proper irrigation. Thorough soaking of the ground occasionally is to be preferred to more frequent surface irrigations. Wilted plants and disappointment often follow inadequate irrigation.

Have patience with the unskilled farm laborer. Conditions might be worse and he is trying to do his bit.

THE CASE AGAINST THE VICIOUS DOG AND WHAT MAY COME OF IT.

No doubt all of us have shared at times the feelings of the man who said: "The more I see of some men the better I like my dog." Faithful Fido or romping Rover is a beloved and badly-spoiled member of almost every red-blooded American rural family. From the awkwardness of his puppy days to the amusing dignity of his toothless old age, the friendly dog, is, unquestionably, one of man's weaknesses.

It is this inherent love and understanding between man and beast, together with the unselfish devotion of the dog for its master, that makes it so difficult for legislative bodies and citizens to realize the actual damage involved in the case against the dog.

At this time of national crisis, when great efforts are being made to encourage the sheep business and to increase the production of mutton and wool by the establishment of thousands of small farm flocks, it is imperative that stringent laws be passed and enforced to prevent the immense annual damage done by vicious canines. The monetary loss, which is estimated at over a million dollars annually, does not cover the most serious aspect of the case; thousands of farmers have been driven out of the sheep business, or are afraid to engage in it on account of marauding dogs. Department of Agriculture investigations in only fifteen States east of the Rocky Mountains showed that out of a total of 6,836,492 sheep, 34,683 were killed outright by dogs in one year.

GOVERNMENT GIVES AID.

So important is this subject considered by the authorities that the government has issued Farmers' Bulletin No 935 (The sheep-killing dog,) devoted to a discussion of damage, protection and legislation and urging the uniform adoption by the States of certain laws, which are outlined. Following are some of the provisions suggested:

1. All dogs over six months old to be listed by the County Tax Assessor at the time of listing other taxable property. (A more complete list of dog owners is obtained in this way than is the case when the owners are required to list their dogs.)

Tax to be as follows:

One male or spayed female	$2
Each additional male or spayed female	3
Each unspayed female	5

Kennel licenses to be issued with restrictions.

2. Dog owners to pay their dog tax and obtain a dog license at the same time other taxes are paid, unless proof is furnished that the dog has been disposed of.

3. Counties to furnish metal tags bearing the registration number of the dog and the name of the dog's owner. (This would eliminate any question arising as to the owner of a dog found at large or in the act of worrying stock.)

4. Provide for the impounding and, after a reasonable term of impoundment, the humane destruction of dogs found at large without collars bearing license tags.

5. All dogs to be confined from sunset to sunrise unless under leash or under reasonable control of their owners.

6. Dogs found at large between sunset and sunrise to be impounded and owner notified. Owner to regain custody of dog on paying a fine for violation of the law.

7. Any dog, registered or unregistered, may be killed by anyone when caught in the act of chasing, worrying, injuring or killing sheep. Dog owner to have no recourse for the killing of such dog.

8. Any dog found running at large upon the inclosed lands of a person other than the owner of the dog may be killed at the time of finding him by the owner of the land, his agent, tenant or employee.

9. Stock owners suffering losses from dogs to report the same to the local Justice of the Peace. Justice of the Peace to appoint a committee of two or three disinterested farmers residing in the locality where the loss has been incurred, to appraise the damages. Committee to give the sheep owner a certificate showing in detail what the damages consist of and the amount. Damages beyond the value of the sheep actually killed outright should be allowed. Farmer to present the certificate to County Commissioners to be passed on at the next session.

10. Compensation to be taken from money derived from the dog tax. Access to be had to State fund if dog-tax fund is insufficient to pay all claims.

11. Dog owners to be held liable to the county for all money paid out by the county for damages done by his dog, plus all costs of suit.

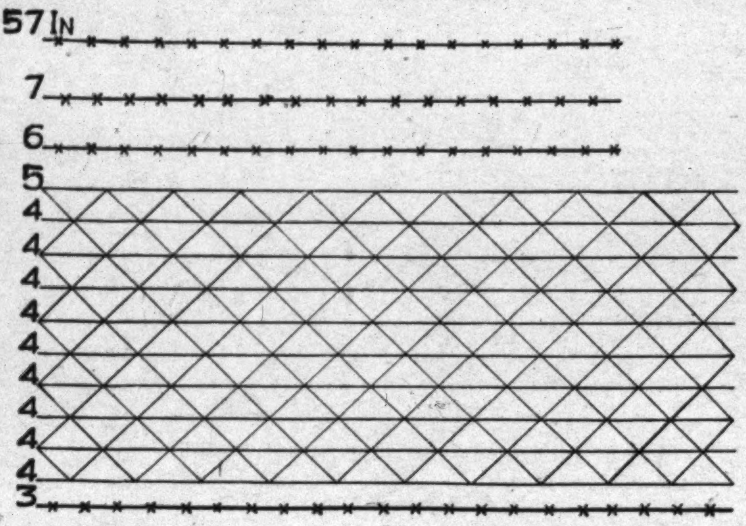
12. Reward of at least $10 to be offered by the county for the identification and proof of a sheep-killing dog.

13. Owner of a dog known to kill sheep to be required to kill, or cause to be killed, such dog within forty-eight hours after notification under penalty of $5 and $1 per day thereafter until such dog is killed.

14. Sheep owner to be allowed to set out poison on his farm if he gives public notice of same.

15. Enforcement of the law to be the duty of every police officer in the State. State to furnish sufficient assistance, if necessary, to carry out all of the provisions of the act.

The bulletin also contains a digest of the existing dog laws of each State and presents the complete dog laws of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, which are given as being examples of modern laws which really offer protection to owners of sheep.



A fence that is proof against dogs and coyotes.

Posts seven and a half feet long are set two and a half feet in the ground and sixteen feet apart; the lower barb wire is set against the ground. The woven wire is thirty-six inches high, and has a four-inch mesh. If the two top wires are fastened to the outside of the posts, the protection will be more effective, as they will make it impossible for animals to climb over the top.

THE CHOLERA MENACE.

Hog cholera is preventable and curable, yet is the most widespread of acute infectious diseases of animals, causing the death of thousands of hogs annually. Experts in hog diseases urge the careful observance of the following preventive measures:

Isolate and confine all sick pigs.

Do not allow the hogs to have access to streams, irrigation ditches and public highways.

Provide well water for drinking.

Isolate new stock, returning show animals, and returning breeding stock for at least two weeks, disinfecting them by dipping or spraying before allowing them to mix with other hogs. Also use care in feeding and attending quarantined hogs to prevent the carrying of infection to other pens.

Load and unload all susceptible hogs outside of public stock yards and ship in cleansed and disinfected cars. Hogs may be given the serum-alone treatment for protection during shipment.

Avoid visiting infected hog yards, or disinfect the shoes upon leaving infected premises.

Have the stock buyer disinfect his wagon before driving into your hog lot.

Keep hog pens and vicinity clean and sanitary so that buzzards, crows, sea birds and stray dogs will not be attracted to them.

Isolate and retain for later shipment all recently vaccinated hogs until two weeks after treatment, provided that all are free from symptoms of cholera.

Cook before feeding all garbage and pork scraps. Fresh refrigerated pork and even salted and smoked pork has been known to produce cholera when eaten by susceptible hogs.

Use disinfectants freely.

Circular No. 176, issued by the University of California Agricultural Experiment Station, enlarges upon these suggestions, and describes in detail the causes, effects and treatment of hog cholera.

FIRE FIGHTING IN RURAL DISTRICTS.

Although individual attention is an important means of preventing fires in grain fields, grass ranges and forests, it is recognized that county organization offers the best means of checking and preventing the losses, which have in the past reached a total, in California alone, estimated at $750,000 annually.

By the organization of rural fire companies with men and equipment always ready for an emergency call, any county can greatly reduce its damage from fires, asserts Prof. Woodbridge Metcalf of the University of California, in a new bulletin (Circular No. 202) on "County Organization for Fire Control."

The writer discusses equipment and methods already in use in various counties in the State and suggests different means of establishing and managing county organizations. He points out that the Political Code of California provides that the Board of Supervisors of any county may make an appropriation for fire prevention and suppression, which may either be used for purchasing fire-fighting equipment or to hire fire wardens or rangers.

At the recent Modesto sale of pure-bred Holsteins, nearly all the buyers were new men, who paid an average of $375 for thirty-four animals.

BIG INDUSTRY IN STOCK MEDICINE.

The farm is admitted to be the "backbone" of the industry of the world. Some of the great industries of this present age of big business, too, have been built up around the agricultural activities of the country. One of these is the proprietary remedy trade, which has reached a volume probably not generally known. Nowadays there is scarcely a live-stock breeder or owner who has not tried some kind of stock tonic, food or remedy, and on many farms a regular supply of the favorite "patent" remedies is considered indispensable.

The universal desire of good farmers to keep the live stock in the best breeding, producing and sale condition, and the great pride which the average American farmer takes in his stock probably accounts partially for the tremendous sales enjoyed by the manufacturers of these remedies. While the business has behind it some black "milestones," the laws have been made so strict that the old game of using misleading advertising and fake formulas has been done away with to a great extent, and there are many large concerns, which have been in business for many years, which sell reliable products and have built up their trade upon the good will of their customers.

By keeping before the animals such ingredients as will maintain them in the best physical condition, the farmers of today no doubt ward off a great many attacks of disease, as well as improving the appearance and consequently the sales of their breeding stock. Many of the remedies are so compounded as to be mixed with salt or food and are thus easily assimilated by the animals.

There seems no doubt that this great industry, which amounts to millions of dollars annually, has come to stay and while it will always bear the strictest regulation, because of the possibility of the entry of unscrupulous individuals into the field, this supervision will be welcomed by the big, reliable concerns as a means of perpetuating their trade and holding the confidence of the farmers.

AREA OF PASTURE LAND.

Of the total farm land at the time of the last census, 1910, which comprised about 879,000,000 acres, somewhat more than one-third was in crops, one-third in pasture and a little less than one-third in all other kinds of farm lands. Land in improved pasture represents nearly one-tenth of the total land in farms, and is doubtless used for crops from one-half to three-fourths of the time, according to the crop rotation that is practiced. A large part of the pasture land is unimproved, about 99,000,000 acres being in "woodland pasture" and 108,000,000 acres "other unimproved pasture." This information is from Bulletin 626, United States Department of Agriculture.

INPORTANT STEPS TAKEN TOWARD STANDARDIZATION OF TRACTORS.

EVERAL tractor standards have been adopted by the Society of Automotive Engineers during the year. These are summarized in a new issue of the Co-operative Tractor Catalogue published by the Implement and Tractor Trade Journal of Kansas City. They are of interest to tractor owners generally.

The most notable features covered are Belt Power Rating, Belt Speed, Tractor Drawbar Rating, Height of Tractor Drawbar and Plowing Speed. A number of standards relating to other details are now under consideration by the society and may be brought up for adoption soon.

The standard adopted with respect to belt power is that the belt power rating shall be 80 per cent. of the horse power the engine is guaranteed to deliver at the belt pulley continuously for two hours, the tractor being in good condition and properly operated at rated engine speed.

A belt speed of 2600 feet per minute, according to the society standard, shall be used for all tractors, this being a speed which will meet the widest range of conditions. Other standards, as adopted, follow:

The drawbar rating shall be 80 per cent of the horse power that the tractor is guaranteed to deliver at the drawbar continuously for two hours, the tractor being in good condition and properly operated at rated engine speed. The tests should be taken on ground sufficiently firm to give the traction wheels a good footing, a firm sod being preferable.

The standard height of drawbar shall be seventeen inches for both plowing and other work.

The standard tractor speed for plowing shall be two and one-third miles per hour for tractors of fifteen drawbar horse power and under.

Prominent among the standards recommended are ones having to do with Carburetor Fittings, Fuel and Lubrication Pipe Lines, Punching of Drive Wheels, Magneto Impulse Couplings and Condensed Tractor Specifications. Some of these recommendations follow:

1. Holes in all sizes of tractor rims to be punched 11-16 inch for lugs or rivets.
2. Tractor rims to be made, 8, 10, 12, 16, 20, 24 or 30 inches wide.
3. Tractor rims to be cut even lengths, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22 and 24 feet.
4. Spokes to be spaced at each twelve inches of rim length, making twelve inches the pitch for lugs and spokes for all wheels.
5. Holes for lugs to be spaced halfway between spoke holes, set two inches in from each edge of the rim, and additional holes punched opposite each spoke and four inches in from the edge of the rim. Additional holes necessary for wider rims.

The condensed tractor specifications recommended follow:

(1.) Firm Name, with Address. (2.) Tractor Trade Name and Model. (3.) Drawbar Horse Power (S. A. E. Tractor Rating) and Old Trade Rating. (4.) Belt Horse Power (S. A. E. Tractor Rating) and Old Trade Rating. (5.) Engine: Make, Bore, Stroke, Number of Cylinders, Cycle, Normal, R. P. M., Lubricating System (Type) Ignition, Carburetor, Fuel System, Cooling System; Belt Pulley Diameter, Face, R. P. M. (6.) Transmission Type or Make, Number of Speeds Forward, Speed M. P. H. at Normal Engine Speed: first, second and third—Indication of Speed Used for Plowing. (7.) Wheels; Number; Arrangements; Driving Number, Diameter and Face; Non-Driving Number, Diameter and Face; If Tracklaying Type, Number of Tracks, Length of Face. (8.) Frame Construction. (9.) Wheel Base, Tread. (10.) Width Over All; Length Over All. (11.) Turning Radius (Half Diameter Largest Track Circle.) (12.) Weight of Tractor (Less Fuel, Oil, Water and Lugs.) (13.) Shipping Weight (Including Standard Equipment and Stays.)

A NEW "GASIFIER."

A new "gasifier" which, it is claimed, meets the problem of properly vaporizing kerosene is now being used as a part of the regular equipment of the Avery tractor. The device, say the Avery people, will keep the fuel mixture thoroughly vaporized in the manifold until it is used and reduces small particles of kerosene that may get by the carburetor, condensing them again into liquid form before being fired in the cylinder. The gasifier has been thoroughly demonstrated, it is declared, and has proven satisfactory from operative and economical points of view.

A large pump-manufacturing company has developed a pump especially designed to raise water from shallow wells into silos, for use in moistening the ensilage.

vey was made in each center and a standard wage scale published. By reporting labor shortages and surpluses at each center meeting, an effort is being made to shift labor supplies with less waste of time and money. Through the high schools of the county, the farm adviser has enrolled 1200 boys who desire to work during the summer. All the enrollment cards are on file in the farm adviser's office. Individual boys are being placed on farms through A. C. Minear, while large groups go out under supervision of a paid Y.M.C.A. man. The Committee on Farm Labor consists of Ralph McNees of Whittier, P. F. Cogswell of El Monte, Floyd Pomeroy of San Fernando and C. A. Griffith of Azusa.

FARM BOOK-KEEPING.

The farm management department of the University of California has prepared a simple but practical farm account book, which is furnished free to farmers who will agree to keep the account for one year under supervision of the farm adviser. The income-tax provisions make it imperative that farmers generally improve their book-keeping. A project has been prepared and approved whereby District Club Leader Roy Merrick, representing the farm adviser, is putting these books in service on fifteen or more ranches in the Van Nuys center. Later, other centers may wish to organize book-keeping clubs and thus avail themselves of this opportunity.

JUNE DROP OF ORANGES.

Farm Advisers Colt and Hodgson have made a comprehensive investigation of the June drop of navel oranges, the results of which have been published as Bulletin No. 290 of the State Experiment Station. It was pointed out that the drop can be considered in two parts, that occurring from petal fall until the fruit is about an inch in diameter, and that occurring after that time. The first part is much the more serious and is due to abnormal water relations, which serve as a stimulus to abscission. The second part is less important and is due to the fungus, Alternaria Citri, of wide distribution, which is also the cause of black rot of navel oranges. The water relations drop bears a definite relation to climatic conditions and all efforts looking toward prevention or control must be either in the nature of modifying environmental conditions, or in selection for dry-heat-resistant strains. Of these two, the former seems to promise the more immediate results. A number of lectures have been given in various citrus centers, whereby the most practicable methods of modifying environmental conditions have been discussed with the growers. As a result, the growing of early developing summer green manure cover crops has shown a marked increase.

The pear growers in the two Farm Bureau centers of Little Rock and Lancaster have been interested in a system of cover cropping, whereby, in the absence of barnyard manure, in adequate quantities, their soils may be improved in humus content. A local project has been started, which contemplates the establishment of a number of trial and demonstration plots.

FAIR PRICE COMMITEE.

Farm Bureau members are interested in receiving a fair price for their produce. The result of the war has been that growers of some crops made money, while others lost. The Farm Bureau directors appointed a committee to confer with the Food Administration in regard to the appointment of a producer on the Fair Price Committee. Through this committee the farmers hope to keep in closer touch with the Food Administration in order that production may be encouraged to continue at a maximum. This committee was instrumental in securing adequate recognition of local grown potatoes on the fair-price lists published in the daily papers. It also called to the attention of the administration the fact that at one time poultry buyers were paying less than they had agreed to for broilers, which resulted in effective action against the guilty dealers. This committee, working in close co-operation with the farm adviser, hopes to interpret the various rulings of the Food Administration to the farmers in such a way as to prevent misunderstand-

THE BIGGEST POWER FARMING EXHIBIT.

The greatest exhibition of tractors and tractor accessories on record will be held under the auspices of the National Implement and Vehicle Association at Salina, Kan., from July 29 to August 3, inclusively. The event, it is expected, will draw more exhibitors than any other similar meeting ever arranged and will make the little Kansas city for nearly a week the power farming capital of the United States. The National Farming Demonstration, as the exhibit is officially designated, has this year been more widely advertised than ever before and this fact, in combination with the unprecedented interest in tractor farming due to the critical labor situation and the necessity for an enormous war production of foods, is expected to lead to a record-breaking attendance of farmers, dealers and others interested in power farming. Representatives of several foreign governments, it is announced, will be present.

Some idea of the magnitude of the demonstration may be gained from the reports of the preparations being made by some of the exhibitors. The International Harvester Company has taken an entire hotel in the Kansas city to house the hundred or more representatives it will have at the exhibit. The Oliver Chilled Plow Works, according to the Farm Implement News, has leased a dormitory of the Kansas Wesleyan College of Salina for its men. There are a number of firms that will have from a score to fifty or more representatives on the spot.

Rigid rules have been drawn up for the governing of the demonstrations and all exhibitors, it is announced, will be held strictly to the regulations throughout. The management hopes to make the exhibit a real test of every tractor implement and power farming device entered, a trying-out that will be of permanent value to the tractor and implement industry and to American agriculture.

SAMSON TO DOUBLE ITS COAST OUTPUT.

The Samson Sieve Grip Tractor Company will soon be in a position to practically double its Pacific Coast output as the result of extensive additions that have just been made to its big Stockton plant. The company will continue its policy, adopted some time ago, of confining itself to the manufacture of one model, the S-25 GMC tractor, which is suited to the western trade and has steadily increased in popularity in California.

At the same time the company (now a division of the General Motors Corporation) is increasing the capacity of its Stockton plant, it is erecting an entirely new factory at its eastern headquarters at Pontiac, Mich. The eastern plant will handle the eastern and European trade, while the western factory will be given over to supplying the demand this side of the Rockies and in South America and the Orient.

At the Stockton plant two brick buildings, one 70x144 feet, to be used for assembling purposes, and the other, 60x150 feet, and intended for a storeroom, have just been completed. The construction of the new buildings will make possible the installation of much-needed equipment in the older structures. Included in the new machinery is the most modern type of steel furnaces, together with turret lathes and other machines known to the trade.

The number of the company's employees at Stockton will at once be increased from 450 to 600 or over.

PREDICTS FUTURE FOR DWARF TREES.

Expert opinion on the subject of dwarf fruit-tree growing is contained in a letter addressed by George C. Roeding, president and manager of the Fancher Creek Nurseries at Fresno, to a reader of The Times Farm and Tractor Section, in response to a query passed on by Farm and Tractor to the northern nurseryman. In this letter, a copy of which has come to The Times, Mr. Roeding has this to say on the subject:

"In my travels in Europe I had occasion to visit a number of nurseries noted for the growing of dwarf trees. As you are aware, they grow cherries, apples and pears on stocks which cause these trees to make a limited growth, and the effect of this stock is also to make them come into fruitage earlier than the standard trees. We have been growing to a considerable extent for a number of years pears on quince root and there is unquestionably a future for this kind of horticulture in California, particularly for people having small places or gardens where it is not practical to plant a fruit tree which would attain any size.

"I doubt very much the practicability of training trees along lines followed by many countries in Europe, as Espaliers, Cordon and fan-trained trees, simply because our conditions are not favorable for handling trees along these lines. In places like San Francisco and other localities where it is cool during the summer months and where they have more or less fog it is going to be possible to grow these in this manner. In such places it is advisable to do so because it is only by following some such plan as this that the trees will mature their fruit.

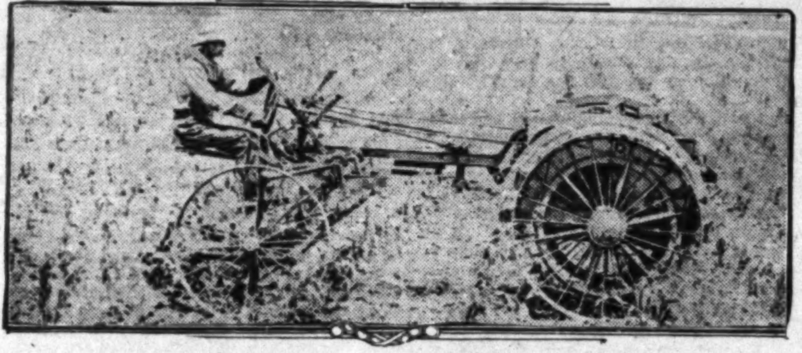
"I expect to develop this line of business quite extensively in one of the nurseries in which I am interested in the northern part of the State, and I really feel that it ought to be encouraged so that more people will realize the benefit and have the pleasure of having dwarf trees growing in their gardens.

In a recent article in the Farm and Tractor Section M. V. Hartranft of this city wrote interestingly on the same general subject, speaking with enthusiasm of his own experience in the growing of producing dwarf trees on small plots of ground. Mr. Hartranft expressed the belief that the training of trees after the plan known in Europe as the Espalier method could be made a success in Southern California if they were grown against heavy wire fencing instead of walls, as is the case abroad.

WHEN TOMATOES SHED BLOSSOMS.

It is well known by farmers and gardeners, says the Los Angeles Farm Bureau monthly, that under some soil and climatic conditions, it is very difficult to get tomato plants to set much fruit. The vines look fine and healthy and bear a large number of blossoms, but practically all of them fall off. The better the care given the tomatoes, apparently the poorer is the resultant crop. This peculiar behavior has long been a puzzle to farmers. Recent researches have uncovered the cause of the shedding and indicated ways of avoiding it. The shedding bears a definite relation to the available nitrogen content of the soil, or, in other words, to the richness of the soil. It also bears a relation to the amount of water in the soil. Where the soil is very rich or where the plants are heavily watered they do not manufacture enough strengthening material in the pedicels to hold the blossoms. The energies of the plant are expended in growing vine at the expense of setting fruit. Excessively rich soils should not be planted to tomatoes, and light or only moderate irrigation should be practiced. If the soil is rich, no more water should be given the plants than is sufficient to keep them healthy. In many cases, where the flowers are falling badly, a crop can be set by simply withholding the water from the plants for several weeks during the blooming period. Of course, the plants should not be permitted to suffer for water, as this is just as injurious as is an excess.

Ever hear of a boy with a mechanical turn of mind who cared to leave the home farm where there was a tractor for him to care for and operate? Modern machinery, together with better living conditions, is doing much to turn the tide "back to the land" and to prevent the exodus of farm boys and girls to the cities.



Cultivating corn with new Moline Universal tractor.

FAITHFUL DOBBIN GETS ANOTHER BLOW.

Can tractors successfully be used for cultivating? At least five manufacturers claim that the horse will soon be supplanted in the bean and corn fields by self-contained or motor-drawn power cultivators.

Most people are familiar with the little garden tractors, designed especially for light field work and cultivating. Some farmers have met with success in using these machines as "little brother" to their field tractors for cultivating work.

Another type of tractor widely employed for cultivating is the twolwheel machine which is hitched direct to the implement. The manufacturers say that hundreds of them are actually being used, not only for corn and other crops in the Middle West, but in California bean fields.

A self-contained motor cultivator, demonstrated at the Davis show, is now offered for sale by a local dealer. This is, in effect, an ordinary cultivator, especially designed for power propulsion and with an engine mounted on the frame. It is a four-wheel, gear-driven machine, of light weight and good speed, and made a successful demonstration at Davis.

Still another manufacturer, who was one of the first makers of farm tractors in the United States, worked out a small machine, with adjustable treads, which could be used for pulling a cultivator in rows of varying width. This machine, however, has been supplanted by a "motor cultivator," built like a regular tractor, but with cultivator attached. This machine can also be used for light work, such as raking and hauling, but is not suitable for plowing. It is designed for use in conjunction with a larger machine.

THE TRACTOR'S PART.

Farm tractors are playing an important part in relieving the labor situation on the farms, farm labor specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture say. In Pennsylvania more than 2800 tractors are in use. Through the Public Safety Commission tractors have been bought and are equipped with an operator and mechanic and placed in communities. The farmers guarantee a reasonable acreage for plowing and pay from $3.50 to $5 an acre for the breaking of the land. This co-operation, according to the farm labor specialists, has meant much to small farmers who are unable to purchase tractors for their individual use. It also saves them the large amount of time and labor required in breaking land which is the slowest and most expensive operation on the farm.

AN INFORMING BOOK.

In the Co-operative Tractor Catalogue, just issued by the Implement and Tractor Trade Journal of Kansas City, is to be found a fund of information concerning the many makes of tractors and their operation. Complete specifications for each machine are given. Chapters on the care and use of the tractor and the auxiliary farm implements which it operates are written by experts. The book is thoroughly illustrated.

SCHOOL ISSUES BOOKLET.

An attractive new "tractioneering" catalogue has just been issued by the National Automotive School of Los Angeles. The booklet deals exclusively with the tractor driving maintenance and repair courses offered by the school, and consists of sixteen pages, well illustrated with photographs of tractors and the work of the students.

A road grader is a handy implement to hitch behind the tractor at odd times, and does much to improve the appearance and condition of the roads around the farm. Regular dragging and grading minimize the cost of road upkeep.

Tillage Tool Specialists

For seventy-six years we have specialized on tillage implements. Seventy-six years of doing just one thing. But it's a big thing, for it is the production of the implements that make possible the immense crops for which the American farmer is noted.

Seventy-six years of growth—from the simple walking plow with a sheet steel mold to the splendid plows of today, with their specially designed bottoms of specially prepared steel with turning and scouring qualities unsurpassed—from the simple single and double shovel plows to the efficient walking and riding cultivators of today—from planting by hand to the accurate, seed saving, crop making planters and listers for which the Parlin & Orendorff Co. is noted all over the world.

The P&O Line comprises all kinds of tillage tools—tools to meet the requirements of the farmer with unlimited power—horse or tractor—or tools adapted to the needs of the gardener with one horse or no horse. And every tool in the line is beautifully adapted to the work for which it is intended, because it is built by tillage tool specialists.

We have made a special study of the needs of the Pacific Coast farmer and orchardist. It will pay you to investigate the P&O Line. P&O Catalogs can be had for the asking. Ask your nearest dealer or agency for information about the P&O Line.

This new type pump has a capacity of 1700 gallons a minute, delivering 115 inches of water from a 117-foot well, equipped with 16-inch casing. The pump irrigates a 140-acre ranch. A 20-horse-power electric motor furnishes the power at a cost of about 30 cents an hour. (Note the concrete silo in the background.)

Interior of a practical dairy farmer's milking barn. The pure-bred Holsteins belonging to Jim Jeffries of Burbank are milked in this building, and receive their grain and beet-pulp in the cement troughs, which have been topped with sloping boards to prevent wasting of feed. The rations are distributed by means of small hand-carts, which are built low-down so that they may readily be filled and emptied with a shovel. The entire interior of this simple, yet highly practical structure is whitewashed. Wooden stanchions are used. The electric lights, open sides and galvanized roofing are typical of the cow barns on many Southern California dairy farms.

The Land Army that Wears no Uniform.

Throughout the length and breadth of America hundreds of farm women, without advertising and without reward other than the satisfaction of helping win the family bread and the war, have gone into the fields to help their husbands and brothers and to take the places of those of the stronger sex who have gone to the trenches in France.

What if the household duties do suffer while this farm wife take her turn at the wheel of the tractor! She is making possible the tilling of acres that would have been idle except for her patriotic and unselfish sacrifice.

Ruth Pearson, a 16-year-old high school girl, is helping her father this summer in his hay fields near Bell. This little miss can build a stack or load a wagon with the best of the men.

Although the care of the farm flock of poultry usually falls to the women, many of them, in addition to increasing the number of chickens in response to Mr. Hoover's appeal, have assumed the care of pigs, calves and sheep. Many farmers declare that no man can equal a woman in the rearing of young stock of any kind. Women are doing their bit on many of the big California poultry ranches this year.

The Rose "Los Angeles" Wins

It will be a matter of intense pride to the people of California—Los Angeles in particular—and to all lovers of flowers, especially Roses, to know that California's famous Rose "Los Angeles" has been awarded the gold medal—the grand prize of the Rose world—at Paris, France.

This prize is presented annually by the City of Paris for the most perfect type of new seedling Rose in exhaustive competition extending over a period of two years and embracing entries from all parts of the world.

With the guns of earth's greatest war thundering fifty miles away and the city under bombardment by "Big Berthas" and Gotha aeroplanes, the judging in the Rose garden of the Bois de Boulogne Park was witnessed by an assemblage of thirty-five thousand people. This emphasizes the importance in which this award is regarded by the French nation and indicates the high degree of honor bestowed upon a California production and upon our home city of Los Angeles.

IMPORTANT NOTICE—owing to the enormous demand for the rose "Los Angeles," which it received on its own merits before this award was made, we sold our entire stock last season, but now have ready a limited number of plants, heavy two-year-old stock, balled from the field, for immediate delivery. This stock will be exhausted before the coming winter. If you want one or more plants, order NOW, otherwise you will be unable to have your order taken care of until next year.

The Greatest of Nations.

COUNTLESS ages passed before the earth was prepared for the advent of man. The oldest civilization known is that of Egypt, and the pyramids are things of yesterday compared with the formation of Echo Mountain, or the valley of the Colorado.

Man was the last work of the Creator, and so, as our senses can give evidence, he is poised upon the very pinnacle of creation. If there is a higher order of being than man such order is not discernible.

"Science," said Dr. Stebbins, "unfolds the order of nature and reveals the methods and law, but man, his fortunes, his deeds, his nature and his destiny, are the noblest objects of thought and study."

Man is superior to nature, in that he recognizes the law of nature and the law of his own being. He discovers truth, good and evil, and is haunted by the thought that not death, but increasing life is his goal. Progressive reason achieves new conquests in every age, and can never rest until it is established upon the throne of the world, and the sublime affirmation is realized: "Thou hast put all things under his feet." The mission of man was to progress, not merely in the understanding of the material universe, but to advance the moral and intellectual growth of his race. The American continent was the earliest in geologic time, and has been the latest in the development of mankind.

The ancient Oriental civilizations flourished for tens of thousands of years before the great immigrations which founded the Asiatic empires, which, in turn preceded Grecian culture and Roman conquest. With all the learning which preceded the advent of the Savior it was believed that the earth was flat and that the sun revolved around it. The Ptolemaic system held scholars, philosophers, Kings and priests in the thraldom of the senses, and it is but 426 years since Columbus had the courage and the enterprise to follow the round world to the shores of the Western Hemisphere.

The America of today was European in its origin and its development. The mound builders left but faint traces of an early civilization on our continent. We draw our language, our laws, our inspirations and our aspirations from England. The Congress of the United States and the Parliament of England are both the offspring of Magna Charta. Our revolutionary fathers were Englishmen who rebelled against the tyranny of George III, even as their ancestors had rebelled against the Stuart, against the Norman Kings and against the princes of Cedric's house.

The doctrine of the political equality of mankind, proclaimed by the fathers 142 years ago, has dominated the politics, the literature and the social life of America even since and, through all changes of politics and parties, it has never been lost sight of or ceased to be a great if not a dominant factor in shaping parties, in controlling legislatures and in governing courts.

Under the government organized by our fathers a continent of forests and prairies has been changed into a land of cultivated fields and fruitful orchards. Science has been applied to conquering the elements to the uses of man. Peace and war have given us for our country a hemisphere whose boundaries are washed by Arctic, and tropic, and Atlantic and Pacific and Orient seas. We have welcomed to fairer opportunities and improved lives many millions of men and women from beyond seas.

Is this great ship of state, this mighty and youthful bark freighted with the science of all the ages and carrying the happiness and the hopes of mankind, to be dynamited and wrecked and her fragments scattered upon the shores of time through the machinations and efforts of the inhuman devil who, in his crazed ambition has ruined Germany and threatens to ruin the civilized world? No!

"As true as God's own word is true
Not earth or hell with all their crew
Against us shall prevail.
God is with us, we are his own,
Our victory cannot fail."

Married Life of Helen and Warren

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

SHARP shrill barks, the excited barking of a small dog, answered Helen's knock. Then the door opened, and a ball of shaggy fur leapt about her.

"There, there Gyp! Be quiet! Be QUIET! Oh, she gets so excited." Mrs. Elliot caught up the squirming bundle. "Sit over here—it's cooler."

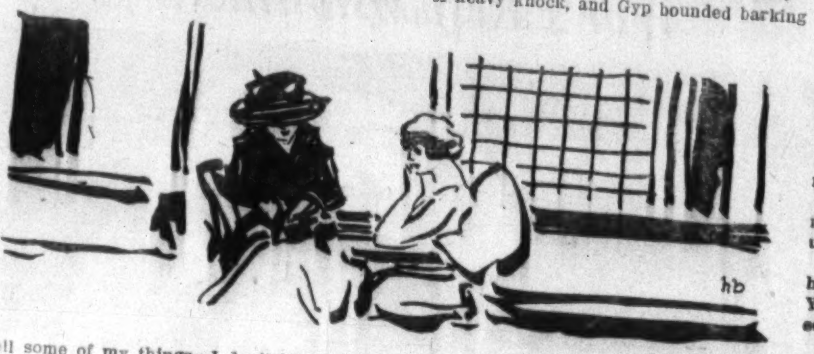
Helen took the chair by the window which looked out on a narrow court.

"No, thank you," at the proffered box of Egyptian cigarettes.

"You don't smoke?" in surprise, discarding a smoldering stub and lighting a fresh one. "Oh, I couldn't live without it—it's my only comfort now."

"I got your note this morning—I'm sorry you're depressed," murmured Helen.

"Depressed? I'm desperate! If I can't sell some of my things—I don't know what I'll do. Yesterday I got the hatefulest note from the manager—said he must have these rooms if my bill isn't paid by the first."



"You don't owe much?" anxioused Helen, who had an innate horror of debt.

"For six months. A hundred and ten a month, that's six sixty for the rooms, besides the restaurant bill and the telephone. The statement's here somewhere," she was rummaging a tumbled desk. "It's over twelve hundred."

"Twelve hundred!" gasped Helen.

"Well, I had to live somewhere," resentfully. "But to get a note like that after I've been here four years," indignantly. "Think of all the rent Doctor paid in that time—and now for them to demand my rooms!"

Helen, knowing Dr. Elliot had left almost nothing, had wondered how, since his death, his wife had been able to live on in the same extravagance.

"Now that I'm alone—with no one to turn to—that's how I'm treated! I saw the manager this morning—he wouldn't do a thing!"

"But you say the bill has been running six months," ventured Helen, who felt the hotel management had been most lenient.

"Well, what if it has?" defiantly. "They know me—they know I'll pay some time. And they know I have all these things. Why that picture alone is worth five thousand," indicating a painting over the mantel. "I'm sure it's a Reynolds—even if it isn't signed. Here, Gyp, come here!"

"He's all right," Helen petted the wriggling Pekingese.

"And that Chinese vase—that's worth several hundred! And that Italian chest is full of things I brought from Venice. They know all these are valuable—they've let me run up this bill just so they could get them."

"Oh, I'm sure you're wrong about that," murmured Helen, feeling the injustice of this.

"No, I'm not," vehemently. "They want to force me to sell everything at auction so they can buy them in for almost nothing. Oh, that phone drives me wild," turning to the shrilling instrument on the desk.

"Hello! . . . Yes . . . You can tell Mr. Schwartz I'll mail him a check in a few days. . . . Yes, I'll try to send it by the first."

Abruptly cutting off she turned to Helen with a resentful,

"Don't ever go to Schwartz! Because he made me that tan suit this spring—he's hounded me ever since. And for years I was his best customer."

"But you can't expect people not to try to collect their bills."

"Of course not, but they can use some judgment. They should give me a little time when they see I'm so hard pressed."

With every other weakness, Helen was sympathetic to a fault, but her deep-rooted horror of debt made her condemn severely the careless running up of bills. She could not understand any one calmly living on accumulating debts.

Mrs. Elliot's whole attitude implied that she expected indefinite credit. She seemed to think the people whom she had patronized in the past should help support her now.

Since her husband's death she had made no effort to lessen her expenses. Everything about her betrayed the same careless extravagance—her clothes, cigarettes, even the French perfumes and powders on her dresser. The latest magazines and novels littered the table, and on the couch lay an unopened package from an exclusive shop.

A heavy knock, and Gyp bounded barking to the door as some letters were thrust beneath.

"More bills!" She picked them up and tossed them on the desk.

"But what're you going to do?" worried Helen. "You can't go on this way."

"What can I do—except sell these things." Then bitterly, Oh, I don't want to say anything against the Doctor—but he should've carried a large insurance. He left me penniless except for a miserable two thousand!"

"But you're clever in so many ways," encouraged Helen. "You speak both French and Italian, don't you?" "And you've had—"

"You mean I ought to take a position? How can I? How could I get down to an office at 9 o'clock? Why, I never get up before ten. I've a headache all day if I hurry in the morning," reaching for a cigarette.

Helen bit her lip to keep back an impatient retort.

"I suppose I could teach music—I studied three years in Berlin. But who wants piano lessons now?"

"Oh, no, you couldn't depend upon that. You must take up something practical."

"Well, I'm not practical—I never was," almost with a note of pride. "Oh, I don't know what's to become of us, Gyp," as the dog jumped to her lap.

Helen was baffled. She longed to help this woman to some definite work, something by which she could be self-supporting and gradually pay her debts. But Mrs. Elliot seemed almost proud of her helpless incapability.

"Oh, don't go yet," she protested, when Helen feeling the futility of advice rose to leave. "I want you to speak to Mr. Curtis about these things. I'd like to sell that picture to the museum. I wonder if he knows any of the directors? Maybe he knows some private collector?"

"I hardly think so—but I'll speak to him."

"Oh, won't you have some tea before you go? I didn't think to ask you. I'll call down for some—they serve delicious toasted muffins here."

"No—no, please don't!" objected Helen, as Mrs. Elliot turned to the phone. "I don't care for a thing!" horrified at the thought of adding to the twelve-hundred-dollar debt.

She was standing at the door, her hand on the knob. Startled by a knock she drew back. It was a dejected Italian with three pairs of shoes, expensive tan, white, and gray kid—all freshly cleaned.

"It's been running since February, ma'am," handing Mrs. Elliot a bill. "I'd like to have the money today."

"Well, I haven't the change just now. I'll stop by and pay you," closing the door on the man's reluctance. Then as she threw the shoes into a closet, "There's gratitude for you! That man's cleaned our shoes for years. Doctor always gave him something every Christmas—and now he duns me for a few dollars! Oh, must you go! You won't forget to speak to Mr. Curtis about those things?"

"No, but I doubt if he knows any collectors."

"Well, any one who knows anything about art would appreciate them. You can't see that picture in this light, but the coloring and atmosphere is perfect. The museum has several Reynolds not half so good, and I'm sure ——"

At the risk of seeming rude Helen finally broke in on this effusive volubility and made an abrupt departure.

On the street she found herself almost running, as if to more quickly escape the unwholesome atmosphere she had just left.

How could any one live like that? The horror of being always hounded with bills! Yet Mrs. Elliot seemed wholly without a sense of obligation.

A luxury-loving, self-indulgent woman, was Helen's reluctant appraisement. A parasite on her husband during his life, since his death she had drifted on in helpless indolence.

For months she had gone on heedlessly incurring debts which she knew she could not meet. With no thought of the future she had lived only from day to day. To Helen's practical, "always-thinking-of-tomorrow" nature, this mode of living seemed incomprehensible.

Though Warren had been very friendly with Dr. Elliot he had never approved of his wife, and Helen knew that to try to enlist his sympathy now would be futile. Yet she had promised to speak to him about the painting.

As usual she choose the after-dinner cigar period as the most propitious time to broach any subject.

An occasional grunt was Warren's only comment, as, repressing her own disapproval, she strove to give a sympathetic account of Mrs. Elliot's financial difficulties.

"She hopes you can help her sell some of her things," she finished lamely. "Do you know any of the museum directors—or any private collector?"

"No I don't, but if I did they wouldn't be interested in anything she's got. She's like all the rest—thinks the stuff she picked up abroad for a few dollars can be put over here for a fortune."

"But these must be valuable—why, she claims that painting alone is worth five thousand. It isn't signed, but she's sure it's a Reynolds."

"A Reynolds?" with a snort. "About as much chance of her having a Reynolds as of—of me having a halo! Five thousand! If she get's five hundred she'll be doing well."

"But, dear, what is she going to do?"

"Hope she's going to get the jolt of her life. After she's fired from that hotel, and sponged all she can on her friends—maybe she'll get down to brass tacks. She'll not get out and hustle till she has to, but when she does—a good stiff job and a little roughing it will be mighty wholesome."

"But she never has done anything. It'll be very hard for her to ——"

"Hard? Of course it'll be hard—but it'll be her salvation. Work, good hard work and plenty of it—that's the dope for her! Darn sight better for her health, too, than moping around, nursing that fool dog—and smoking cigarettes!"

Mobilizing the Leather Industry

chines for manipulating the hide and for taking off the hair. A leather splitting machine was invented when Thomas Jefferson was President, and now we have splitting machines that can be adjusted to the thousandths of an inch. By means of a belt as it whirls around the thin steel knifes sharpens itself on an emery wheel. It will split a hide into sheets as thin as paper if required. There are also measuring and cutting machines, which relieve the tanners of mathematical computation. Machines for stoning, polishing and finishing leather were produced as early as the time of the Mexican War, and patent leathers and pebbled leathers were first made shortly before the Civil War.

The materials for tanning have changed, and certain new kinds of vegetable extracts are used which do the work more quickly than the bark of the oak or the hemlock. There is an acorn from Turkey and Greece which has three times as much tannin in it as the strongest oak bark, and there are pods of certain South American trees which are largely used to make leather. Many other tanning materials come to the factories in the form of extracts which can be readily and cheaply mixed with water, and there are also pastes and solid extracts which can be dissolved by heat and used for tanning. Sumach is also largely employed. It is found throughout the Southern States and also in Italy. Gambier is also a tanning shrub which comes from the Malay Archipelago. The extract is made by boiling the shrub, and it is sent to the market in blocks and tubes. Quebracho is another tanning material which is sold as an extract containing from 60 to 70 per cent. of tannin. This comes from a tree that grows in the wilds of Paraguay. I have seen men cutting the forests for that purpose and shipping the wood to market. One cutch comes from the mangrove tree of the swamps of Borneo, and there is another cutch which is obtained from the acacia tree of East India.

In fact, we now get our tanning materials from all parts of the world and the different varieties are used in one way or another for making the different leathers.

We also do a great deal of chemical tanning, although this is chiefly employed for small skins and light leathers. At present two-thirds of the glazed kid is tanned by the chrome process. This consists of treating the skins with bichromate of potash to which some hydrochloric acid is added. By this method the skins may be tanned within a few hours and the leather produced is extremely soft and pliable and of a close texture. The process was first used largely at Philadelphia and it has aided in making that city one of the chief leather manufacturing centers of the world.

Another process of curing leather which is largely used for certain varieties of skins is tawing. This means treating them after removing the hair to baths of bran and water, and after that to one of alum and salt, and then covering them with a paste made of flour and the yolks of eggs mixed with water. The eggs go into the leather and cure it. The hide is then dried, and afterward worked and pulled back and forth to stretch and soften it. It is finally smoothed with a hot iron. Some glove leather is made in this way.

The demands of the war call for more or less leather which has been treated after the chamois process. In this the skins are thoroughly cleansed with lime, drenched with bran, and while still wet are oiled with fish, seal or whale oil. The oil works into the skin, driving out the water, and it becomes a part of the material, making it soft and spongy. Wash leather is prepared in this way and for this the flesh halves of sheepskins are used.

The most of the chamois is made from the skins of deer, elk, buck, goat, sheep and calf, the first three being the best.

How Ancients Wrote Letters

dry in the sun. The Romans improved the process by sizing the sheets with a mixture of flour and vinegar, afterwards beating the surface smooth. Twenty of these papyrus sheets were glued together by the first known book-binders, "glutinatories," and then into a roll called a volumer—hence, our word "volume." The durability of these rolls is evidenced by the fact that the ancient papyrus manuscripts that have been found are almost as serviceable today as when first made.

Hundreds of papyrus rolls have been discovered in recent years. Nearly 1800 were unearthed in the ruins of Herculaneum about 1753. The French expedition into Egypt in 1798 was largely instrumental in making these papyri known in Europe, and there is in Paris a well-preserved "volumer" which is thirty feet long. Specimens were reproduced in print in 1805 by one Cadet. Philostratus mentions the manufacture of papyrus as an industry in Alexandria in A. D. 244.

Chicago has the largest collection of ancient papyri west of the Atlantic. It consists of 300 complete pieces and hundreds of fragments. They were discovered by an Arab sheik while digging along the banks of the Nile.

Words Were Coined as They Were Needed for Expression.

Before passing on to the next step towards the discovery of paper as used today, it might be interesting to note that the English language has gained a number of words from the bulrush and its mode of manufacture into writing material. Paper and Bible come, respectively, from the Latin "papyrus" and the Greek "byblos." Through the Greek "charasso" (to furrow) and the Greek and Latin "charta" (a piece of paper,) we have the words chart, card and Magna Charta, the great sheet anchor of English liberty.

Parchment, which followed papyrus, was made from the skins of goats and sheep. The skins were placed in a pit of lime and then stretched upon frames where their thickness was reduced by scraping with sharp instruments. They were then sprinkled with chalk and rubbed and polished with fine pumice stone; this softened the leather and also gave it a better color. The Hebrews wrote on the skins of animals as early as 1085 B. C., and as papyrus was not very extensively introduced in Western Asia, it is thought that the Medes made a sort of parchment at about the same period. For certain purposes, the use of parchment continues up to the present day, as well as vellum, preof young calves.

Then came paper, and the improvements in its manufacture have kept pace with the varying and growing demands. Throughout all the ages, man has demonstrated the truth of the saying that "necessity is the mother of invention," and so it will be to the end of time.

TWO FUNERALS FOR ONE MAN.

In the cemetery at Goschenen, in Switzerland, a strange burial took place at the end of the nineteenth century. The coffin, a small one, decently and decorously consigned to earth, contained part of a human leg, a boot, some shreds of clothing, and one franc, fifty centimes of Swiss money. The unusual ceremony was the concluding chapter of a sad history that began on the Rhone glacier eighteen years before.

In the summer of 1882 the Burgomaster of Goschenen and two friends undertook the ascent of the glacier. All three lost their lives, and the bodies were found a week later frozen stiff. That of the Burgomaster was stuck fast in a crevasse, and in dragging it forth, the frozen right leg broke off like a snapped icicle, and fell into the blue depths of the fissure. The poor mutilated body was laid away in the cemetery with every honor, for the Mayor had been greatly loved and respected in his little community.

The peasants say, "Seven years the glacier grows; seven years she melts;" and in melting she honestly brings to the mouth of her river all that has fallen down her icy, blue throat; a belief that, although partly fanciful, contains much that is true. By this strange operation of nature, the leg of the Mayor of Goschenen came to light after eighteen years. The boot was still on the foot; some rags of clothing clung to the leg; even the trifling sum of money in the unfortunate man's trousers pocket was honestly returned by the glacier, which keeps nothing not its own.

After eighteen years the leg was buried beside its master.

THE LATEST GREAT BATTLE.

Two hundred thousand men in battle slain.
But yesterday, I saw the soldiers pass,
One quarter of this dreadful garnering of Death;
And oh! it seemed to me, I scarce had known,
There were so many in the world, before;
And they were but a fragment to the host,
Just piled in ghastly windrows on the field,
Where swept the storm of Death at Cambrai.

Man has blasphemed the Builder of the worlds,
Because of pestilence and storm and flood;
Then with his puny fists has dammed the winds,
Shut up the flood and vanquished pestilence;
But in a day, he tears the barriers down,
And looses on his kind the evils fought
Through ages, and he cannot tell you why.
The kings live on, and every mother's son,
They borrow to their shame, is backward flung,
Dismembered, shattered to their bosoms, dead.

But oh! the mothers! God! to think of them.
War! War! Thou infamy of nations, cease.
Each one of all that great, unnumbered throng,
From either side, swept by the hail of fire,
And now arraigned before the Judgment seat,
Has been the subject of a million fears,
Of prayers forever torn from sorrowing hearts.

Imagination reels and hides her head,
Poor drunkard, from this world carousal come,
The ghosts of criminals, for aye unshrived
Since time began,
Loosed from the nether regions of the damned,
Rush screaming by to join this carnival,
And as they pass, they reach their shrivelled hands
To grasp your son and mine, and shout for "More."

Who is the sinner most of all despised,
Most lost to shame? Say, shall I tell you, who?
The man who fattens on his country's need,
Whose bulging coffers burst with War's damned grist;
Who with his leprous hands demands it's toll,
While Peace, poor, timid fool, slinks trembling by.

through which the wind had so long whistled.

Then the Mexicans began to move in, one family at a time. The first to come scraped the ground of the back yard and planted a few sets of garlic. The second brought a hen or two and established them in a chicken coop, the wire for which was furnished by a benevolent neighbor. The third planted the front yard to flowers, and by the time that the fourth had arrived the garlic had begun to come up. The fifth secured a pail of paint and tinted the front steps, and the sixth added more hens to the coop.

By that time the garden was sprouting and more space had been planted to vegetables. One of the original family's older boys made a sign at school bearing the characters, "Modern Flat House," which he hung above the dwelling's front door. It is there today, together with the hens and the garden, a new family and two new additions to a previous family. The same persons have lived in their "modern apartments" for several years and the place is overrun with verdure. In addition, each month one of the tenants delegates himself the rent-collector and carries the money to the treasurer of Brownson House.

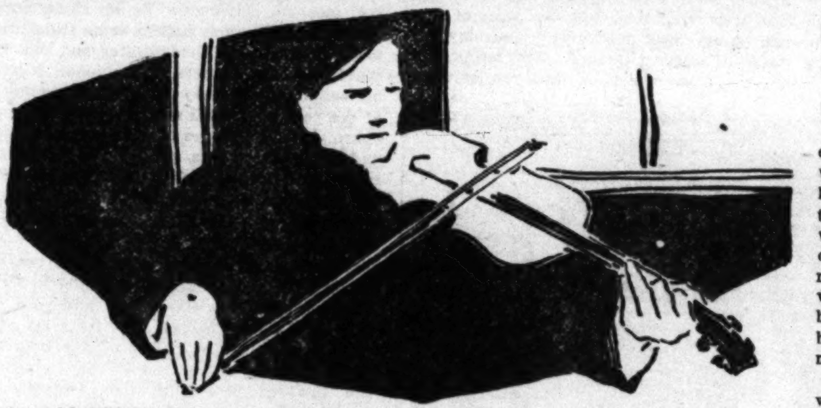
Whom the Gods Hate: A Study in Irony.

BY GORDON RAY YOUNG.

THIS is a sad tale. There is no bloodshed in it, and Clarice shed no tears that unslept night as she drooped over the little white crib and looked into the deep, deep, dark pools of mysterious light and cursed with a woman's hate all the fool men that have made laws and the sillier wise men who have studied human flesh as Mendel studies peas. No. She did not weep, but laughed the harsh meaningless laugh of a woman who could, with great joy, wreck, with her own hands, half the earth; but there was none to harm unless it be the sweet babe in the white crib. And she would have wrecked the whole earth rather than bruise a finger of those tiny fluttering hands.

This is a sad tale, for it is such a story as every woman has in her heart for some man; a perfectly moral and proper tale, though a mistress laughed and mocked Clarice ofttimes from peep of dawn until midnight had passed; and as she mocked Clarice with lilting tones, now shrieking high, now low and soft as the patter of sunbeam's silken feet, she sang siren words into Wilbur's low-bent ear.



And the midnight moon peeping through the rose trellis at his window might see him, pen in hand, scribbling his heart away, while Clarice, hot for love, lay chin on fist amid the folds of a disarrayed gown and stared at him with moody eyes clouded by loose hair of polished copper.

Clarice hated the violin. She hated the sheets of music, painfully written, petulantly destroyed, slowly, laboriously rewritten, played over, destroyed, rewritten, destroyed, rewritten, destroyed, rewritten—keeping the rhythmic travail of your true artist.

They had a cottage stuck on a hill in the sunland by the western shore, and little else. His pupils were few and he would rather be hungry and scribbling notes than sitting white-breasted, long coat-tailed behind the palms of a cafeteria making his beloved fiddle play the things that people like when they eat.

She was always hungry whether the pupils paid promptly or not; and sometimes beat her fists against the walls and broke things because she did not dare break the violin. Sometimes he would grimly sit at his desk pretending to work on, ignoring her words and racket till the whirlwind passed and the gentle shower of tears washed her cheeks; and sometimes he would drop his pen and pipe, scoop her struggling, slender body into his arms, press her close, call her sweet names and himself a brute; but sometimes he would be one; throw a shirt at the open suit case, snatch his hat and go out of the door snarling, "This is the end. By God I mean it this time!"

And he would mean it. She knew that, and believed him, too, and suffered as though in a week or a month or two of them there would never be a dear note full of humble, contrite phrases, or a rattle at the door at dusk and Wilbur standing there smiling rather sheepishly, one hand about the neck of Tipo and the other loaded with rye bread, salami, potato salad, a cold roasted chicken, and in his pocket large, moist dill pickles which she would nibble till midnight. Then she wouldn't go back the next morning to the millinery department, or ladies' waists, or the fashion alley, or wherever it was that she had had to get a job; and he would swear regular hours for his fiddling and a scant definite time for his score writing, saying "We live only once—and fame?—we'll all be dead and can't love;" thereby unconsciously repeating the words of her own ding-donged chorus.

She believed him and was happy. He believed himself. And they would be merry and dig in flower beds, and debate whether or not to oust the petunias and put in potatoes which they could eat; but potatoes not being perennials nor having purple trumpets that blared shrill notes too keenly pitched for any ears but lovers', were declared false claimants to the domain and set in 'dobe soil in a damp spot under the oak trees where in disgust they refused ever to bear a tuber. But there was the joy of the planting, of home-making, of working together.

But whom the gods hate they give her husband over to art. And the siren that dwelt in the violin told him strange things that took the focus out of his blue eyes and left him staring intently at nothing for hours upon hours. Clarice would protest, and they would quarrel, say mean things that neither believed, wrangle, shake their fists, stamp, lift their voices, and neighbors would hear and tell other neighbors that "The Wilders are at it again. Lord bless you, they can't live together and they can't live apart. Such people ain't no business gettin' married."

Wilbur had been away three months, written a sonata that won third prize and $20 in the local contest financed by an oil man who wanted to patronize the arts; and he appeared on the porch at dusk with more eatables than it was convenient to carry and more resolutions than he could ever keep.

But Clarice was not there. He felt like a man who has opened his eyes and found the floor gone from his bedroom and himself dangling in space.

He put the things down on the porch and walked around the house, noting some small, white garments on the line, the cat impatiently scratching at the back door, the broom on end, a bottle of milk standing in the window—and it seemed like home. He picked up the cat, for the urge to pet would not be denied, returned to the front steps and sat down, explaining to the tawny tom that she would be along soon.

She came, but not alone. A low-slung roadster whirred down the street and stopped with a grinding of brakes. In the shadows Wilbur could see better than be seen; and his face was hot and he wanted to hurt somebody. A sleek young man helped her out and lingered pressingly for an invitation to come in. He did not get it. Clarice knew what he wanted, and he couldn't have it, though his father was president, general manager and controlling owner of the Three Starred Motion Picture Company and she needed the money and would have been pleased at being starred. He had been plain and almost business-like about it; and she hadn't slapped his face.

No. She had been clerk, saleslady, hat trimmer, tried for the chorus and had done numerous other things teaching girls that men are pretty much alike and if you are fussy about it they only think you are stalling. And besides, though she couldn't be a leading lady with the Three Starred, she didn't want to lose her job.

The roadster buzzed, coughed asthmatically, then whirled away with words floating back about "seeing you tomorrow." Clarice didn't hear them. She had seen Wilbur, and tom, perplexed and ruffled, went to the ground while four arms wrapped two palpitating bodies, and the scandalized neighbor next door rushed in to tell his wife that the Wilders had made it up—again.

The evening salami and bacon sizzled and burned in the skillet. From a cracked plate on the oil-clothed table a cold roasted chicken stonily extended its legs in the air with an attitude of permanency. The dill pickles were squashed in his pocket, for the two of them sat on one chair and forgot to eat, though tom protestingly clawed at her skirt and stretched to glimpse the size of the chicken. Liquid rubies streamed from the narrow neck of the bulbous, wicker-encased bottle. Glasses tinkled. Warm lips met and held—and the whole world could have gone and jumped into the ocean for all that she and he cared.

She read over and over, pressing to her breast the simple formal letter notifying him of having been awarded the third prize and $20, and wriggled about ecstatically as she waved the paper over her head.

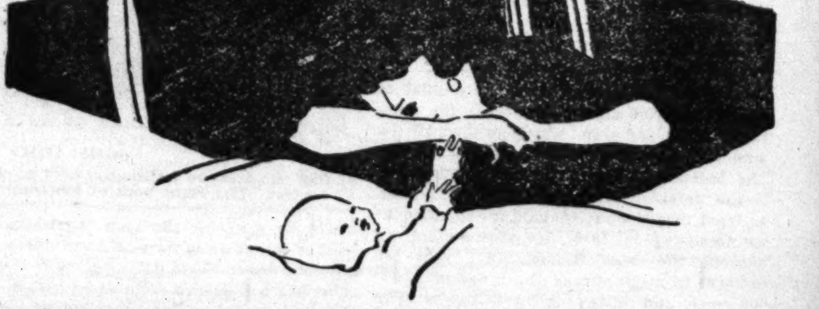
"At last! And you so deserve recognition—oh, my dear boy!"

He looked modest and happy as one proudly does when fame has sounded his name on that queer trumpet of hers which seems stentorian to the ears of the one whose name is called, and yet is scarcely heard by the man in the street.

The next morning the son of the president of the Three Starred swore as he looked in vain among the "extras;" but by noon he had winked at and by evening he had won to dinner a slim, trim, black-eyed newcomer whose skirts were modestly kept about her calves to hide the Jacob's ladders. She, too, needed the job. He wished that her eyes were vividly blue and her hair gleamingly bronze. But even a president's son can't have everything, though he wonders why not?

Days, weeks, a month and a little more went by, then the illicit mistress caught Wilbur's ear and whispered strange melodies, offering them to him as his own, but tantalizing him as he reached for them with the bow, singing them again and again to his ears, plucking them from his fingers, but promising, ever promising, that he could have them and more if he persisted.

From the front room the witch in the fiddle mocked Clarice as she stood before the mirror of their little bedroom calculatingly laying the flimsiest of open-work things across her soft breast, running the tip of her red tongue sedulously along first one and then the other lip to impart color, drawing her shimmering hair down over her ears and catching it tightly back after the mode of "vamps," and snatching at all the artistry with which men are lured. Within her was the lure that ruins and she knew it, but never before had she thought to use the liquid fire of her flesh. But now she had entered the lists against this fiendish mistress, and grim was the resolve to ruin her husband, break down his ceaseless ambition—mad as a drunkard's thirst—lose him to fame and hold him to love, for nothing else was life to her. The pride of her was girded for the battle. The tents of Armageddon were pitched under their roof. A casual and unmeant glance had often set men feverish; but she wanted one man, not men, and she would have him or die the unburiable death of a woman who has thrown herself like an arrow bearing fire and been turned aside.



She cooked what there was to cook for supper and sweetly called thrice. He said petulantly, "Oh, in a minute." So she drank her tea alone, and smiled grimly as a woman does who has a dagger up her sleeve for her husband's mistress that is unsuspectingly teasing with honeyed voice in the next room.

She entered, dangerously langorous. He stood in the center of the room, violin caressingly under his chin, the bow darting tenderly, coaxingly over the strings. A dim, warm glow swam out from under the red silk mantle of the light on the table. She sat down before him and watched, lingered, waited for his eyes to fall on her. And when they did it was as though she was not there. His eyes looked straight into her face for seconds, then drifted away and hung as attentively on the pipe rack beneath the chromo of Liszt, while his ear hung over the strings to catch the lowest tone and quaver.

Clarice waited till he paused for a moment, lowered the fiddle, bent over the table, picked up the pen and began hastily to dot down notes on the score that looked like scurrying birds in a futurist's sketch; then she touched his arm and spoke.

Without looking up, he twisted away from her hand, saying:

"Don't—don't——"

"But Wilbur——"

"I want to get this down."

"Oh, Wilbur boy, just——"

"Don't bother me."

"Listen, sweet. Just a second. Look at me, dear——"

"Will you kindly shut up!" he cried, turning on her angrily. "Get away. Leave me alone. I've tried all day to catch this and now you've driven it out of my head. For God's sake, get away and stay away!"

For a moment he glared into her face, then he turned to the sheet of paper and began writing again. And even as she watched in amazement, humiliated, defeated, dead within the heart of her, he threw down the pen in disgust and, muttering unpleasant things, picked up the violin to coax the siren voice to give him again the vanished notes.

She had lost before she had even begun to fight. She was red with wounded pride, weak with the sense of defeat. The charm of her had been repulsed. He cared more for an old violin than he did for her pulsating body and warm, moist lips.

She went into their bedroom, took the suit case, threw a few necessary things into it, pinned a line to the pillow, counted the change in her purse, laid $2 on the dresser and slipped out of the back door.

The sun was up and he was happy from music well written when beamingly he came into the bedroom on tip-toes so as not to awaken her, and found the note: "Boy, this is the end. You will never hear from me again."

For two hours he walked about the house, faintly remembering that he had said something to her, but vainly teasing his memory as to what it was. The ache was so strong and tears so near his eyes that he took up the fiddle and played the score he had caught during the night.

And he had thought that stuff worth losing a night's sleep to write down! Dull, frivolous, trite, amateurish, empty—like the next morning's recollections of what a slangy chorus girl had said at supper. He tore the score across and across, and again across, and flung the scraps onto the floor—then kicked them.

Clarice was in San Francisco trigging shapes for the Easter trade, living on her $9 a week comfortably enough, but with the suffering of widowhood in her breast. A plump, rosy-cheeked, brown-eyed friend who lived across the hall vainly suggested ways and means of cheering her up, and declared it to be the life. No more dairy lunches and spying-faced clocks to punch. Not much.

Then came the night when the plump cheeks were ashen, and the friend crouched on the floor of Clarice's room, terrified and hating the man who had gone from her im-

THINGS FOR EVERY HOUSEKEEPER.

BY RETTA BADGER.

[All feasible suggestions for this page will be very much appreciated. Any pictures of attractive corners of the home or practical things will be very acceptable. How to keep house with little labor is the slogan of today and we would like the ideas of readers on the subject. Any information regarding anything published or illustrated on this page very gladly given by the editor of it.]

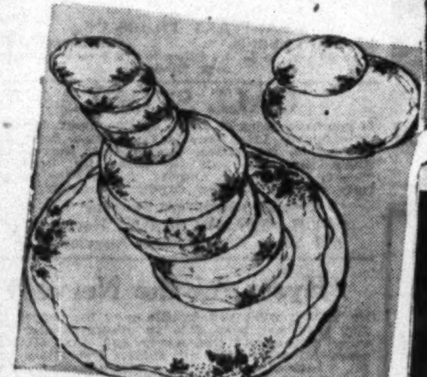
HOW much taller is 7-year-old Ben than 5-year-old Marie and how much taller is Marie herself this year than she was last? I'll wager you marked it on the edge of the closet door, but you see the door has been washed several times in the meantime and now you have no way of knowing. Here is where the measuring stick comes into its own. It is the thing to have to keep a record of the inches that pile on every year. It is an attractive thing, this measuring stick, and if you have no kiddies of your own to measure, why not give one of these rules to the busy mother who would be glad to keep a record of hers? It is five feet long, but is hinged and folds up so that it is easily put away. On one side are marked the inches and on the other a row of quaint little decorative figures. The names of the youngsters and the dates on which they were measured can be put at exactly the correct fraction of the inch.

The Oil Cloth Luncheon Set.

This really is practical. You can make it yourself if you have the least idea of stencilling or if you do not want to take the trouble you can find it in the stores already done in attractive designs. After a meal you have but to wipe off centerpiece and doilies with a damp cloth and they are all ready for use again. Needing no laundering and yet always fresh and inviting-looking, this is a set to make you glad on a hot day when you go to set the table in a hurry and find the luncheon cloths are all soiled.

That Box of Soap.

A box of soap does not sound pretty, but in this instance it surely is. The dainty brocade-covered, cylindrical box and the scented soap are an ideal gift for the prospective traveler; for the bride to take on her honeymoon; for your own house for the guest room; for your young college girl friend or for scores of others that you can call to mind who love dainty toilet accessories.



A sensible and artistic luncheon set of decorated oil cloth.

The Nursery Sand Set.

For the kiddie who is not at the beach or for the nursery in the fall and through the winter months this little sand set will take the restlessness out of many an hour. In the top of the little wicker table is a pan for the sand, and the little one can have it nice and wet and sticky without getting it all over the room. Many a choice bit of modelling can be done there.

PICNIC MEATS.

As a temporary measure we have been asked to eat less beef, but are assured that we may at present eat more pork, and have never been told to go lightly on liver and tongue, so let's adjust home appetites to meet the shipping programme. Summer days call for cold meats for supper and for picnics. Don't depend on tin cans for these meats. You can prepare delightful dishes without drawing on the national reserve of canned meats. It is a good plan, too, to pile up your own reserve of home canned meats.

PICKED TONGUE.

Boil a fresh tongue by placing it in hot water, let come to boil and boil gently for three hours or until tender. When cooked, remove from water, skin, put back into water and let get cold. Slice in thin slices, put one layer of sliced tongue in bottom of an earthenware crock, then one layer of sliced onions, a few thin slices of lemon, salt, pepper, a little sugar and mixed spices. Repeat until all material is used up, having the onion and lemon on top. Cover all with vinegar. If vinegar is too strong, use two-thirds vinegar and one part water.

The stick is decorated.

Watch her grow.

Sand set for the nursery.

PRESSED BEEF TONGUE.

One beef tongue, one veal shank, cayenne, salt, pepper, two tablespoonfuls catsup.

Boil tongue and veal shank together for three hours, putting it on to boil in cold water. This will draw out all of the gelatin of the veal bone. When tender, skin the tongue, cut in slices or put through a coarse meat grinder. Add salt, pepper, cayenne and catsup, put into a mold and cover mixture with the liquid in which it has been boiled, when cold, turn out on a platter, slice and serve.

CALF'S-HEAD CHEESE.

One calf's head, one tablespoon chopped herbs, pepper, salt.

Put calf's head in enough water to cover, let come to a boil and boil gently until meat leaves the bone. Take up with a skimmer, put into an earthen bowl, season with salt, pepper and chopped herbs. Lay a cloth in a colander, put minced meat into it. Fold a cloth over the top, weight down with a plate. When cold, slice and serve with mustard.

POTTED LIVER.

Wash and cut up two pounds of beef liver. Cover with cold water, let come to a boil, and simmer until tender. Press through a potato-ricer; add one-half cupful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and a dash of pepper. Beat the above mixture to a smooth paste. Mince a good-sized onion and a few sprigs of parsley and stir into the mashed liver. Put in jars in a cold place and it will keep for some time.

PORK LOAF.

One pound chopped ham, one pound chopped fresh pork, three tablespoonfuls chopped onion, one tablespoonful salt, one teaspoonful pepper, one-half teaspoonful curry powder, one tablespoonful sage, one egg, one-third cup cream.

Chop meat and onion and mix together. Add egg and cream. Shape into loaf and tie in cheesecloth. Simmer two and one-half hours in three quarts of boiling water, to which one teaspoonful salt and four tablespoonfuls vinegar have been added. Drain, press and cool.

BOTTLED FRUIT JUICES.

Bottling fruit juice is a very simple process and lightens the labor of saving the "perishables."

Useful in Many Ways.—The juice of berries, cherries, apples, pears, plums, peaches, citrus fruits and watermelon may be bottled in season. These juices make delightful summer drinks and sherbets, or they may be combined with fresh fruits in making gelatine desserts. The family will appreciate the delicate flavor of fruit "honeys" on griddle cakes. For this heat the fruit juice with white table syrup. Properly thickened this makes a good pudding sauce.

A dainty box of soap.

These juices may be made into jelly in winter as needed or combined with dried fruits in making preserves.

Save All Bottles.—Small-mouthed bottles can be used for fruit juice, tomato paste and small peppers. Large-mouthed bottles can be used for berries, marmalades and various pickles.

Wash [illegible]ttles, place side-down in vessel and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and boil fifteen minutes. Drain on cloth and fill. Sterilize corks by boiling in water fifteen minutes before using. Invert and drain on cloth.

Preparation.—Cut and crush large fruits, stem grapes, use berries as received, and use a lemon cone to extract juice of citrus fruit. Heat slowly to simmering point. The flavor is finer if fruit is not allowed to boil. Do not heat citrus fruit.

Cherries may be put to a double use. After heating, strain out the cherries to dry and bottle the juice.

Strain fruit through cloth bag and allow the juice to stand in a cool place to settle.

Bottling.—Scald bottles and fill to within one and one-half inches of the top. Put in corks lightly and set bottles on rack in a boiler, or tie down the corks and lay bottles on side with enough water to cover them. A screen at the bottom of the boiler will prevent breaking. Heat the water to the simmering point (180 deg.) and keep at this point thirty minutes.

Remove the bottles, stand on end and dry the cork with a towel. When nearly cold, press cork in firmly and dip top of bottle in melted paraffin or sealing-wax. A simple method of sealing is to press the cork below level of neck of bottle and cover with sealing wax. A sealing wax may be made by melting together equal parts of rosin and beeswax. Store upright in a cool place.

TOP-SHELF RESERVES.

It is not enough to have "reserve on reserves" of substantials canned for winter; housekeepers should add top-shelf "reserves" for special occasions and emergency desserts.

MOBILIZING THE LEATHER INDUSTRY.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

I HAVE figured out the cattle needed to furnish the shoes already supplied to the army. They are so many that if you could bridge the ocean by a roadway forty feet wide all the way from Boston to France the animals would fill the bridge and reach on to the trenches. In this instance the cattle could be driven nose to tail twenty abreast and each score allowed ten or twelve feet of the length of the roadway. By the government specifications we can get only five pairs of shoes out of each hide, and the number of pairs so far made is in the neighborhood of thirty millions.

In addition to this is the great amount of leather needed for saddles and leggings. This means the consumption of millions of cattle, and also multitudinous pigs, for the best leather for saddles and leggings comes from the hog.

And then there are the gloves which the soldiers use. They are made of horse hides and colt skins. There are also the jerkins or vests which the airmen, the navy and even the boys in the trenches must have to keep out the cold. The jerkins are made of sheepskin with the wool on. They are the warmest of the garments possessed by the soldiers.

Furthermore, we must have vast quantities of leather of one kind and another for the harness of the cavalry and straps for the artillery and army equipment. A great deal is used in automobiles, motor trucks and in the machinery that goes to the battlefield. In fact, the war now demands every class of good leather for one purpose or another; and it comes from the ox, cow and calf, the horse and colt, the sheep and the lamb, the goat and the kid, as well as from the water buffalo, and the hog, and even the seal, alligator and kangaroo.

In addition to these items are the many varieties of leather used in the industries making munitions and supplies and all sorts of goods for the army and navy so that skins of every description have a part in the war.

The Enormous Output of the American Tanneries.

ALL of this leather has to be made in the American tanneries. We have hundreds of them and they handle each year the skins from which almost $1,000,000,000 worth of leather products are made. They tan something like 20,000,000 hides to produce the heavy leathers, and about 100,000,000 skins from which the lighter leathers are made. About one-fourth of this leather comes from animals killed at home and the most of it from the meat packing-houses which are today the chief source of domestic supply. The number of cattle so killed would fill a bridge twice as long as the one above mentioned, and in addition we get the skins of more than 5,000,000 calves, 14,000,000 sheep, about 3,000,000 goats and more than 100,000 horses and colts.

All these taken together make a total of about 34,000,000 animals, whereas the number of hides and skins which go through the tanneries are four or five times as great. The balance is imported and we pay for it in the neighborhood of $160,000,000 a year. At least that is what we paid for the amount we imported in 1916, the year before we entered the war. During that year we brought in from abroad the hides of 7,000,000 cattle and those of 4,000,000 calves. The goat skins imported numbered 52,000,000, and the hides of the horses and colts represented an equine population of 500,000. The sheepskins from abroad weighed more than 100,000,000 pounds, and we had more than 1,000,000 pounds of raw skins from kangaroos.

This raw material came from all the countries of the world excepting those with which we are at war and those which no ship can now reach. About one-fifth of the hides were from Argentina and Uruguay. The sheepskins came from Great Britain, China and India and a large number of them were from the flocks of South Africa and New Zealand. The kangaroos come from Australia, for the kangaroo is found nowhere else on the globe. The horse and colt skins were chiefly from South America and British ports.

The raw materials of the leather industry come mostly from the twenty-one countries at war with Germany. The only question of getting the material is ships. There are large supplies of hides in South America. We have to have ships to get them to the United States. There are large supplies in China, and the same is true of Africa and Australia. They have to be sent over thousands of miles of water to our ports.

At present the United States and Great Britain have pooled their interests in the buying of hides. They are competed with by Germany, which is buying raw materials needed for warfare in all the countries of the world. This is notwithstanding they have no means of getting them to Germany. It buys them to keep them out of the hands of its enemies. It may have to sell the hides later, for they will not keep indefinitely, and if so it will be at a high price.

Uncle Sam is Now the Chief Customer of Tanneries.

JUST now the buying of this vast product intended for leather is more or less directly in the hands of the government. Uncle Sam is the chief customer for all kinds of raw materials, and you might think it would be easy for the men furnishing our leather to get a big rake-off from every government order. It is not. The War Department has a Board of Hide and Leather Control, and its dollar-a-year employees include the leading hide and leather men of the country. In Washington is also an organization known as the Tanners' Council, which came together as soon as we entered the war to co-operate with the War Industries Board and the War Department in the purchase of skins both at home and abroad and in all importations of leather from other parts of the world. This council represents many branches of the leather industry. It has no capital stock, and it pays no dividends. It is not a buying or selling organization, and its only object is to furnish the government with information as to the supply of leather materials both at home and abroad and to aid it in placing contracts which will eliminate exorbitant profits and most efficiently mobilize the leather industry for the work of the war. The council costs the government nothing, and it is maintained at the expense of the tanners. It is one of many patriotic institutions of the kind which have come to the support of the country in this time of need.

All of the government orders for leather are fixed upon the advice and information of associations like this, and every attempt is made to get the best material at the lowest possible cost. In order to show you how carefully the government works, I will cite some of the specifications for the leathers required for the shoes of the soldiers. Take the new Pershing boot, of which we are now making a million and a half pairs every month. The requirements for the sole leather demand that it be made of good, sound, dry or green-salted, fine-haired hides. It must be firm, solid and well rolled. It must be properly tanned, filled with good vegetable tanning, and when finished it must be acceptable to the government.

The specifications state just from what part of the animal each kind of leather must come. This leather comes from the bend, a little section of the back and side of the beast, so small that only five pairs of shoes can be cut from each hide. You may have heard of sides of leather. The larger skins are cut along the back into two halves or sides, and each side is divided into the shoulder, the bend and the back. The bend is the best portion of the back behind the shoulder. It makes the firmest and best leather of the entire skin, and is devoted chiefly to the higher grades of shoes. The bend for the Pershing shoe must be not more than fifty-two inches long from the root of the tail and not more than twenty-eight inches wide. The wording is such that there can be no question as to the character of material.

It is the same with the orders for trench shoes which have already been issued. The specifications for them are so many that they would fill about three columns of this newspaper. They relate to the kinds of leather used for the uppers, for the outer soles, middle soles and inner soles. They specify the leather for every part of the shoe, including the heels, "which are to be from oak, union or hemlock sole leather of good quality, free from holes or blemishes which will affect the wear." They specify how the leather is to be cut, and give an infinite detail of technical requirements which would not be understood by the man outside the tannery and the factory.

This letter is to give you some idea of the leather industry which is now so important in this time of war. Leather has always been valuable in warfare. Away back in the Stone Age bowstrings were made of skin, and all the armies of the distant past had leather shields. It was with a sling made of leather that the great Goliath was slain by the boy shepherd David; and, long before that, man had learned how to cure all sorts of skins. We know they made shoes at the time of the pyramids, and that the Egyptians tanned leather long before the Israelites came to toil on the banks of the Nile. In China specimens of leather have been discovered in company with other relics that prove them to be over 3000 years old, and we know that the Romans tanned their leathers with oil, almonds and bark. The first men who came to America found the Indian wearing skins cured with buffalo dung oil and clay; and as soon as our forefathers settled here they began to build tanneries and make leather for sale. Three years after the Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth Rock, Experience Mitchell and Francis Ingalls came from that place to Lynn and Bridgewater and put up tanning establishments. Experience Mitchell called his tannery "Joppa" in memory of the port of Palestine, where Peter stayed overnight at the house of Simon, the tanner, and after what was probably a meatless day had his wonderful vision. You will find all about it in Acts x:5-16.

Shortly after the establishment of these first tanneries Roxbury, now a part of Boston, became a tanning center, and other tanneries were established throughout New England until now there are hundreds of them, and the tanneries, shoe factories and other leather-making plants of one kind or another employ more than 100,000 workmen and produce something like $400,000,000 worth of leather goods per annum. Tanneries were established in the colony of Virginia almost as soon as that of Massachusetts, and as the country grew they spread throughout the United States. They are now everywhere and the establishments making leather goods of one kind or another are in the neighborhood of 7000. The value of the annual product is more than $1,000,000,000 and the capital invested in the industry is perhaps $800,000,000. The business has been widely diversified and it is carried on through a long series of complicated machinery, each branch embracing a vast number of inventions and new processes of one kind or another.

Every army has its own footgear. I have before me photographs of that worn by the armies of Europe now in the collection of the United Shoe Machinery Company of Boston. The shoes and boots weigh from three to five pounds a pair and they take an enormous quantity of leather. The new Pershing shoe weighs about five pounds per pair. In another letter I shall describe it and show how it is made. The hides and skins we use in our shoes for the soldiers are largely imported. Many of them land at New York, although a large number are shipped to Boston and some to San Francisco, New Orleans and Chicago. They go from the ports to the tanneries, where they are cured and made into leathers of one kind or another.

Methods of Tanning Have Certainly Changed in Late Years.

THE methods of tanning have greatly changed within recent years. The tanneries of colonial days were much like a small country grist mill. The tanning mixture was oak and hemlock bark cut from the trees of the forest near by, and ground in a little iron mill moved by a horse or mule. The hides were soaked in water to soften them, and after that the hair and bits of fat were scraped off. They were then tanned by putting them in pits with layers of ground bark between them. After that water was let in, and the tanning material soaked from the bark mixed with the water went into the hide, giving it the preservative quality which makes the difference between raw skin and leather. In such tanning the hides were often allowed to soak for months. When tanned they were taken out, dried and finished as the needs of the market required. The tanneries of today do most of their work the same way, but everything is on a large scale, and modern machinery is used. There are special machines for almost every process and for every variety of tanning. There are mathe way taught by conscienceless quacks. On the other hand they are certainly not a sign of strength, but rather of an over-stimulated condition of the nervous system. That, again, is due to wrong diet, especially the free consumption of phosphate foods, which over-stimulate the nervous system, especially the sexual organs. In this book only two pages are devoted to the important subject of diet, while twenty-one pages are given to exercise.

As I have frequently said, it is as unreasonable to feed a young man freely of foods containing a superabundance of phosphates and expect him to be chaste or temperate, as it would be to place him on a hot stove and tell him not to burn.

Foods containing a surplus of phosphates are, in the order named, fish, eggs, meat, milk and grain. Hence, as I have said, to feed a child such foods as eggs and fish is a crime, and to feed a child overabundantly of cereal foods is little better. A century ago Byron wrote in one of his poems: "Oysters and eggs are amatory food."

The diet should consist largely of vegetables, salad plants and fruits, with a moderate amount of cereals and a little meat if you wish, although that is not necessary. On such a diet, with a proper amount of exercise and bodily cleanliness, such manifestations as those referred to will be exceedingly rare.

This is an excellent book. No greater good could be bestowed on young men, whether in peace or in war, than a copy of it. It may be had for 50 cents of E. A. King, No. 73 South Fifteenth street, San Jose, Cal. Reduced prices are quoted for quantities.

On the Farm.

Farm life should be the most healthful of all occupation. That it is not is due to two causes. First, farmers, as a rule, work too hard and too long. Secondly, most of them eat even less wholesome food than the average city dweller. In California some buy their milk and even their vegetables.

There is a lack of farm labor. There would be more farm labor if farm laborers were treated decently. In California as a rule they are not furnished with common decencies and are asked to live under conditions that no self-respecting man will submit to for any length of time. Where farm employees are treated decently there is no trouble about getting them and keeping them.

Nomadic farm labor is not good, either for the men or for the country. Communities engaged in agriculture or horticulture should encourage the acquisition, by industrious married men, of small pieces of land, on which they could raise most of the food they need for themselves and families, and find occupation during harvest time in neighboring orchards, vineyards and fields.

Tuberculosis and Contagion.

A few weeks ago I mentioned that the California Industrial Commission had handed down a decision that tuberculosis is not contagious.

As reported in the June 15 number of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. George E. Bushnell, Colonel, U. S. Army, retired, read a paper before the annual meeting of the Alabama State Medical Association, April 17, 1918, on the "Contagiousness of Tuberculosis," in the course of which he said:

"It is certainly well to revise our notions as to the contagiousness of tuberculosis. Everybody knows that doctors and nurses labor for years in closest contact with the consumptive, yet it is rare for them to develop tuberculosis in their own persons, and we have all seen many a delicate wife or mother attend a dying husband or son without contracting the disease. We have to admit that many are immune, however great their exposure. But on the other hand, there are cases in which both husband and wife have consumption, or in which those who occupy the same room or work at the same bench with a consumptive finally are found to be themselves infected.

"We do not stop to think that with a disease as common as tuberculosis it must frequently happen that cases of the disease will develop simultaneously, without being derived one from the other, that a man who had or was going to have consumption might marry a wife doomed in advance to the same fate, or that if conditions of health, food, ventilation, etc., were bad enough to break down the health of one worker, they might be bad enough to have the same result with his neighbor. We do not stop to think of these possibilities, but instead we say that consumption is contagious, and the proof of the fact is that our neighbor died of consumption and his wife has caught it from him, the man who worked next to the consumptive in my factory has got the disease from him, etc.

"Much perfectly preventable distress has been due to the alarmists' attitude toward the question of contagion of tuberculosis. The really crucial persecution of the consumptive, who is driven from his house and from his position through the fear that he will affect others, is based on what I must characterize as highly exaggerated notions of the danger of such infection. All admit that some are immune to infection; the question is: Are there others who are readily infected, and is this class a numerous one? The prevailing view is that the danger is so great as to justify the most stringent measures to abate it.

"A few, with whom I must class myself, believe that the danger is very small, so far as infection from adult to adult is concerned, and really demands preventive measures only in the case of young children."

To this "authoritative" statement I add that ailments come from within, not from without—from wrong living, especially wrong eating. Tuberculosis always begins with impaired digestion. It is not caused by germs. The germs do not appear until some time after the disease has developed. These germs are beneficent scavengers. In trying to kill them you kill the patient.

This is true of other diseases, as well as tuberculosis.

It takes "medical science" a long time to recognize these simple facts.

"Absolutely Free."

I was recently looking over one of those cheap publications that for thirty years or more have been turned out monthly by the train-load in the factory of an enterprising firm in the State of Maine. Considering the prices at which these publications are furnished subscribers, I have an idea that they must roll in a log of wood at one end of the machine, and turn out the stitched magazine at the other end.

This particular copy contains no less than twenty-eight advertisements of articles offered free, or "absolutely free." I do not know what the exact difference is between the terms, but after you come to investigate you will find the offers would all better be described as "relatively free." These offerings include such varied things as music lessons, jewelry, phonographs, suits of clothes, flowering bulbs, rifles and dinner sets. In the medical line readers are offered, "absolutely free," cures for catarrh, tobacco habit, heart disease, fat, female ailments, tuberculosis, rheumatism, old age, and a "universal cure for all ills."

Similar advertisements, offering wonderful cures "absolutely free" may be found in almost every daily paper in America. It is certainly astonishing that in this enlightened age there should be found hundreds of thousands or even millions of people who are so astoundingly stupid as to believe for a moment that there are, outside of insane asylums, thousands of men so eager to do their fellow creatures good that they are willing to invest, each of them, thousands of dollars a month in advertising to make their generous "absolutely free" offers known. A mere glance at some of their "mugs," which for some unknown reason they are fond of exploiting, should be sufficient to explode this theory.

If there were no fools there would be no rogues, just as if there was no filth there would be no flies. Beware of all treatments and remedies that are offered "free." They will cost you dearly, both in pocket and in health, before you are through with them.

Napoleon's Diet.

At Waterloo, Napoleon was not himse... He was a sick man. The consequence was that contrary to his usual policy he hesitated for three days—and was lost.

Among other complaints, Napoleon suffered from gravel in the bladder, a direct consequence of his monstrous dietary. The third Napoleon was afflicted with the same painful ailment. At Sedan he must have suffered tortures, riding on a horse. He died, following an operation for this ailment, at Chislehurst in England. The first Napoleon died in St. Helena of cancer.

In "Keeping Fit," Orison Swett Marden writes as follows of Napoleon's abnormal eating habits:

"Napoleon's downfall was largely due to physical deterioration. In youth he had given much thought to diet, as a means of making the most of himself, but the subject was then but vaguely understood. Even as some savages think that the spirit of a conquered foe passes over into them and strengthens them, so he looked upon food. The stronger the animal eaten, the stronger the eater should become. Hence he who would become king of all the Giant-killer Jacks should eat elephants, the largest and strongest of land animals. But elephants were scarce and costly in France, and his purse was not that of a multimillionaire.

"An ox was the nearest substitute he could think of, obtainable at a moderate price, and oxen were slaughtered for the army every day. But even an ox could not be considered a full substitute; so he must exercise care, and eat the strongest part of him, and thus approximate his ideal standard as closely as possible. This strongest of all parts must clearly be the brain, for that rules all the rest of the animal. So he had saved and cooked for him, and daily ate, the brain of an ox."

Dietetic Rules.

Following good rules for eating are by R. L. Alsaker, M.D., in one of his books. They are entirely in accordance with my teachings:

"First: If you have enough pain to complain of, eat nothing. Wait until the severe pain subsides.

"Second: If you are not hungry you are not to eat. Wait until hunger returns. Nature put hunger into the body to notify us of the need of food. When there is no hunger there is no need of food. In fact it is harmful to eat in the absence of hunger.

"Third: Eat very slowly and masticate thoroughly. No matter what the food may be, give it thorough attention in the mouth. Most foods must be well masticated in order to properly digest.

"Fourth: Be moderate in eating (and in all other things.) Eat only enough to nourish you, not enough to make you feel full, listless and dull. If you feel uncomfortable or sleepy immediately after a meal it is a sign of overeating, and overeating is a crime."

died in this country of diphtheria in the year of 1910 according to census report. We feel confident that many could have been saved, in fact they could have been cured with Sagine Antiseptic before the doctor arrived. We have had tests made showing that within three minutes the diphtheria germs were dead when exposed to Sagine Antiseptic. Antitoxine seems to have been of a questionable virtue, that is, there has never been any exact proof that any child was saved, but many died in spite of it and some of them died when it was given to them to prevent development of the disease in the family.—
The diphtheria test was made by a prominent bacteriologist at the request of promient M. Ds. who had surprising results and wished to know how long the germ could live in Sagine Antiseptic.—It is not surpassed in throat trouble.

STILL SCRAMBLING FOR DOLLARS.

BY A BARGAINING YANKEE.

Note: This is the second of a series of two articles telling the dollar adventures of a rolling stone who managed to accumulate considerable moss.

WHEN I quit the insurance company I decided I'd had enough of walking for a while, so what did I do but get married. It looked like an anchor. Incidentally I bought a little grocery store.

You know how it is—likely corner, everything looks pretty, but the minute you get hooked you find that a couple of corners away is a big fellow who has spent his life putting all your predecessors out of business.

I don't know whether I was number thirteen or twenty-three. To the big fellow I was merely another upstart, and not a serious one at that, as I was obviously green. Eventually he put it over on me, for the little fellow never does have a chance. But a lot of funny things happened while it was going on.

From the start it was a case of cutting rates and selling below cost.

I remember we had a battle royal over sugar which finally got to the point where the big fellow was selling for less than I could buy it for. Then came an inspiration.

I got all the small boys in the neighborhood together and sent them to the big store, one at a time, and each bought some sugar. Then I sold it for just what it cost me, the same as the other fellow.

For a long time he couldn't figure how I got my sugar or how I could sell it as low as he did, but finally he got on. But here is where my big laugh came in. It hadn't cost me anything for paper bags, because I'd been getting them from him, along with the sugar.

Funny how the so-called wise person is sometimes so smart that he cheats himself. A chap from somewhere out of town wanted a lot of turnips. I made him a price on fifteen baskets I had and everything was O.K. until he examined them.

"Look at all those little ones," he raved. "I don't want them. Take 'em out!"

I tried to explain that the little ones merely filled in the chinks between the big fellows, but he couldn't see it. Finally I said, "Well, you go through the bunch and pick them out yourself and just buy the number of baskets that are left when you've finished."

So he took me up, and after dumping all the turnips on the floor, filled the baskets to his own satisfaction. There were still fifteen. He bought and paid for them and went away happy, quite unmindful of the fact that he was leaving behind a whole basket of little fellows which had originally been in the baskets and which would have been his if he hadn't been so smart.

A Cloying Catastrophe that Licked Up Money.

WE LIVED up over the store and one night I thought I heard a noise in the cellar. I grabbed a pistol and a light and sneaked down through the store and down the cellar stairs.

Just as I got to the bottom the light blew out, but I could hear someone moving around, so took a chance anyway and stepped into the dark cellar.

Somewhere I could feel, rather than see, something moving. I up with the pistol and fired. There was a scream! Imagine my horror when I heard my wife's voice crying, "Don't shoot, Jed, it's me!"

I floundered forward through the dark. All of a sudden I stopped, feeling deathly sick. Something warm and sluggish was swishing around my feet. I gasped in horror!

I was wading almost knee deep in the life blood of my wife!

At least that's what I thought at the time, but it turned out to be the life blood of the molasses barrel which I'd punctured. Seems my wife had heard the cat moving in the cellar and that's what started all the trouble.

Loss? Not a bit. I sold the molasses right off the floor, to the kids. So many spoonful, for a cent, and made a nice little profit in addition to getting my floor cleaned. I was almost tempted to bust another barrel!

Eventually the big fellow got me, but for some time I'd seen it coming, so I managed to step out with enough to get by on and with the call of Los Angeles once more luring me, I made the transcontinental trip once again.

ah!potatoes

A Potato Plot.

I JUST had to have some money, and was wondering what to do to get it, when a bunch of potatoes in a friend's yard gave me a hunch.

Downtown I beat it and hunted around till I found a grocer who was a bit shy on spuds.

I got him into conversation, and told him I could get him a lot of good potatoes dirt cheap if he would pay cash for them. The price I made him was so good that he simply couldn't pass them up.

He gave me the cash to buy them, and I left my watch for security till I came back with the spuds. Then I chased out to the man who had the potatoes, and knowing him slightly, persuaded him to let me have the potatoes at market price, on a month's credit.

So he sold his spuds, the grocer got them cheap, and I had cash money in my pocket and everyone was happy.

Of course in the end I stood to lose out, but I figured that I could make that money earn enough to make up the difference and put me ahead of the game. It did, too. After all, there's nothing like cash in your pocket, no matter what line you are in.

I Become a Ballyhoo and Meet Henry Ford.

FUNNY how work is thrown at your head when you don't want it. I had all sorts of chances to go into stores and one thing or another, but I had been through a pneumonia siege and the doctor had told me that by all means I should stay out doors, and not walk too much.

They say there's no place where you can do so much thinking as when you're fishing, so I went fishing. Catalina was the place and while I was chasing the coy yellowtail, the hunch came, and along with it, the opportunity.

Briefly, I became the ballyhoo for the Catalina boats that make the cruise around the island, visit the submarine gardens, etc.

You know the sort of personally conducted tour I mean. At first I was a good deal of a joke at the spieling, for I couldn't make much noise, but before many weeks had passed I threw the megaphone away and you could hear me when we were a mile off shore.

After I'd been on the job for a while I had doped up quite a speech, to fit in with all the points of interest we passed or visited on the trip. Before long I had it down to a fine point where it got to be almost a matter of routine. This fact almost caused a riot one day and turned out to be a big laugh.

At one point of the trip, looking in shore, I used to call out, "Ladies and gentlemen, if you will now turn your attention toward the shore, you will see the Catalina branch of the Ford factory."

Everyone was surprised. They'd never heard of this branch, out on an island in the Pacific. They'd look and look. Finally some one would get it and begin to laugh. After a while they'd all tumble.

The branch was a huge pile of tin cans, a regular mountain of them, that have been accumulating for years and years.

Well, one day the boss breezes up, most mysterious, and whispers, "Jed, be sure to cut out that Ford factory joke of yours today."

"Why?" said I.

"Well," the boss explained, "Henry Ford himself is on the boat today and he might not like it."

Sure enough, the auto magnate is sitting right close to me when we leave the dock, and he takes in everything as we go along. I never did see such an observing man as he; interested in everything and chuck full of questions about everything he saw.

And all the time I'm saying to myself, "Forget the tin cans, forget the tin cans."

But when we get to the place I'll be darned if I didn't start the Ford stunt just the same as usual.

I saw the boss making frantic signs at me, and I knew all the time what he meant, but I couldn't stop to save my life. Funny part of it was that Mr. Ford got the joke sooner than anyone else.

Now usually, according to the stories, the big man always sees the funny side, laughs, sets the joker up in business and lets him marry his daughter.

Not Henry Ford, though! He looked at me with a sort of pitying expression and said, "Young man, I want you to understand that the Ford is a good machine."

"Yes, sir," I replied, "I ride in one myself." It was a fib, but what else could I have said to square myself? He seemed to feel all right after that, but when he left Catalina I notice he didn't invite me to accompany him to Detroit.

Making Orange Blossoms Bloom in the Chilly Eastern Weather.

SOMETIMES you get a new hunch on how to make money, from an unexpected source. I got a letter from an eastern friend one day telling me that he was going to get married, and asking me if it wasn't possible to send him some orange blossoms from California. Of course you can get orange blossoms in the East from the florists, but the prices they charge for them are so high that the majority of people can only afford a few sprays.

I fixed him up a box full and shipped them East, but by the time they got there they had dried up and fallen apart. His request had given me a hunch and I began experimenting to see if I couldn't find some way to ship the blossoms without their spoiling. Almost everyone knows that by dipping flowers in parafine they will keep, and this, of course, applies to orange blossoms, but when shipped this way they had little or no fragrance and are not the real thing.

Then I thought of the waxed envelopes that have lately come into use for a lot of different purposes and found that by sealing the fresh blossoms in these waxed envelopes they would go through perfectly.

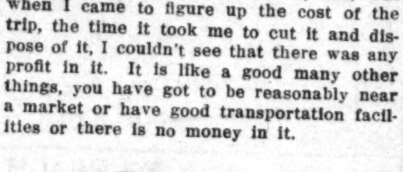
So I spent $25 putting little advertisements in some of the Eastern newspapers and magazines offering sprays of orange blossoms direct from California trees for 25 cents including shipping, and built up quite a mail order business. Everything was going fine, but that happened to be the year the frost hit us so hard, and it knocked the whole scheme higher than a kite.

Having had a taste of being a landlord, being thoroughly imbued with the spirit of California, I made up my mind that I would have to have a little acreage, and together with a friend of mine went up into Antelope Valley to homestead some land.

The whole thing was nothing but sand and Yucca palms and I was stung. One day, walking down Spring street, I happened to mention the matter to a friend of mine and he said, 'If you have any way of getting those trees into town you have got a little gold mine there." I asked him to explain.

Then he tipped me off that this Yucca wood is in great demand for crutches, artificial limbs and a hundred and one other things of that sort, because it is very light and tough and strong.

Imagine me then beating it up to my patch of sage and cactus and coming back with a load of wood. I sold it, too, but when I came to figure up the cost of the trip, the time it took me to cut it and dispose of it, I couldn't see that there was any profit in it. It is like a good many other things, you have got to be reasonably near a market or have good transportation facilities or there is no money in it.



The German Gibralter.

HELGOLAND, THAT GUARDS THE KIEL CANAL.

It is only a quarter of a century ago since Helgoland was an English possession. A British force seized the barren rock in 1807, during hostilities with Denmark, which used to own it, and such was its strategical importance that England insisted on keeping it at the end of the war.

Helgoland is opposite the mouths of the Elbe and Weser rivers, and is twenty-eight miles from the nearest point on the mainland. There are really two islands, and they are important because they command the approaches to Hamburg and Bremen, and the entrance to the Kiel Canal.

The main island is a huge rock about a mile in length by some 500 yards wide, with steep red cliffs that rise 200 feet above sea level. A channel a quarter of a mile wide separates the main rock from an islet called Sand Island or Dunen-Insel. The landing place is at the southeast corner of the island, where a sandy pit called the Unterland is connected with the top of the cliffs, or Oberland, by a long flight of steps and an elevator. There is a resident population of nearly 4000, and during the summer months (in normal times) 40,000 holiday makers visit Helgoland for the bathing from the "dune."

The German occupation dates from 1890. In that year the British and German governments made an agreement by which Germany engaged to recognize a protectorate of Great Britain over the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba, and the dominions of the Sultan of Witu and the adjacent territory up to Kismayu; and Great Britain engaged to cede Helgoland to Germany. The islands were fortified in the days of the British occupation, but the Germans have greatly strengthened the works since they got possession of them. They have replaced the British batteries by armed turrets mounting guns of heavy caliber, and they have spent large sums on the harbor works. Helgoland is one of the strongest strategic defenses of the short but marvelously protected German coast on the North Sea.

The sea, however, is steadily wearing Helgoland away. In 800 A. D., it was 120 miles in circumference. By 1300 it had decreased to a circumference of forty-five miles, and by 1649 it covered only four square miles. At present it is scarcely one third of one square mile in area.

ALFONSO'S READY SILENCER.

Alfonso of Spain was born a king and has reigned all the thirty-one years of his life. There is told an amusing story of a visit he once paid, when he was little more than a boy, to a small Spanish town that is noted for a certain delicious kind of candy that is as sticky as it is palatable.

When the young king arrived, a deputation of the townsfolk waited on him and presented him with a huge box of the famous candy. At the same time a pompous man stepped forward with a large roll of paper in his hand, which he began to open. It was a loyal address, and evidently a very long one.

Now King Alfonso loathes listening to addresses, so as the big man advanced, he handed round the box of candy among the deputation and made the would-be reader take a particularly large piece. Of course etiquette forbade the man to refuse. As he worked his jaws up and down, his teeth stuck in the candy, and he could no more have read the address than he could have flown into the air.

"Is our client beautiful?"

"I guess you'd call her beautiful as a point of law. Still, she's no chicken. Better pick out a jury of near-sighted men."—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

WHEN the ancient Romans wished to work off the effects of gross gluttony they took an emetic, while the modern Britisher takes a "constitutional." The tournaments and other rough play of the middle ages and the following of the hounds by the modern English squire are alike attempts to compensate for gluttony at the table. This practice is doubly wasteful. It exhausts vitality in overeating, and again in over-exercising.

Much harm may be done by trying to cultivate big muscles, where there is no foundation for such a growth. Several years ago, in the gymnasium of one of the leading Los Angeles clubs, I saw several well-known citizens, who were lean, dyspeptic, and nervously exhausted, doing their daily stunt of boxing, immediately before lunch, under the eye of an instructor who should have known better. What these men needed was to lie down in a quiet place and close the eyes for twenty, or at least ten minutes, or better still to sleep before eating. Their vitality was already exhausted, yet they proceeded to exhaust it further.

We hear much of the virtues of exercise, but little about the value of rest. While in motion or when sitting still and using our brains we are continually expending vitality. This vitality is renewed during sleep. Therefore, when our vitality is depleted, we should sleep and rest as much as possible. A rest in bed, where quiet and plenty of fresh air may be obtained, with a little light literature is better for an enervated person than running off to the beach or mountains.

Give the overworked stomach a rest also, taking, at the most, only a little fruit juice, and thoroughly cleanse the colon, which in most cases is the seat of your troubles. For run down, nervously exhausted people to take up physical exercise is about as sensible as it would be for a bankrupt to increase his expenditures. What he should do, of course, is to cut down his expenses and increase his income. Every movement you make, every word you utter, every thought you think involves an expenditure of vitality.

Another foolish and harmful superstition is the advice repeated parrot-like, by so many writers on health subjects, that a person when mentally weary should, as a change, take physical exercise. On the contrary, so close is the connection between mind and body, that when one is weary mentally, there is also physical weariness, and vice versa. This is why laborers and farmers, who overwork physically, can seldom concentrate their minds in thought. When your mind is weary, what you need is absolute rest, for mind and body alike.

If a person eats only sufficient to furnish heat and force, and to repair the small daily waste of the body, he needs little exercise to be healthy and efficient. He has little waste to eliminate. Those who do manual labor and women who do their own housework get enough exercise in their daily round, if it is not too monotonous and if they practice maintaining a correct position. Sedentary persons should walk a few miles every day, and take a few minutes' exercise for the upper part of the body on rising, also, if they have an opportunity, once or twice during the day, being careful not to exercise when they are tired. There are simple and inexpensive exercisers to affix to a door frame, from which you may get excellent results.

Not one person in fifty will keep up for more than a few weeks the long, complicated systems of exercise that some health publications and "Sunday sups" are fond of publishing, along with equally tiresome "beauty hints," for what reason the Lord only knows. The most important thing about exercise is that it should be regular. Five minutes of movements performed daily is much better than an hour's exercise two or three times a week.

Exercise should be mainly devoted to twisting and bending the trunk of the body, so as to make the spine limber. This is of much greater importance than development of the legs and arms, which usually obtain a fair amount of exercise during the day.

Add to this a little garden work—if you have a garden, as everyone should—and that will be all the exercise you need, with fresh air day and night, and natural breathing to keep the body in good condition. Provided as above stated you do not overeat, as about ninety-nine people out of a hundred do, although most of them would indignantly deny the imputation. Remember, however, that when you do overeat, exercise is better than physic.

"War Bread."

Following is another confirmation of what I have said in regard to wholemeal bread. It is an extract from a letter from Harry A. Williams, war correspondent of the Los Angeles Times at the front:

"On reaching the American front, where the only place to dine is with the soldiers, I was delighted to learn that the troops are served with white bread.

"Then to my chagrin, after snapping a large mouthful out of a slice that was as light and delicious as a piece of angel-food cake, I found that I didn't care particularly for white bread. Something seemed lacking. For one thing, it seemed comparatively tasteless.

"There is no better white bread in the world than that turned from the ovens of the army bakers. So the fault was not there. War bread, to which I had become accustomed in London and Paris, simply hit the spot better. Not only is war bread more palatable, once you get the habit, but undoubtedly it is more healthful.

"Incidentally, I recalled while at Camp Kearny having received a marked paper containing an article on the evils of war bread, how it lacked nourishment and tended to tuberculosis, etc. At the time I suspected the sender of being a pro-German who desired to create sentiment against it, and in that way hamper the country's food conservation campaign.

"Doctors claim that war bread has resulted in a better standard of general health. They say that few of those who use it suffer from constipation, which is the origin of most illness.

"Possibly one good result will be the general and permanent use of war bread. In that event, millions more can be fed from the same amount of grain, and there would be little excuse for actual hunger any place in the world."

The fight against natural bread is not so much a question of pro-Germanism, as of organized opposition on part of American millers, who have invested millions of dollars in expensive machinery to extract the most valuable and nourishing part of the wheat berry, selling some of it under fancy names, while other parts are sold to cattle raisers.

If the war keeps on much longer we shall have to come to the use of entire wheat bread. Why not now?

The idea that natural bread, containing the whole of the grain, on which hundreds of millions have lived for thousands of years, is unwholesome, is too absurd to be worthy of comment.

The Nature Cure.

The Nature Cure requires patience, perseverance and self-denial. That is one reason why so few turn to it until they have vainly tried many other illusive "short cuts." And that is what makes cures effected in this way the more remarkable.

Those cured by the Nature Cure are largely composed of "hopeless cases" who have been given up by physicians of the "regular" school.

Surgery.

A woman correspondent, who submitted to an operation for a dislocated hip, writes:

"Now, are you not willing to admit that sometimes operations are a necessary evil?"

This correspondent has not read my writings carefully. Over and over again have I drawn attention to the difference between constructive and destructive surgery, the former being necessary and admirable, while the latter is harmful and damnable.

Carrots.

A physician told an anemic young woman to take claret regularly. Misunderstanding him, she lived largely on carrots. When she met him again she told him that his prescription had helped her—that the carrots had greatly improved her condition. "Carrots," said he, "I didn't tell you anything about carrots."

When she explained, being an exceptionally sensible physician, he told her to go on eating carrots.

Carrots, like all vegetables, contain a good share of potassium, which counteracts the acid of the blood caused by too much meat and cereals. Otherwise, carrots are not high in percentage of mineral elements, as, compared with other vegetables. They are exceeded in mineral content by green leaves like spinach, cabbage and lettuce, and among the roots by radishes.

Carrots are not only rich in potassium but also in sodium, while the phosphorus content is relatively small. Thus they are soothing to the nerves. They are low in calcium, therefore a good food for the aged.

To get the most benefit from this or any other vegetable they should be eaten raw. Carrots may be grated or scraped, and added to a salad.

In my youth, in England, old women told children to avoid raw vegetables because they would give them worms. As physicians in regard to germs, they confounded cause and effect. The mineral elements in vegetables induce intestinal worms to vacate the premises.

Sex Advice for Young Men.

"Clean and strong," a little volume on the sex question by E. A. King of San Jose, Cal., and F. B. Meyer of London, Eng, has just been issued in a "war edition." It was first published in 1909 and was the natural outgrowth of another little book that became famous through a review in the "Care of the Body" on June 8, 1902. E. A. King at that time lived in Marysville, O. and wrote a small pamphlet entitled "Helps to Health and Purity" to use in connection with some lectures he was giving to young men on the subject of sex. As a result of this notice in the Care of the Body Mr. King received a great many orders from all parts of the country.

The edition of this little book in pocket form is intended primarily for circulation among American soldiers. The first part, dealing with the physical side of the question, is by Mr. King; the second part, on the spiritual end, by F. B. Meyer.

Mr. King deals with the mental question, the abuse of leisure hours, dangers that confront youths in the formative period, the villainies of quack doctors, the perils of venereal diseases and many other things that young men should know.

There is one statement in the book that I must criticise, Mr. King says. "Every young man should know that an occasional involuntary emission of semen is not a disease at all, but rather a sign of virility."

This is misleading. It is true these symptoms do not indicate a "disease," in

RUPTURE HAPPINESS

I DON'T often give a free "poof" in these columns, but I am not afraid to do so, when I consider it my duty.

To those of my readers who may be so unfortunate as to be suffering from rupture, I recommend that they should, without fail, go and consult Mr. Benjamin. He will do them good. I know it, because he has helped relatives and friends of mine.—[Editor Harry Ellington Brook, N.D., in "Brain and Brawn."

Gentlemen:

Having suffered for years with Rupture, I purchased all kinds of Trusses, etc., not finding one which would prevent the Rupture from coming out. I am delighted to tell you that I have only worn your Combination Suspensory and Rupture Appliance about two weeks, and I have been the happiest of mortals, as I have been entirely free from pain, the Rupture having been held in, and I have such a feeling of security that I am confident the opening will be healed. I might add that I have done considerable gardening and other hard work, hoeing, lifting, etc., which I could not do before wearing your Combination Suspensory and Appliance.

What a blessing it will be when those suffering from Rupture become acquainted with your method.

Yours very truly,

Dear Sirs:—

I now have worn your Patent Combined Suspensory and Rupture Appliance a sufficient length of time to be enabled to truthfully say that I expect in the near future to dispense with it, as I now enjoy so much comfort, I hardly know that I have it on. I deem it the best $5.00 investment I ever made. Refer would-be customers or like sufferers to me, in person or by letter, will be pleased to be of help to them.

Yours very truly,

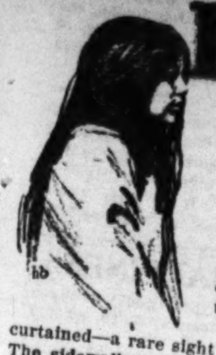
RACIAL TRAITS AT BROWNSON HOUSE

BY T. B. HANDY.

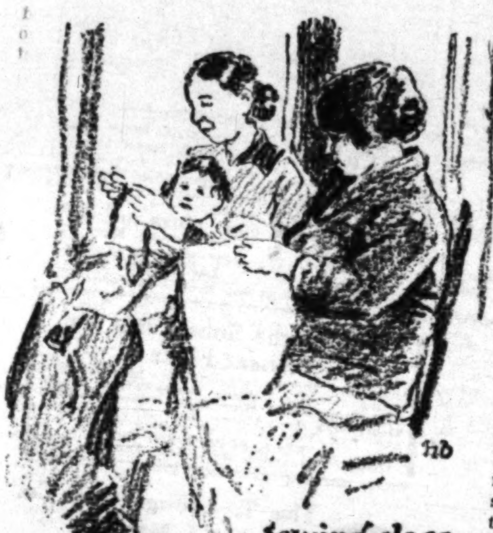


IN THE heart of Los Angeles' Little Mexico, in the depths of the city's melting pot, is a neat little cluster of houses surrounded by a garden. It is the center of the foreign colony, squatted as it is at No. 711 Jackson street, among the city's big black gas tanks where the air is continually filled with the grime of industry.

The windows are curtained—a rare sight in the neighborhood. The sidewalks are always clean, ditto rare. This is Brownson House, the mainstay of some two thousand poor each week. It is the nucleus of the settlement-cell and presents an odd contrast to the dingy ramshackles that surround and flank it.

The patrons are members of the community for blocks around. Ninety per cent. of them are Mexicans—faithful, trusting, gentle, simple, ignorant Mexicans. Not the sort of people that one hears of as "greasers" or as bloodthirsty, nor such as are supposed to be ninety-nine per cent. inspiration and the rest imagination.

They are just simple and ignorant and faithful and likeable, if one only takes the time to get acquainted with them. Every day they come, bringing with them their numerous children, their humble simplicity, native grace, inborn courtesy and eager willingness. They are never refused a hearing.



Sewing class, Brownson House.

National Characteristics of the Many Races Who Come to Brownson.

GETTING the foreigners to come has been the settlement house's greatest problem. As for the Mexicans, they are reserved and it is difficult to gain their confidence. They are naturally superstitious and suspicious and entertain a feeling that they are given the worst of a somewhat bad bargain in this country. If you talk to any of the wives and mothers you will soon learn that the marido is working for the lowest wage of anyone in the shop. All Mexicans have a sort of natural liking for the Americans, but when their trust is betrayed or they feel that they are downtrodden that affection soon turns to smoldering hate.

Nevertheless the Mejicanos are trustful, once their confidence is gained. Juana proved this. She was a little nut-brown, frail woman who had been deserted by her husband and left with a sick child for whom she was quite unable to care. Luis, the child, was the victim of an incurable malady since birth and hopelessly ill. Some time ago he lost the use of his hands, and undoubtedly his weak mind is gone by this time if, indeed, he himself is alive. Juana had always cared for him as best she could, and during the years of his illness has laid to rest two other children, both of them victims of the same dread disease.

During all this time she has steadfastly refused to let the county care for her Lui-site, and even though the city nurse was a frequent visitor and had been kind to her, Juana could in no wise be prevailed upon to let "them," as she called the authorities, even visit the sufferer.

The other day, however, the city nurse stopped at Brownson House on her round of calls to chat with Miss Mattie Labory, the chief settlement worker, who is the friend of the entire neighborhood. After the conversation Miss Labory visited Juana and spoke to her in Spanish. The mother seemed convinced and finally, between a few tears, said that the ambulance might call manana, if they would promise to feed Luis with a spoon and wouldn't hurt him.

Juana was only one example of the many faithful wives who are deserted by their Mexican husbands.

"Isn't this marital irresponsibility a Mexican national characteristic?" the writer asked Miss Labory.

"No," was the reply. "They are no more irresponsible than any other man. Only more ignorant. They can't read or write; they have no work and there is always the inevitable large family, which has to be fed. The husband, in search of work, will wander for miles away from home. As he is unable to write and is too far to return, if he happens to have landed a job, he naturally conveys the impression that he has deserted his family. At least they all think so until he turns up again some time. Maybe he will have a few dollars in his pocket and maybe not. He has had to pay all his living expenses and the family have been fed and clothed by charity. Nevertheless the man has meant well, but he is simply too ignorant to know better."

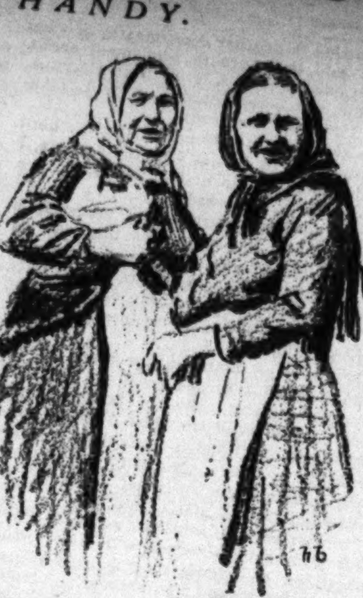
And so, she explained, that is another of the great problems of settlement work—the education of the neighborhood.

Aside from the Mexicans the remaining 10 per cent. of the "clientele" of Brownson House is composeed of Poles, Japanese and Russians. Of course the Poles aggregate the majority. According to those who work among them, those people are high-strung, intelligent, fiery and unusually quick to comprehend. Nearly all are natural-born artists of some sort, and a number have brought exquisite specimens of their fancy work to the home. One old Polish woman has become an expert at manufacturing rag dolls from discarded scraps and has managed to earn a fair living for herself.

The Japanese, on the other hand, are a difficult problem in that they are reticent and retiring. Japanese women seldom, if ever, leave their home. If the baby is sick and they are convinced that it needs outside care it is nearly always the father who carries it to the doctor. Then, too, the Japanese are prone carefully to guard their own people, and it is only with the greatest effort that they are persuaded to receive care from hands other than those of their own kind.

The Russians, as seen through the eyes of Brownson House, are a rough, shaggy, somewhat backward sort of people, usually superstitious and as a general rule very religious. Most of them are exceedingly poor and just as trustworthy. They are rather carefree and few are conscientious objectors to crowded home conditions. Contagious diseases do not seem to frighten them, and it is not uncommon to find a tuberculosis patient sleeping in the same bed with perhaps one or two children. Comfort to them means a full stomach and a warm room, and a few gaudy rags spell luxury. Their one besetting sin is their clannishness and their adherence to a peculiar form of Catholic religion. A great many ignore the existing marriage license ordinance and quite often a young couple are found living together, perfectly married in their own eyes and by their religion, and yet lawbreakers according to American dictate.

Some time ago a property owner in the neighborhood of the Amelia-street school was on the verge of tearing down an old, dirty tenement building that he had purchased for a song. Slightly previous to the coming of the wreckers a party of Japanese approached him and requested that he rent them the structure. Someone told the Brownson House authorities about the building and, as the position seemed favorable, an agent was sent to rent it. It seemed that she had come to secure it for habitation by several Mexican families.



Russian Women.

The owner shook his head. Mexicans were too dirty, he said, and besides he wanted to clear the property and put up a store.

The worker explained that the Mexicans had no particular aversion to the use of soap and water, particularly if there was a place to bathe.

"But," said the man, "the Japs will plant a garden."

"So will our Mexicans," was the reply. "They will also hatch chickens and they might raise a duck or two. At any rate they won't hurt the property."

And so, on the strength of the argument, the owner leased the property to Brownson House. The ancient tenement was at once repaired and painted. The yard was cleared of rubbish and new glass was put in the windows to replace the broken fragments

SECRETARY OF WAR BAKER, speaking on patriotism, advises that every man serve his country and show his patriotism in the manner for which his is best fitted. Illustrating his point, he said:

"It reminds me of one of our young officers, who was attending a show at which the national anthem was sung, and failed to join in the chorus.

"Why didn't you join in the refrain?" demanded his friend. "Have you no affection, no respect for the song?"

"Certainly!" responded the officer, "and I show it by not trying to sing it."

Contagious.

Since the war started, the word spy has been on every lip and what with intelligent departments in every branch of the service, it is small wonder that secrecy, spies and plots have become quite the fad. Illustrative of the contagion, Postmaster-General Burleson tells of a society matron who asked her new maid to mail some letters for her and later on discovered that some of the envelopes had not been addressed.

"Why did you post them, when you saw that they had no addresses," she demanded.

"I thought you didn't want anyone to know who they were for," was the reply.

Taken at His Word.

It is a common thing to encounter clerks and secretaries who are more important than their bosses, typified in the age-old story of the woman who asked "Who is that gorgeously uniformed man over there?" and was answered "that is the general's secretary." "And who is the plain little man?" "The general," was the reply.

And now comes Champ Clark with a modern version in the person of a Congressman's secretary gifted with extremely supercilious manners. Once when a visitor ventured a protest and tried to put him in his proper place the secretary drew himself up and said "I want you to understand that I'm the big gun around here."

"In that case, I'll discharge you," cut in the Congressman, who chanced to come in at the opportune moment.

Couldn't Feaze Her.

Society is having a delightful giggle over a story now going the rounds and of which Mrs. Mackay is heroine. Seems that with several other prominent women of the 400, she went in for farmeretting on Long Island, and the brigade was assigned to a farm whose owner had always had a grudge against the rich. He thought that now was his opportunity and approaching Mrs. Mackay said "the first thing I'd like you to do is clean out the pigsties. Think you can manage it?"

Imagine his amazement and chagrin when the multi-millionairess social arbitrator smiled and cooed, "Certainly, at home I always attend personally to cleaning out the bird cage."

* * *

Outclassed.

It was the first time Richard's father had seen "her" and they were talking things over.

"So my son has proposed to you," he said, "and been accepted. I think you might have seen me, first."

She blushed sweetly as she replied; "I did, but I think I prefer Richard.'

* * *

Easy to Believe.

Carl Junck, speaking recently in Chicago, said; "The German people are sick of the war. In a recent costume play in Berlin, a bit of dialogue made a great hit. The hero says to the heroine;

"Why do you look so happy? Is it because I love you, darling?"

"No, dearest one," answers the heroine, "it is because we are living in 1819 instead of 1918."

* * *

Bound to Win.

Charles M. Schwab, who recently came to the Coast in the interests of shipbuilding, declares that if for no other reason, America will win the war because of its remarkable faculty for making the most of every reverse. Illustrating his point, he said:

"I can't help calling to mind the farmer who after prohibition hit Michigan, discovered that by remaining in his silo for ten minutes after fermentation began, he could accumulate a comfortable jag by inhaling the alcoholic fumes. The last I heard, he was charging 25 cents admission to town folks to stay ten minutes in his silo, and was rapidly getting rich."

Couldn't be Trapped.

The recent troubles in Ireland have brought into international prominence Sir Francis Hopwood, who was recently made a British peer. During the troubles he was called upon to examine a witness in a case where the bailiff had rejected a tenant, and one of the witnesses testified that the officers had broken into the cabin with a beam that looked like a battering ram.

Sir Francis saw an opening, or thought he did— "Have you ever seen a battering ram?" he asked.

"I have," replied the witness.

"Where?" snapped Sir Francis.

"In London."

"Whereabouts in London?" persisted Sir Francis with a smile of incredulity.

"In South Kensington Museum."

Too Much of a Good Thing.

During his recent visit to Los Angeles, Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts had occasion to comment on the politeness of the hotel employees here, adding, that he supposed it was because they were so used to catering to tourists. He particularly commended our telephone service, but added that when it came to real politeness the telephone system in Japan had the world beat. According to the bishop a Japanese phone conversation runs something like this:

"What number does the Honorable Son of the Moon and Stars desire?"

"One, two, three."

Silence. Then the exchange resumes; "Well the honorable person graciously forgive the inadequacy of the insignificant service and permit this humble slave of the wire to inform him that the never-to-be-sufficiently-censured line is busy."

* * *

The Awakening of Woman.

Mr. Growler had been scolding his 6-year-old daughter. She listened attentively and when he had finished looked him haughtily in the eye.

"Don't think, papa, that just because you married mamma, you have a right to be ruue to all women."

* * *

Not a Genius.

Robert Rendel, an actor who has been doing his bit by entertaining the boys at the various training camps, tells one on a recruit being examined by the surgeon.

"Have you any organic trouble?" inquired the examiner.

"No, sir, not a bit," replied the recruit. "I ain't a bit musical!"

Couldn't Believe It.

Speaking of politeness, Cardinal Gibbons used to tell one concerning a darky maid, who, after working in numberless hotels, boarding-houses and private families, finally obtained a situation in a private family where peace reigned. One day she said to her mistress:

"Excuse me, ma'am, but am dis all ob yo family?"

"Yes, Dinah, why do you ask?"

"Well, nobody would a thought it. They act so nice to each other I done begun to s'pect they was perfect strangers."

* * *

He Knew.

"I want to put these papers where no one will find them," said Senator Lodge to his secretary.

"You might send them up to the draft department and have them put in the simplified index," murmured his secretary.

Kultur.

Says Gen. Squier, head of the signal service, in Washington, "The Germans have a detestable habit of accompanying the vilest actions with the most canting homilies. They remind me of the second-hand dealer who said to his son;

"Tommy, I made a mistake in giving change to the customer who bought the Palm Beach suit. I gave him a dollar too little. This teaches us, Tommy, my boy, that we should always try to profit by our mistakes."

Useless Expense.

Dr. Robert Forman Horton was commenting to his flock on the craze some people have for acquiring bargains by taking advantage of army drafts. "There is no economy in buying things just because they're cheap, if they are of no use to you," he agued and added. "It reminds me of a poor parishoner I had once, who bought a piano because it was marked down to $40.

"Can anyone in your family play it," I asked.

"Oh no" was the cheerful reply, 'but my niece is coming out from town next week to show us how it works."

* * *

Feminine Gender.

Wife: Is there any difference between a fort and a fortress?

Husband: Not much, except, of course, that a fortress must be harder to silence.

* * *

Had His Number.

"Germany will sing very small, very small in the end, but we'll answer him like the judge." The speaker was Provost-Marshal-General Crowder.

"The kidnaper stood before the judge, wiped his eyes on his sleeve and blubbered:

"'Your Honor, I'm down and out.'

"'No, no, my man,' corrected the judge. 'You're down, but not out. You won't be out for seven years.'"

* * *

The Limit.

Congressman Rainey handed the food price boosters a rap the other day.

"They remind me," he said, "of the quarryman, who was noted for his meanness. On one occasion an employee was blown into the air, but fortunately was not killed. When he came to get his pay from the cashier, he found that some of his time had been deducted.

"Can't help it," the cashier explained, "the boss said to take out the time you were up in the air."

* * *

What was the Use?

Gordon Long, formerly of Universal City and now at Camp Lewis, narrates an amusing incident in a letter to Henry McCrae. He writes;

"I was on guard duty one night when a chap came along and following the usual procedure I cried 'Halt, who goes there?'

"'Friend,' answered the rookie.

"'Advance, friend, and be recognized,' I shouted, according to regulations.

"'Aw, you wouldn't know me. I've only been here two days.'"

His View Point.

The other day, during the round-up of the work-if-you-can't-fight boys, the slacker squad tried to ease the proposition into the minds of the idlers by explaining that the war was going to make the world a better place to live in.

"Betcher life it will, boss" exclaimed a spellbound listener. "Already th' wimmen are beginnin' to do all the work!"

* * *

The General's Retort.

Sir Henry Wilson, unlike many soldiers, has a ready tongue, and is more than a match for the average politician.

His encounter with an eminent if not too tactful statesman at an early stage of the war is historic. The latter thought fit when dining with our commander-in-chief in France to observe to the company; "Is it not curious that so great a war should have produced no great soldier?"

Gen. Wilson replied: "Is it not, sir, even more curious that so great a crisis in Europe should have produced no European statesman?"

* * *

Priceless Treasure.

Speaking recently on the question of regulating food prices, Mr. Hoover said that there was very little kick concerning increased prices for luxuries. "In this respect," he said, "we are a good deal like the Wisconsin man who married a deaf mute and gave the minister a thousand dollars for a marriage fee."

"Why did you do that?" a friend asked.

"I figured it was a very cheap price to pay for a deaf and dumb wife," he replied.

* * *

Safety in Silence.

Commenting on the many and varied excuses offered for evading the draft, Provost-Marshal-General Crowder remarked that most of the would-be slackers come to grief through talking too much.

"They remind me of the young fellow who, on the spur of the moment, asked a girl to marry him.

"'Yes,'" replied the girl.

"After waiting for five minutes for him to say something more, she said:

"'Well, what have you got to say?'

"'Nothing,' replied the young man. 'I've said too much already.'"

* * *

Fifty-fifty.

Nat Goodwin is blamed for the following: John's wife never knows where he is after nine in the evening, but neither does he.

* * *

Promptly Accepted.

Examining Officer: And why did you assault the sentry in this brutal fashion?

Private Hank (late of the gashouse gang:) Well, de guy says he challenges me, so I bust him one on de jaw.

* * *

Most Likely.

Mrs. Borden Harriman, the sociology worker, was talking about schools for girls.

"I don't like the ultra-fashionable kind," she remarked. "They [illegible] a girl in everything but education.

"Two housemaids were talking once about their mistress's daughter who had just returned from one of these schools.

"'What's the new course Miss Marie is taking,' asked the first maid.

"'I think,' said the second, 'I think I heard her say it was cosmetics.'"

* * *

Her One Fault.

The late Mayor Mitchel of New York, who met his death on on aviation field, was a staunch supporter of President Wilson. He said once;

"President Wilson's war policies are so excellent that, even when fault is found with them, the fault always turns out to be a virtue.

"It's like the case of the hen. The prospective buyer said to the prospective seller;

"'Is she a perfect bird? Has she no faults at all?'

"'Yes, she has one fault,' was the reluctant admission. 'She will persist in laying eggs on the Sabbath.'"

* * *

The Army Discovered.

"One of the great difficulties we have to face in our recruiting is the fact that everyone wants to be an officer," remarked Secretary Baker at a dinner party. "When some one steps up and says, 'I want to be a private,' it's a relief. All of which recalls the story of a group of veterans who gathered in a Washington hotel Memorial Day and who were discussing a battle. Finally a little man spoke up.

"Gentleman,' he said, 'I happened to be there, and I think I can settle the point at issue.' And he did.

"The proprietor, much impressed, asked him 'what was your rank in the army?'

"'Private' was the prompt response.

"A short time afterwards, the 'private' asked for his bill.

"'Not a cent, sir,' said the proprietor. 'I wouldn't dream of it. Do you know, you're the first private I ever met!'"

Why Suffer?

"You Americans are great on quantity rather than quality," remarked an English officer visiting on this side for recruiting purposes, and illustrated his point thus:

"I was stopping with a friend whose wife always did her marketing over the phone. One day I asked her why.

"'Oh,' she replied, 'I can't bear to see how little I'm getting for my money.'"

HOW THE ANCIENTS WROTE LETTERS

BY ERNEST ELVA WEIR.

ALL THE wisdom of the past, garnered by patient toil and effort—all the wealth of experience gained by generations of men through alternate defeat and triumph—all this belongs to us by right of inheritance. This is what Tennyson meant when he gave expression to the noble and inspiring thought that we are the heirs of the ages.

Future generations will learn of and benefit by man's successes, failures, achievements and conquests of today through the discovery and perfection of the art of paper-making. But what agencies linked the dim past to the time when paper came into existence, thereby preventing our rich inheritance from being scattered to the four winds of heaven? A brief review of this question is interesting, instructive and well worth while.

In all ages, man has always had an instinctive desire to perpetuate his knowledge and achievements, and to this fact we are indebted in large measure for the wealth that is ours today. Before the making of a permanent record was ever dreamed of, the story of current events was passed down from father to son and from generation to generation. But ignorant minds and treacherous memories combined to make tradition untrustworthy, and as the race advanced in civilization, they realized the need of something more accurate and lasting than mere oral testimony.

Men then sought help from nature and found in huge rocks and boulders a means of perpetuating notable events in the histories of nations and the lives of individuals. From the commemoration of great deeds and solemn covenants by the setting up of stones, it was but a step to the hewing of obelisks, upon which the early races carved their hieroglyphs—rude representations of men, birds, plants and beasts. These slender shafts of stone were raised as early as 4000 years before Christ, and while most of them have crumbled to dust, the British Museum is in possession of one shaft of black basalt that is in perfect condition. It is covered with writing and basreliefs. In Egypt, these hieroglyphs were used almost exclusively for religious records—a purpose suggested by the derivation of the word itself which comes from the Greek ieros, a priest, and glyphs, a carving. Perhaps it was this fact that later suggested the temples, considered as sacred places, as especially fitted to become the repositories of the records that were to preserve for coming generations the deeds of kings and priests. Be that as it may, the obelisk was superseded by stone panels in the temple walls, as well as slabs or tablets, on which were graven the pictured stories of great events.

Clay Made an Easy Writing Material and Permanent.

A REAL advance, however, was made in the discovery of soft clay as an easier and cheaper method of writing, and this was used by private individuals not only for literary and scientific writings, but in their business transactions as well. After being duly inscribed, these clay tablets were baked either in the sun or by artificial heat, and made a very enduring record. In fact, many that have been dug from ancient ruins are even now in a remarkable state of preservation, bearing letters and figures as clear as any of the inscriptions on marble, stone or metal that have come to us from the days of ancient Greece or Rome. A faithful transcript of the daily lives and occupations of the people of Assyria and Chaldea can today be read from tablets of clay by those who have the key. Records of almost every sort on indestructible terra cotta have been unearthed from the ruins of ancient Nineveh and Babylon. The includes bank notes and notes of hand, deeds of property, public records, statements of private negotiations and memoranda of astronomical observations. One of the largest collections of these clay writings is now in the British Museum and was taken from a great edifice in Assyria which was probably the residence of Sennacherib.

A somewhat strange variation of these tablets, in use among the Assyrians at a very early date, was an exceedingly fine terra-cotta prism having either six or eight sides. After having been inscribed with accounts of the notable events in the lives of the Assyrian kings, interspersed with numerous invocations, these prisms were frequently deposited at the corners of temples. Apparently the custom was similar to that followed at the present day, and the ancient Assyrian tablets no doubt served the same purpose as the records, newspapers and documents that are now deposited in the corner-stones of public or other important buildings. The prisms used as tablets varied in length from eighteen inches to three feet, and were completely coverd with small writing. In fact, upon a prism found in the ruins of the ancient city of Ashur are inscriptions so crowded that there are thirty lines in a space of six inches. The prism recites the valiant deeds of Tiglath-Pileser I who reigned from 1120 to 1100 B. C. and undertook campaigns against forty-two other nations and their kings.

Rawlinson's "Ancient Monarchies," in an account of the writings that have come down to us from the earliest days of the world's recorded history, has this to say: "The clay tablets are both numerous and curious. They are of various sizes, ranging from nine inches long by six and a half wide to an inch and a half long by an inch wide, or even less. Sometimes they are entirely covered by writings, while at others they exhibit on a portion of their surface impressions of seals, mythological emblems and the like. Some thousands have been recovered. Many are historical and still more are mythological."

The pulp beater in a modern paper mill.

These clay tablets were almost universally used in writing and drawing, and we read that the prophet Ezekiel, when dwelling with "them of the captivity at Telabib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar," was commended to "Take thee a tile and lay it before thee, and portray upon it the city, even Jerusalem." (Ezekiel iv.1.)

We get a glimpse of another side of that ancient life in a tablet of Nile clay, preserved in the British Museum, which is one of the earliest specimens of writing now in existence. It is a proposal of marriage and was written about 1530 B. C., more than 3400 years ago, by a Pharaoh asking the hand of a daughter of the Babylonish king. Forty years later, in 1491 B. C., the Ten Commandments were graven on tablets of stone.

Homer Wrote on the Skins of Serpents.

OTHER materials used in the early efforts of men to "preserve our inheritance" were gold and silver plates, the skins of animals tanned to a sort of leather, ivory, wood and bark of trees. The works of Homer, preserved in one of the great Egyptian libraries in the days of the Ptolemies, were written in letters of gold on the skins of serpents. In the early days of Rome, the great happenings of the day were engraved on wooden plates and exposed in the Forum, the center of the city's life. Later, wax was used to form a surface on the wood, thus admitting of corrections, and by scrapings and additions, these wooden tablets could be used as often as desired. Then came a real advance in the [illegible] olive, palm, poplar and other trees. These were prepared by being cut into strips, soaked in boiling water and then rubbed over wood to make them soft and pliable.

Introduction of Papyrus Grew Out of a Greater Need.

THE people of the earth, however, were increasing in numbers, as well as advancing in the arts and sciences. The need of more adequate methods of recording history was apparent and it was met by a water plant growing in forestlike profusion on the banks of the Nile. This plant was the bulrush, and as nearly as 2000 B. C., 500 years before Moses led the children of Israel out of bondage, a material called papyrus was made from it.

The papyrus was a tall, smooth-stemmed reed of triangular form and grew to a height of ten or fifteen feet; it terminated in a tufted plume of leaves and flowers. The Egyptians found many uses for this reed. The soft, cellular substance in the interior of the stem was a common article of food, both cooked and in its natural state. It was also employed for the making of mats, sail cloths, cordage and wearing apparel. In Abyssinia, boats were made by weaving the stems closely together and covering them with a sort of resinous matter. Judging from sculptures of the fourth dynasty, the Egyptians made a similar use of the papyrus. It will be remembered that Isaiah mentioned "vessels of bulrushes upon the waters."

Only the inner fibers of the plant were used in making papyrus. After being separated with a pointed instrument, the fibers were laid side by side on a smooth surface, crossed at right angles with others, and then dampened. After being subjected to pressure for several hours, the resultant sheets were rubbed with a piece of ivory, smooth stone or shell and then allowed to

WHERE WAS THE GARDEN OF EDEN?

BY THEOPHILE COLVILLE.

"Nothing is so firmly believed as that which a man knoweth."—[Montaigne.

WHERE was the Garden of Eden located? This is not asked as a conundrum albeit it is somewhat of a riddle. But the question is of the greatest interest at present, inasmuch as the Holy Places of Palestine are being wrested one by one from the power of the Osmanli, and the exact location of the Adamic Paradise is sought to be determined by savants under the protecting aegis of the British legions. This is, of course, on the presumption that the Garden of Eden was located somewhere within the area of operation by the British army.

But it would be safe to say that the views regarding the location of Eden are as numerous as the scholars who have investigated the problem—for problem it is. Biblical writers of the story of Eden have attempted to convey a definite and exact idea of its location, and while earlier attempts have, in the light of modern research, been abandoned, other views branded as "eccentric" which would find the biblical paradise in Atlantis, Lemuria and the North Pole have also been discarded when not altogether ignored, inasmuch as the original inquiry puzzling enough in itself became involved in an inextricable confusion when considered in connection with other problems involved in these debatable regions.

In Genesis ii:8-14 the story of Eden is told in such way as to demand—when read literally—fulfillment geographically, and this so far has been a veritable pons asinorum for the biblical geographer. One suggestion has been that the garden of our first parents was in the Far East. The River Pison was identified with the Indus or Ganges Gihon with the Nile. This theory has been given in varying forms, and generally can be accepted as placing Eden in the beautiful land of nowhere, for by no possibility can the Nile and the Indus or Ganges have been derived "from one head."

Some scholarly adherents of this view look on the account in Genesis as based on ignorance of geographical facts, or as wholly ideal. Others again place the site in Southern Babylon, the three rivers, Pison, Gihon and Hiddekel, being identified with three "wadies" in Northern Arabia. But these are dry valleys and not rivers, and in other respects not easily reconciled with the statements in Genesis.

Within the last few years a leading continental scholar advocated the theory that Eden was in heaven and the rivers are represented by the Milky Way and its four arms, and quite a number of scholars have supported this view. This is an esoteric mode of viewing the matter, and upon this theory the earthly Eden would be but the reflection in matter of the heavenly type, and so may have been located in several places by different people.

Is the Garden of Eden Inhabited Only by Women?

THE Talmudists and Canalists agree, too, that there are two Gardens of Eden; one the terrestial, of abundant fertility and luxuriant vegetation; the other celestial, the habitation of righteous immortal souls. In the Talmud the interior of Africa is pointed out as the location of Eden, and no less a person than Alexander the Great is supposed to have found the entrance of "Gan-Eden" in those regions inhabited and governed exclusively by women.

From what has been stated it may rightfully be inferred that the Garden of Eden—and the dramatic story there enacted—has been and is being explained in many different ways, and it is an old esoteric saying that the key has to be turned in the lock seven times before the full and complete knowledge is gained of any of the great mysteries of life. Remembering this, there is a newer school of thinkers who, in examining the various theories put forward, recognize germs of truth in all of them.

These synthesists—to so term them—aver that the Garden of Eden as a locality is a myth and yet is no myth at all. This paradoxical statement depends upon the standpoint of vision. If by myth is understood a story handed down from olden days without any basis of fact, then the story of Eden is no myth; but if by a myth is understood a story garbed in allegorical form, containing wholly or in part statements of actual fact, then this particular story may be accepted as a myth.

But really the Garden of Eden is one of the landmarks of history which occasionally disclose to the student that the Bible is not all mere allegory. Eden, or the Hebrew "Gan-Eden," meaning the Park or Garden of Eden, is an archaic name of the country watered by the Euphrates and its many branches from Asia and Armenia to the Erythraian Sea. In the Chaldean Book of Numbers its location is said to be stated, and in the Rosicrucian MSS left by a great occultist of the eighteenth century it is said to have been fully described. In the Assyrian Tablets it is rendered Gan-duniyas—averred to have been a name for Babylonia.

But while all of that is true, there are some facts set out in the Genesis account that do not conform to any description of mere "place" or "Garden" as generally understood. Indeed as a "place"—an exact locality—it is safe to say that it is lost, but the four rivers cannot have been lost. And, furthermore, we are told that after Adam was expelled from the Garden cherubims were placed at the entrance with a flaming sword, so that the Tree of Life could not be reached. This allegorical statement must express some facts that apply to every son of Adam now, as it did to our first father then, so argue these modern investigators.

"A river went out of Eden to water the garden, and from thence it was parted and became into four heads," so runs the story; and yet it is unusual for rivers to part in this way for the main stream receives accessions that increase the flow until at the mouth a mighty river has been developed. The River Pison receives no mention save this once in the Bible. The River Gihon we have some little but important information about, for Moses tells us (Chron. xxxii:30) that King Hesekiah turned the channel of this river so that it ran by the City of David. The River Hiddekel is stated to be in Assyria, but there is no further mention of it. The River Euprrates is still on the maps, and by following it along one onght to strike the River Pison, from which it "divided." But from mouth to source the Euphrates does not divide, but, on the other hand, other streams flow into it just as rivers ordinarily do and increase its stream.

The same obscurity—viewing the story exteriorily—envelops the lands watered by these rivers. The River Pison "encompasseth the whole land of Havilah," a district in the Red Sea, but it is not an island, and as one part rests on the Red Sea, it could not "be encompassed." Then, too, the River Gihon "encompasseth the whole land of Ethiopia," despite the fact that Ethiopia is a very large country and of old extended even beyond the boundaries accorded it in modern times. That river then must have been about 3000 miles long. Such a river could not sink out of sight; and even if it did, it would live in history—in tradition. And the river it had for its source must have been still larger. But Ethiopia is in Africa, is without any rivers, although there are plenty of mountains. Recrossing the Red Sea the search is made for the land watered by the River Hiddekel, but again only disappointment awaits. There is one other mention of this river in scripture in Daniel x:4:

"And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel:"

These words are preliminary to a description of a remarkable vision had by the prophet, but no light is thrown upon the exact whereabouts of the river.

Nevertheless, in broad outline these form the Garden of Eden, a word meaning "voluptuousness" or "pleasure and delight;" and, bearing in mind the descriptions given above as briefly outlined from the Genesis account, a calm examination in the light of scientific knowledge illumines the whole story and the various discrepancies and apparent contradictions disappear.

It was Plato that affirmed that the immortal principle of the soul was originally with the Deity, and that the body was made for its vehicle; but that there was also a soul of a mortal nature, subject to the affections of desire, suffering, temerity and fear, anger hard to be appeased, and hope. These two psychic natures are kept distinct by being assigned to different parts of the physical structure, the inferior soul to the body and the nobler soul or intellect to the head, which he declared to be "man's most divine organ and the ruler of our entire composition."

Does Man Contain Within Himself the Mystery of the Garden?

THEN, too, in I Cor. iii:9 can be found the spiritual meaning of the Edenic Garden, where it is said that man is "God's tilled land" or "field," and so if we look within man we will be applying one key to the lock and by turning it open out the first—the physiologic mystery of being. But this must be done briefly, leaving out the details whilh anyone may fill in by reading carefully the description in Genesis and applying ordinary intelligence to the outline here given. First, as to the meaning of the words—the names applied to the rivers and lands; for in the old Hebrew it is claimed that every letter, much less a word, had a subtle significance. The rivers, then, are as follows:

Pison means "changing" and "extension of the mouth."

Gihon, "the Valley of Grace," or, as an alternative, "breaking forth as from a fountain or from the womb."

Diddekel, a sharp current or stream.

Euphrates, that which makes fruitful.

The names of the countries with their meanings are:

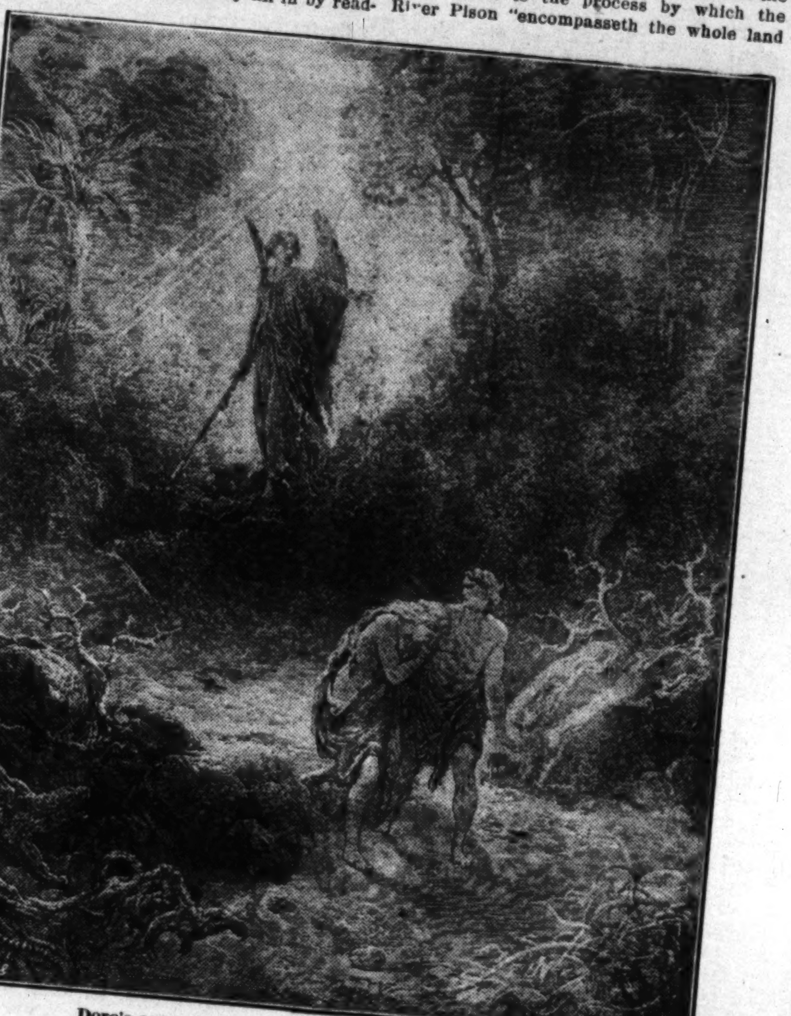
Navilah, suffers pain and bringeth forth.

Ethiopia, blackness, darkness, heat.

Assyria, the country of Ashur, and Ashur means "the land where people are happy."

The first river mentioned is the symbol of the circulatory system—the river of blood. Is not the body watered and fed by a stream that is an "extension of the mouth,' and that changes constantly as it encircles the system. All that supports the body enters by the mouth, and by the river that is an extension of the mouth, runs to the stomach and "from thence it was parted and became into four heads." From the stomach or rather, perhaps, from the small intestines, where the separating process in the chyle, which is the digested contents of the stomach, begins this River Pison, which has "four heads," giving off three branches while the main current continues on its course to compass the whole land of Havilah.

The Pison empties itself into the heart and then into the lungs, where it is decarbonized and oxygenized and returned to the heart to be distributed over the entire system by the arterial circulation. In its course to the extremities it gives to the various parts through which it passes their necessary supplies. This constant giving off changes the character of the current until the circumference of the body is reached. From thence it is returned to the heart through the venous circulation, gathering up the worn-out matter to expel it from the body. This is the process by which the River Pison "encompasseth the whole land of Havilah, which is the land where there is gold."



Dore's conception of the expulsion from the Garden.

Without detailing the meanderings of the other rivers and taking precise notice of the lands watered by them, it may be briefly stated—and a close examination as in the case of the first river will reveal the full force of the symbolism employed—that the second river, "the Gihon, the same that encompasseth the whole land of Ethiopia," is the excretory system; the Hiddekel "that is it that goeth toward the east of Assyria," the urinary system; and the fourth and last, the Euphrates—the river that renders the garden fruitful; that makes it yield its fruit, and that flows through the reproductive system.

We are told (Gen. ii:9) that in the "midst" of the Garden was the Tree of Life and the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. This symbolic tree is—as is most of the symbolism employed—common to all the great religions of the world. There is the Ashattha tree, the Yggdrasil, the Gogard, the Sampun, the Hellenic, the Sephirothic, the Edenic and the Ash, and whether it be the Pippala, the Hoama fruit or the more prosaic apple, the meaning is always the same. This tree has its roots above, for downwards "its roots are stretched, constraining to action in the world of men. Here neither its form is comprehended, nor its end, nor beginning, nor its support." It is the spinal column, the backbone of the man. Its evolution appears to be in strict analogy to that of the body. The medulla oblongata or, more properly, the olivary ganglion, is the beginning of the whole, and exhibits in [illegible] tree in embryo. In one direction it sends forth rudimentary cells which become the spinal column and nerves, and in the other the fibrous projections which in due time change to the group of ganglia denominated by some physiologists the "common sensorium." The five organs of sense are outgrowths or, one might say, the antennae of these ganglia; they proceed from the medulla, and the optic thalami constitute their common register.

It will thus be noted that in this garden there was a twofold division. The ganglial or sympathetic system belongs to the interior of the body, directing and sustaining the vital functions of nutrition, respiration, the circulation of the blood and all the involuntary activities carried on in the garden. The solar ganglion at the epigastrium is the center of the structure, the first in the order of evolution in embryonic life. It is placed in the region at which the impulsive or passionate nature comes in contact with the sensuous and appetitive propensity; while the seat of the cerebro-spinal organism is in the head. The organic or ganglial system is developed in all the lower animal races and seems to be possessed by them in common with mankind. Instinct is unequivocally its function. This is manifested by the human infant in common with the inferior animals.

A Mistake to Consider Man Apart from the Garden.

HAVING prepared this garden, we learn that God "took the man and put him into the Garden of Eden to dress it and keep it (Gen. ii:15.) An age-long mistake made by western humanity may here be detected beyond peradventure, viz., that the man is clearly distinguished from the garden, whereas man has been prone to identify himself with his body. His congery of sense pleasures, experiences, passions and emotions have—in his idea—combined to make up the genus homo. But in this Edenic allegory we learn (Gen. i:17) that "God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He 'him,'" or, in other words, in the first instance man was created amdrogynous, a fact that science is beginning to glimpse. Later we learn that, at the separation of the sexes, "unto Adam also and to his wife did the Lord God make coats of skin, and clothed them." (Gen. iii:21.)

In imagination we can picture the man as he appeared when the Lord-God (or the law, for the compound term is the alternative for the manifestation of Deity in the form of law) took and placed him in the garden that by evolutionary process had slowly been developed through the days of ages. An animalized creature guided mere- [illegible] capacity, but into this form was given a flash of the Divine Mind and there and then was born an individuality with potentialities of self-conquest marvelously strange, strangely beautiful, in the scheme of Deity to make of this twofold creature an inheritor of the fullness of the Divine nature. Within was Manas, the mind, the sanscrit word from which our term "man" is derived; and what the term may mean in the fullness cannot be detailed here. from the powers of the earth. The one linked him with the heaven above, the other given that he might be connected with and operative in the world below. In "dressing and keeping it" he was to fulfill his destiny, and physiologically was to develop a cerebro-spinal system through which and by which he would run the gamut of savage man, human man, Intellectual man, altruistic man, spiritual man and lastly Divine man.

"Desire" is the Serpent That Brought About Destruction.

BUT the ray of divinity gleamed dimly in the animalized form, and desire, the insatiable outstretching to possess, was born of the operation of the lower—the objective mind in its craving to know. This was the serpent that tempted, and the surrender to lustful desire was what brought enmity between the seed of the woman and the serpent's seed For the seed of woman, or lust, "bruised the head" of the seed of the "fruit of wisdom and knowledge" by turning the holy mystery of procreation into mere animal gratification; hence the law of causation "bruised the heel" of the last great race by changing physiologically, morally and mentally the whole nature of that race of mankind. From being the superbly healthy king of the animal creation man today is a helpless, scrofulous being, and has become the wealthiest heir on the earth to constitutional and hereditary diseases; the most consciously and intelligently bestial of all animals. The god within is led in chains. Man rejoices in a lie; he continues to think he is the garden (the body) and revels in all the sensations arising from the innumerable complexes of his bodily (animal) senses.

Thus was the fruit from the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil eaten, and there are two curious things in this connection worthy of note. First, that it was not on account of yielding to the procreative impulse that the "curse" came upon these first parents, for not until after they had been expelled from the garden did Eve bear a child (Gen. iv:1.) As indicated above, it was for distorting a natural function. But, secondly, though the exact location of the Tree of Life is not indicated, it must have been also in the "midst of the [illegible] the "water of life," so the retention of that element must be a partaking of the Tree of Life, in regard to the physical organism.

Science helps us here by declaring that "the sexual cells of the human body are immortal, like the protozoa." The ova and spermatozoa are immortal. Our bodies therefore contain immortal elements. "The theory of the immortality of unicellular organisms is now generally accepted." Indeed there are animals of considerable complexity composed of many organs and very many cells to which natural death in the animal world is rare and in man "it is probably a possibility rather than an actual occurrence." ("Nature of Man," by Elie Metchnikoff, pp. 268-70.)

Before the "Fall" the Body Shielded the Inner Nature.

THAT the garden of the physical body was made from the dust of the earth, in order that the Manas, or mind, or man—the mere earthly expression of the angelic soul and body derived from heaven—might "dress it and keep it;" or, in other words, learn its possibilities by understanding its relation to others of its kind, and its place in the Cosmos. Before the "fall" this gross covering sheltered the inner nature from acquaintance with the properties of our corrupt earth. His love and obedience surrounded him with a paradise of his own. He could not feel the fierceness of fire, the rigor of cold; he was inaccessible to want or pain. But with the "fall" into generation, into matter, clearly indicated by being given the "coats of skin" and also by the literal Hebrew rendering of Gen. vi:3: "My spirit shall not always strive in Adam, for in their going astray 'he' is flesh," thus stamping the fall from grace as a yielding to the animal impulse. So then it would seem that the expulsion from the garden was tantamount to a cutting-off of Adam from the Tree of Life until he had learned the lessons appointed to be learned in the outer world of forms, and under the "curse." Like many other words, however, we ascribe a very modern meaning to a word having an archaic meaning. The word "curse" means merely the announcement of the operation of the law of cause and effect; a foretelling of what will be because, under the law, it must be in the natural evolution of things.

Physical man in his organism may be divided into the same zones of arctic, temperate, torrid, etc., as the physical earth. In this, as in much else, he is the microcosm of the macrocosm. So the inner—the heavenly manas—was expelled from his high estate and his consciousness compelled to center in the torrid zone of the body. Here it is where infantile nature is most [illegible] doomed to begin his upward climb to recover his inheritance and work out his divine self-created destiny. And to keep him from reaching upward and eating of the Tree of Life cherubims with a fiery sword guarded the way thereto. In Hebrew the word "cherubim" means "fullness of knowledge" (Cruden's Concordance) and the "fiery sword" is the "serpent fire" or, as sometimes known as the "Kundalini," that lies coiled in a triple fold in the region of the navel, and which lies watchful but quiescent so long as "personal" man leads the ordinary life and fulfills the dictum to "increase and multiply and replenish the earth." But when man awakes to the fact that he can take his evolution into his own hands; when he realizes that here as elsewhere in nature to know the law is to utilize it as his best friend, and he begins to order his life on different lines than heretofore, then the serpent fire begins to show signs of stirring. But this pertains altogether to another story. In necessarily bare and scanty outline the allegory of the Garden of Eden, with its occult symbolism, has been portrayed with sufficient clarity for anyone to fill in the details. It is the story of "Paradise Lost" as told in Genesis— the Book of Beginnings. The sequel, the story of "Paradise Regained," is told under the same allegorical guise in the Revelations—the Book of Endings, of final consummations, illumined by the teaching of the great Master of the West. For He, with His sublime teaching, merely couched in phraseology capable of being understood by the people of His time and place, the doctrine the nold as the everlasting hills. And so was it understood by the early fathers, and we may all know of the definition of that Latin father whose teachings are accepted by the Protestant churches and whose works are an obligatory study for candidates for orders. Augustine says: "That which is called the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist from the planting of the human race until Christ came in the flesh; at which time the true religion, which already subsisted, began to be called Christian."

And, realizing this, may not anyone who has caught a fleeting glimpse of the truth take courage in the eternal thought uttered by our American poet:

"The rise of man is endless; be in hope;
All stars are gathered in his horoscope.
The brute-man of the planet, he will pass,
Blown out like vapors on a glass;
And from this quaking pulp of life will rise
The superman, child of the higher skies—
Immortal, he will break the ancient bars,
Laugh, and reach out his hands among the stars."

Whom the Gods Hate.

ploring arms. He had been logically indignant, perhaps a bit righteous about it. "What the 'ell! Paid muh way as I went along, didn't I? Swell feeds an' a bit o' change. An' how do I know it's mine? Youh're a good kid, Liz, but don't come no strangle holts on muh. I ain't that kind, see? Tell it to some simp what ain't wise to youh dames that slips on the fly paper."

Between those two girls, each young in years, both old in sorrow—for it is not time that ages—there mingled quick-flung conflicting words. One spoke of "off the end of a wharf;" the other of life's untraveled road that stretched before; of no money and shame and sickness, of grit and the will to fight; of "a squalling brat nobody wants"—and Clarice swiftly envisioned the return to Wilbur with a babe, claiming it for his own, though it was not even hers, whose tiny hands would tear away the strings fastened at one end to the violin keys and at the other to his heart.

"Oh, I would never, never, never tell anybody!" Elizabeth sobbed hopefully, flinging her arms about Clarice's neck and feeling braver and less guilty.

That night Clarice wrote a line to Wilbur, saying that it was months yet, but if all went well she and the baby would come back to him, but "at present I am unfindable, so don't try."

At the Maternity Hospital Elizabeth gave the name of Mrs. Wilder, and the lusty little man-child went into the birth register as Wilbur.

In due time Clarice and the precious little miniature in God's image went south, and a telegram went before, so that Wilbur was at the station with a taxi, though his dress suit was dawned; and he walked about on air and in his eyes was a proud, impatient gleam.

The guard smiled broadly as he took the cigar with Wilbur's explanation and let him dash forward to lift from the black porter's arms the bassinet; and he must needs peek within at once and, having done so, swore that it was the very beautifulest baby in the world. And all the way riding home, and after they got there, and for days upon days while Wilbur beamed in the fetich of the father, boiled bottles and solicitously dipped the thermometer into the milk, Clarice, committed to deception, swore the firm oath of all mothers, thereby convincing him that the babe's nose, chin, forehead, mouth and even the shape of the nebulous dark-gray eyes were replicas of his own.

Happy days, those. The fiddle grew dusty in its open case. Clarice smiled triumphantly as she went singing about the house, teasing and loving him, slapping his face gently, and ruffling his hair when he anxiously insisted that she must keep off her feet, rest and take care of herself, for if she overdid it would mean complications and a return to the hospital. So she would pretend to be languid and tired when she wanted to dance on the housetop and cry her joy to the moon. Wilbur paced about the floor with the babe in his arms, carried it over to the neighbors and agreed with them when they said that it looked like him. He told his pupils about it and, with tones full of wonder, spoke of how remarkable that the resemblance to himself should be so pronounced.

And in the evenings he and Clarice sat on the porch and, as he drew on his murmuring pipe, he said with quiet faith that Wilbur, Jr., should be a great musician, for he would be heir to the dreams of his father, the flaming temperament of his mother, and from toddling days should fondle the fiddle instinctively as a bird takes to the swaying bough. Clarice at such times would be silent, gently press his hand and wistfully stare into the night with saddened eyes, praying the unanswerable prayer for what might have been.

Months flashed by. The baby waxed fat, smiled, laughed, cooed, waved and kicked, cried healthfully; but at every sneeze and howl set Wilbur jumping with alarm. And the fearful guilt that nestled in Clarice's heart wove itself a cocoon of silken delusions and went to sleep.

The baby grew and the nebulous eyes became dark and lustrously brown. And one evening as Wilbur, fresh from the street, bent over the crib to claim his homecoming kiss from the cheek, he suddenly paused and was turned to a curved statue as he met those steady, calm, deep, dark eyes wherein seemed half-revealed the unvoiceable wisdom brought from another world. A great sob choked in his throat and he turned away with his hand pressed tightly there to hold it down.

Then for an angry moment he stood poised like a murderer lost to reason and about to strike as his face turned toward the kitchen door, and he hunched himself forward, listening to an "I Pagliacci" aria tossed lightly from Clarice's lips as she clattered among the supper dishes.

But swelling sighs heaved within him. Of a sudden his body became clammy, moistened with cold sweat, and he went limp against the edge of the table as he muttered weakly, imploringly, over and over the name of God.

Toward the crib he looked again and into the wide, brown, unwinking eyes that stared as though understandingly. He jerked his face away and knew that he must be out of the house quickly, for he could not again look into those eyes, nor could he again stand breast to breast with Clarice with the knowledge of her sin written on his face.

He grabbed a pen and across a blank score sheet wrote fiercely:

"Clarice, I ought to kill you. Right now I could. But I am going. You couldn't lie out of it—it is biologically impossible. Remember—my father was a doctor. We are both blue-eyed. This baby—look at his eyes. In such a case brown eyes are recognized as evidence in any divorce court. There is nothing left in life for me, but you—you still have the father of this child.'

He laid the paper with its sprawling, thickly-inked message on the blanket of the crib and noiselessly went out of the door and into the night.

Clarice found it there when she came merrily in, her hands dripping flour from the noodle dough and her lips pursed for the kiss.

As the paper crumpled in her trembling hands she gave one choking, anguished cry like that of the stricken Nedda whose aria she had hummed; then she was strangely silent while swiftly her eyes searched the room.

Then she laughed, laughed, mingling irony with despair, laughed sardonically, hopelessly as one who mocks the gods that have undone her. He had not forgotten his violin.
